Skip Ewing does it Naturally on his new album for different label

Skip Ewing--Naturally

Writing, producing and performing is something which comes natural for Skip Ewing. Naturally is his debut album for the Capitol Nashville label, but Skip is far from a newcomer to the business, having had three successful albums on the MCA label before coming to Capitol.

After four albums, I would venture to say that Skip Ewing has to be one of the most prolific songwriters in Nashville. Like his previous albums, Naturally has another 10 songs penned by Ewing. They are songs which are intelligent and expertly-crafted in lyrics, flowing melodies and tight, clean production. Although the material is country, there's an element of James Taylor or Dan Fogelberg to the project.

"Yodelin' Blues" kicks in first — it's a tune with expert blues and rock, and proves that Ewing can hold his own with the best of yesteryear's yodeling cowboys. Following that up-tempo number is the title cut, a bluesy piano bar-style number, co-written by Ewing and Rick Bowles. Bowles worked with Ewing on to additional songs, the vocally building "What I Wouldn't Give" and swinging up-tempo "No Reason At All."

Ewing's smooth power vocals especially shine on his ballads: he is able to take hold of a lyric, twist and bend the notes to extract every last drop of emotion. Two plaintive compositions with absorbing lyrics were so-written with Red Lane, "I Get The Picture" and "I Wish I Was Somebody Else." Those two songs, along with Ewing's "I Love Your Love In My Life" establish the artist as a world-class balladeer, and a heart-tugging song stylist. He picks up the tempo again on a Ewing/Lane tune that combines drive and mounting urgency, "One Step Out Of Time."

Each song seems to move intrinsically from the one before it — the sequencing on the project is superb. Ewing's first album Coast Of Colorado, released in the mid-80's, produced five hit singles. The two in-between fared as well, and naturally, this one will do even better!

Until next week, keep whistling.

VIDEO REVIEW

Paris Trout

Dennis Hopper is a fine actor of long standing. His work over the years has included such classic films as Rebel Without A Cause, Easy Rider, and Apocalypse Now. More recently, he appeared in David Lynch's controversial Blue Velvet.

Hopper adds to his impressive resume with Paris Trout. He plays the title character in an intense and sometimes shocking drama, about bigotry, insanity and injustice in the American South of 1949.

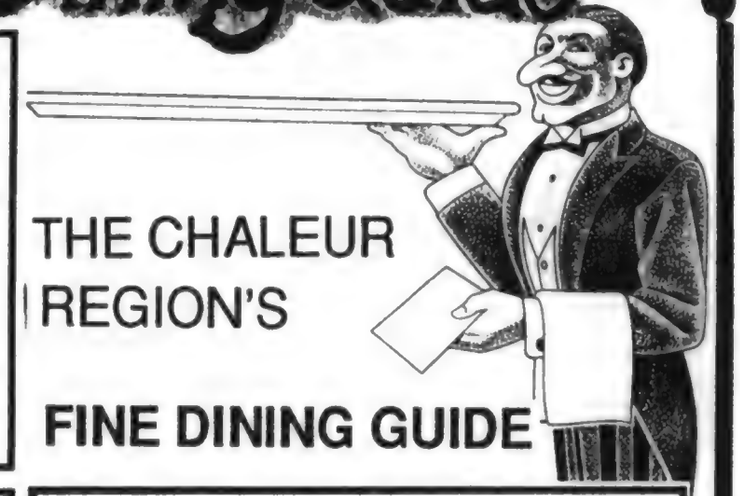
Trout cheats a black man in a car sale, which leads to murder and even further tragedy, involving a lawyer (Ed Harris) and Trout's wife (Barbara Hershey).

The movie is evenly-paced, and the performances are good all around, particularly Hershey. However, it is Hopper who gives the movie its intensity, via his portrayal of a man blinded to all but his own concept of right and wrong.

A disturbing movie that is recommended viewing, but not for those who like an uplifting tale.

Narrow Margin

The old "trapped-on-a-train" story. Gene Hackman (Mississippi Burning) is an FBI agent (again), trying to protect witness Anne Archer (the wife in Fatal Attraction). Archer saw her date get blown away, and the killer is determined she'll never testify against him in court.



This was not a big hit in theatres, and it's easy to understand why. The cat and mouse plot is too familiar and routinely handled to generate much excitement. Hackman is clearly above such tripe, but he does his best to inject a little life into the otherwise dull proceedings.

Quite forgettable.

Singer-songwriter Gallant has strong feel for Maritime roots

Lennie Gallant--Believing In Better

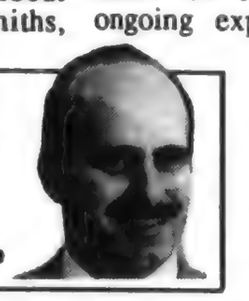
No matter where you go, singer-songwriters are the proverbial dime a dozen. This holds true not only in the larger urban centres, but in the Atlantic provices as well. However, since we're a small market, we hear little about Maritime tunesmiths, except by word of mouth (few — if any — writers from Rolling Stone or Music Express venture this way, looking for the next Springsteen or the new Dylan).

Not that it matters: we have our secret musical treasures, and Lennie Gallant is one of them. Of course, his ongoing exposure on CBC Radio could spread the message — that this singer-songwriter from Prince Edward Island has a style reminiscent of early Lightfoot, and with the right producer could become a recognized talent, on Canada's pop landscape.

KNOWING

Believi.. In Better is an unflinching look at life on the East Coast, frameworked in a country/folk/rock setting. Gallant has a knowing eye for the world around him, and an emotional viewpoint. Who among us does not relate to this verse from "Man of Steel": "He got the news this morning/It came without warning/ They're gonna shut the whole thing down/ Seven hundred men out of work/Another paper promise gone down."

Similar observations about economic hard times are made in the title track, and in "Crumbling Foundations." In "The Hope For Next Year," Gallant sings about the farmers in the fields, "With another season ended/ October comin' down/ machinery to be mended/Somewhere money must be found." The same song also talks about looking for a job in the city, when "They've got a hundred applications/And they won't take anymore."



IDENTIFICATION

Gallant cares deeply about the Maritime lifestyle, and it is a tribute to his songwriting that this sense of identification shines through, without falling prey to undue sentiment or pathos.

It helps that he's got a first-rate band behind him. The line-up includes Brian Bourne on bass (remember Fredericton's Redeye?), but it is Janet Munson's violin that highlights the material, along with Gallant's own acoustic guitar.

Recommended for the serious listener.

Editor's Note: Believing In Better was recorded independently, on the Revenant Records label, and distributed by Atlantica Music. For information on buying a copy, contact Campbell Webster, 209 Euston St., Charlottetown, PEI C1A 1W9. Tel: (902) 892-9888.

Female singers are favored here

In the United States, it's men. In Canada, it's woman.

When the nominees for the 25th annual Country Music Association awards in the U.S. were unveiled last week, names such as Vince, Alan and Garth kept cropping up again and again.

In Canada, it is names such as Michelle, Joan and Anne. There are more female than male nominees in the major categories for the 1991 Canadian Country Music Awards.

Vince Gill, Alan Jackson and Garth Brooks head the nominees for the 12 U.S. awards, which will be presented Oct.2. Gill and Jackson have six nominations apiece, while Brooks has five. Each is nominated for best single, best album and male vocalist of the year.

Including entries in various "industry" categories, Michelle Wright — and musicians, video producers and others associated with her — received 14 Canadian nominations, the most in the country. Prairie Oyster received 13. The major awards will be presented Sept. 15.

Three of the five nominees for Canadian single of the year are women, while all but one of the five nominees for Canadian album of the year are female.

Nominees for top single include Wright, Joan Kennedy and Anne Murray, as well as George Fox and Prairie Oyster.

The nominees for top album are Wright, Kennedy, Murray, Patricia Conroy and Fox.

And, in spite of the fact that four-time winner K.D. Lang, who took a sabbatical this year, is not among the nominees for Entertainer of the Year, three of the five nominees are women: Wright, Murray and Rita MacNeil. The others are Fox and Prairie Oyster (a six-person band: five men and one woman.)

Wright, Fox and Prairie Oyster should each walk away from the Canadian country music extravaganza with a guitar case two full of awards.

COMEDIAN

A rising Canadian comedian is featured on CBC-TV in early September.

Sandra Shamas, a Sudbury native who has built a reputation throughout Ontario for side-splitting performances, offers her brand of comedy on Adrienne Clarkson Presents, Sept.3 at 8 p.m.

The program, Sandra Shamas: Spitting Nickels, includes part of her successful one-woman show, My Boyfriend's Back And There's Gonna Be Laundry.

Producer Alan Burke was already a big Shamas fan before filming began.

"The first time I saw Sandrea was in the Bathurst Street Theare in Toronto," he said. "It was the hottest night of the year. There was no air-conditioning, and the place was packe. Yet, despite the heat and discomfort, I don't think I ever laughed so much in my life."

LIFE AND DEATH

An evocative movie about the life — and death — of a child with cystic fibrosis will be rebroadcast on CBC-TV.

Alex: The Life Of A Child chronicles the brief life of a fiesty little girl, Alexandra Deford, and the impact her struggle for survival had on the family.

First aired in 1986, the movie is being rebroadcast Sept.5 at 8 p.m.

All is just about ready for the Third Annual Bay Breakfast, to be held Friday morning.

Investigation is continuing into St. Anne plane crash

The Transportation Safety Board of Canada hopes to determine why the pilot of a light aircraft attempted a manoeuvre that downed the plane.

"The investigation is continuing as to why a downwind landing was attempted," said regional manager David Owen, in a telephone interview from his Moncton office.

Mr. Owen said the Beechcraft Sundowner crashed about 2,000 feet from the runway at the Bathurst Regional Airport Friday at about 11:10 a.m.

Mr. Owen said the plane crashed at the third landing attempt.

The occupants, Roger Blais, 60, and his wife, Therese, 62, of Gatineau, Que., reportedly sustained only minor injuries in the mishap.

Normally, landings are made into the wind. This cuts ground speed and shortens the landing distance.

The investigation, the results of which will not be known for at least a week, will determine why that procedure was not followed.

"Obviously, we have some ideas; but we're not prepared to speculate at this point in time," Mr. Owen said.

The Transportation Safety Board was formerly known as the Aviation Safety Board of Canada. The name change was implemented to reflect the board's investigations into marine fatalities, as well as rail and pipeline mishaps.

Picket line is back up in front of Post Office

Postal delivery trucks were given a police escort through the striking postal workers' picket line on King Avenue Tuesday evening.

A handful of strikers, members of Local 12 of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers, attempted to block entry as the drivers of three delivery trucks tried to make their way into the Canada Post yard.

Local 12 president Bob Dunn said a Bathurst City Police Department officer escorted the trucks through. No further incidents ensued.

The postal workers were back on the picket line at 5 p.m. Tuesday, the day after the Canadian Union of Postal Workers rejected the Crown corporation's latest contract offer.

"It's an unfair settlement," CUPW president Bob Dunn said of the latest offer, adding the proposal, unveiled Sunday, offered virtually nothing new.

"It's the same basic offer," he said, adding wage increase offers have not changed, nor does the proposal address the union's request for the continuation of a 17 cent per hour Cost of Living Allowance (COLA).

The local Post Office workers went out on strike Aug. 29 at 6 a.m., and returned to work Saturday. Rotating strikes by the union began Aug. 23.

In a release from CUPW headquarters in Ottawa, national president Jean-Claude Parrot listed only four changes from Canada Post's previous offer.

One is the part-time retirement savings program, whereby contributions into Registered Retirement Savings Plans by part-time employees would be matched by Canada Post, up to 6.5 per cent of basic wages and vacation pay.

The second has to do with lump sum payments to superannuation; the third is an $800,000 contribution to a joint child care committee for the establishment of child care facilities and/or payment of subsidies; and the fourth is the skills development fund, to which Canada Post would contribute $3 million per year to a joint committee to develop proposals and programs concerning development and maintenance of job-related and other skills.

Mr. Parrot noted the offer represents "a few steps forward, and many steps backward."

He said the proposal does not reflect discussions which have taken place between negotiating teams. Nor does it address key issues in the dispute, which CUPW has outlined in a counter-proposal that was to be tabled Tuesday evening.

HIGHLIGHTS

The highlights of the counter-proposal include a four-year collective agreement to expire July 31, 1993; the re-institution of the 17 cent per hour COLA; fully retroactive wages and benefits, as opposed to lump sum payments; expansion of door-to-door delivery; and wage increases of 5.4 per cent effective Aug. 1, 1989, 4.2 per cent effective Aug. 1, 1990, 6.0 per cent effective Aug. 1, 1991, and 3.2 per cent effective Aug. 1, 1992. Currently, the workers average $14.41 an hour. The top wage is $26.29 an hour, while the lowest is $10.39.

In its previous proposal, issued Aug. 22, Canada Post offered the union an increase to $16.06 an hour, in addition to lump-sum payments up to $3,600 retroactive to July 31, when the union's previous contract expired.

Recreation Plan discussed

By MICHAEL J. BOURGUIGNON
Northern Light Staff

The city's Recreation Master Plan was accepted in principle by city council Tuesday, but won't necessarily implemented without changes.

The five-year plan, prepared by the Moncton consulting firm Tourec Inc., to set a recreation strategy for the city, makes a number of recommendations that some councillors found objectionable.

"It expands city organization when we should be cutting back and doing a bit of belt-tightening," councillor Gerry Doucet said, referring to recommendations that new positions be created with the city's Parks, Recreation and Tourism Department.

Mr. Doucet and other councillors said they would have difficulty accepting the proposal in its current form.

Deputy Mayor Bob Anderson was primarily concerned that one of the recommendations of the report was to conduct another study at the end of the five-year period. Councillors unanimously adopted his proposal to formally amend the motion of acceptance to ensure city council has final say before any recommendation can be implemented.

In response to a question from councillor Keith Loupelle, city manager Bob Bouchard told council the Parks, Recreation and Tourism Department may take about five to six weeks to study the proposal and recommend a plan of action.

Mr. Loupelle wanted assurance the major recommendations contained in the report, such as the expansion of the Parks, Recreation and Tourism Department itself, could be discussed by council before the next budget exercise in November.

"There's a fair amount of cost displayed in the report," Mr. Bouchard conceded, adding the report contains contentious issues that will require serious consideration from council.

The study itself cost $26,000, Parks, Recreation and Tourism director Marc Boudreau said. Of that, $10,000 was contributed by the province.

The report was drafted based on results of a study conducted by the consultant into existing services and facilities, as well as the city's needs in terms of tourism and recreation.

The study also relied partly on interviews with Bathurst residents as well as a survey of local high school students, in an attempt to more accurately assess the city's recreation needs.

Mystery shrouds violent deaths of Canobie livestock

By JIM COUTURE
Northern Light Staff

A mystery has evolved in Canobie, one which has cost the lives of seven calves and serious injury to two cows.

The macabre thing seperating these and similar farm animal deaths and injuries is that they were not perpetrated by a coyote, fox or bear.

The deeds were performed by one or more humans.

The incidents began at the start of the summer, when shotgun blasts seriously injured two of Gary Veneau's cows.

Then, during a six-week period, six calves no more than two months-old were found dead in Veneau's barn. All had been struck on the head with a heavy, blunt instrument, and all died of fractured skulls.

Another calf died the weekend before last under the same circumstances.

The incidents have caused a significant amount of distress to the Veneau family, and many questions remain unanswered.

"That's the thing about this, we're the only ones down here that it's happened to," said Mr. Veneau, adding he doesn't have the slightest idea who did it.

The calves were all killed between 2 a.m. and 5 a.m., and were all left at the scene of the crime.

Another mystery surrounding the incident occurred Friday. A television crew, set on filming a story about the incident, was led to another farm about a half-mile away, where six of the carcasses were being kept.

"When we went over to show them, they were all gone. Someone had carted them away," he said.

"I find that kind of puzzling."

The nearest they've come to solving this mystery was when they spotted a shadow crossing their property late one night.

"That's the closest we've ever come to catching him," he said.

One of the saddest aspects of this story is the fact that six of the calves belonged to Mr. Veneau's 17 year-old-son, Andrew, who was raising them for pocket money.

Anyone with information about the aforementioned incidents is asked to contact the Bathurst detachment of the RCMP.

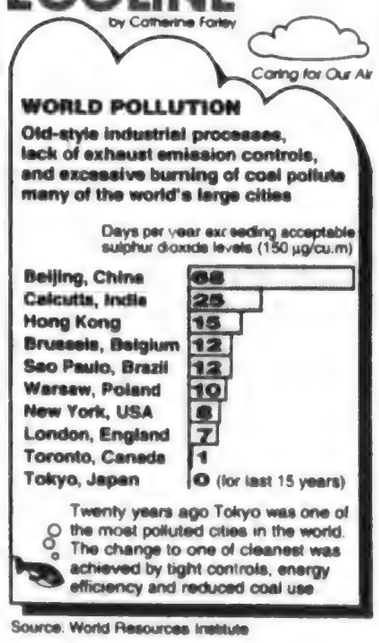
Info sought



Bathurst City Police are looking for information on an armed robbery in the city early Saturday morning.

Deputy Police Chief Bernie Allain said two men wearing masks entered Proprio gas bar and convenience store on St. Peter Avenue around 5:15 a.m. Saturday. They proceeded to hold the sole male employee at bay with a knife, while relieving the store of an undisclosed amount of cash.

One of the men is described as being about 5'1" in height and weighing approximately 180 pounds, while the other is about 5'6" and weighs about 140 pounds.

Both men were wearing blue jeans, and possibly left the scene in a vehicle.

Anyone with information regarding this incident is asked to contact the Bathurst City Police at 548-0420, or Crime Stoppers at 1-800-222-8477.

Federal workers likely to strike Thursday, says union spokesman

Federal workers at the Nicolas-Denys Building in Bathurst could go on strike tomorrow Thursday.

The workers, members of the Public Service Alliance of Canada, were in a legal strike position Tuesday, said union spokesman Julien Pitre.

Mr. Pitre, area strike coordinator for the PSAC, said a membership meeting is set for tonight Wednesday at Ecole Secondaire Nepisiguit, to decide what action to take. However, he indicated a strike will most likely be the outcome.

There are about 400 PSAC members in the Bathurst area, and some 155,000 members nationally. They are at odds with the federal government's decision to implement a federal wage freeze for 1991 (zero increase), and to limit yearly pay increases to three per cent for 1992 and 1993.

Negotiations began in February with the federal Treasury Board, and the two sides met with conciliation boards in Ottawa last month.

Mr. Pitre said the conciliation report put one group of federal employees (designated as Table 1) in a legal strike position last Friday, and another group (Table 4) in a legal strike position tomorrow.

He said the Treasury Board made no offers, even on non-monetary issues.

ON STRIKE

Local Canada Post employees on the picket line Aug. 29, as part of the nation-wide rotating strike system set up by the Canadian Union of Postal Workers. Local 12 shop steward Doug Bateman (right) pointed out union concerns printed on a placard worn by fellow striker Raymond Melanson. The workers were back on the job Saturday morning, but were recalled to the picket line, by CUPW headquarters in Ottawa, at 5 p.m Tuesday. See story at top of this page.

Interpretive dance performances proved a useful tool to a group of Canadians taking part in Estonia '91, a project geared toward spreading the gospel in Estonia. The project was deemed a success by Brian Creary and Mark LeBlanc, two of seven Bathurst people who were involved with Estonia '91. Among the performers were, from left, Shannon Murray, Christine LeBlanc and Angie Mazerolle. The other local people involved in the project were Fred Jennings and Colleen Theriault.

Being back in Canada requires adjustment after stay in Russia

Readjusting to the Western way of life has not been altogether easy for a group of Bathurst people just returned from the Soviet Union.

"Half of me is still there," said Brian Creary, one of seven members of the Bathurst Christian Fellowship Church sent to preach the gospel in Estonia. They were part of a national project called Estonia '91, which was mainly sponsored by the Apostolic Church of Pentecost.

Since their return last week, as common a practice as watching Soviet political developments on television news programs has taken on a deeper meaning for Mr. Creary and his friend, Mark LeBlanc.

"You watch (the news), and you think, 'I was just on that street, just the other day, with the crowd," Mr. Creary said in an interview with The Northern Light.

The month-long project gave them an opportunity to gain new insight into the lives of the Soviet people, which, for the most part, seemed dismal.

"There is a terrible hopelessness that hangs over the entire country," Mr. Creary noted.

The train ride from Moscow to the Estonian capital of Tallin provided the best example.

A portion of the train was entirely occupied by the Canadians on their way to preach in Tallin; another portion contained Russian passengers.

These passengers did not smile. They stared, somber, expressionless.

The train itself seemed a testimony to despair, dank and overheated, crowded and with a restroom that was "worse than you've ever seen."

There were some 70 passengers to a single rail car, and the air reaked of the diesel that fueled the engine.

Mr. LeBlanc eventually fashioned an air conditioner from a travel bag, placed outside the window with a hole punched through it to allow the passage of outside air.

It was the first evidence of what was to become a lesson in culture shock.

Next came the food.

DISHWATER

"The worst coffee I have ever seen in my life was in the airport in Moscow," Mr. Creary said.

"It looked like dishwater."

Once in Tallin, Mr. Creary grew accustomed to the "really strong" local coffee after learning that it was meant to fill only half a cup, with an equal portion of plain boiled water added to soften the taste.

Mr. LeBlanc switched to tea.

A typical breakfast consisted of boiled eggs and rye or white bread, usually with grated cheese, and no butter.

Lunch usually meant soup, with sour cream added to whatever was served.

Dinner, meanwhile, called for a more lavish meal that included meat.

"But we never knew what kind of meat it was," Mr. LeBlanc said.

"We called it mystery meat."

No matter what the meal, cucumbers and tomatoes were part of the package. It could have been any other food, but those two vegetables happened to be in season.

"If it's in season, you have to eat it," Mr. LeBlanc noted, exemplifying a slice of Soviet reasoning no one bothered to question.

Also served was a warm, brownish substance the Soviets called apple juice. The Canadians were reluctant to try it, eventually taking the Western way out by ordering ice to go along with it. The ice was also brown.

They eventually found a pizzeria, where they could buy a sizable pizza for the equivalent of 40 cents.

The crust was about a quarter of an inch thick, and was topped with everything from beets to dill pickles and chicken.

Excited to discover the existence of locally obtainable American soft drinks, the group soon sparked a shortage in the school dorm in which they were staying, Mr. LeBlanc said.

"Within three days, we cleaned them out."

BETTER IN HOMES

Ironically, culinary prospects improved greatly when members of the group were invited to share meals in Soviet households. It may have been the one food-related experience that overshadowed all others.

"They would get out the best food they could get and apologize for it," Mr. Creary said.

"They would go completely out of their way to make you feel comfortable."

In doing so, they would not stop short of spending a week's salary on a meal for their Canadian visitors, giving them the last of their sugar rations, or serving up the only meat the family had seen in months.

Under a blue sky, on black soil, the Canadians truly discovered Estonia's pure heart.

BACK FROM THE USSR

Witnessing to street gangs, attempted coup all part of trip

By MICHAEL J. BOURGUIGNON
Northern Light Staff

"I called home and heard a lot more than I would have heard just relying on Soviet information."

Under a blue sky, on black soil, is an Estonian's pure heart.

Those words explain the symbolism of Estonia's blue, black and white striped national flag. While the black soil of Communism has been washed away by recent political events in the Soviet Union, a complete sense of freedom remains an elusive ideal for the Estonian people.

In one sense, many reached that ideal last month, thanks to a group of Canadian missionaries sent to the tiny republic to introduce the Estonian people to the gospel.

Seven members of the Bathurst Christian Fellowship Church were among 125 Canadians taking part in the month-long Estonia '91 project. It is difficult to calculate exactly how many Estonians became Christians in the month following the group's Aug. 5 arrival, but it doesn't matter.

"The numbers are not as important as the fact that the people (in Estonia) accepted Jesus Christ as their Lord and Savior," said Mark LeBlanc, who was part of the Bathurst contribution to the effort, along with his wife Christine, Brian Creary, Shannon Murray, Colleen Theriault, Angie Mazerolle and Fred Jennings.

The Estonian parliament served notice last year that it would seek independence from the Soviet Union, declaring itself fully independent following last month's ill-fated attempt by Communist hardliners to overthrow Soviet president Mikhail Gorbachev.

The Estonia '91 group found itself in the midst of the turmoil surrounding the coup, but the situation did little to hamper their efforts.

The worst part of it was the lack of information, Mr. Creary said in an interview with The Northern Light Monday.

"When you can't tell what's going on around you, it's a pretty scary situation," Mr. Creary said in an interview with The Northern Light Monday.

From their vantage point, in a bible school dormitory where the group was staying in the capital city of Tallin, virtually no evidence of the coup could be seen.

The tanks rolled into Tallin, soldiers parachuted to the ground, airports were closed, a battleship appeared in the harbor, and the Estonian parliament fortified its headquarters with sand, rocks, and artillery in the event of an attack.

"It never came to that, but they were prepared," Mr. Creary said.

But the commotion was short-lived, and it came and went almost unnoticed by the Canadians, who quickly discovered the dubious merits of Soviet communications.

"I called home and heard a lot more than I would have heard just relying on Soviet information," Mr. Creary said.

But aside from briefly raising questions of whether to stay or go — and how to go about leaving — the resulting confusion was not to get in the way of the Canadians' intended mission.

"The leadership of the group realized that if the project was really ordained by God, it was necessary for us to stay," said Mr. Creary. And stay they did.

The first week of their stay in Tallin was taken up by language training sessions, although the group relied heavily on translators.

Their first official outing was to a bible school graduation.

"They gave us an incredible reception," Mr. Creary said, adding, "They seemed more excited about us being there than we were."

STREET THEATRE

That would prove to be the norm for the rest of the month, as the group followed up daily personal praise and worship services with street theatre depicting biblical truths intended to educate the Estonians about Christianity.

Students from the local bible school contributed songs, dances and preaching, and interpreters who were always with the Canadian group helped get the overall message across.

At the end of the day, the group held an alter call, inviting the crowd to embrace Jesus and become Christians.

"It was amazing," Mr. LeBlanc said.

"We'd have an alter call and a hundred people would come up."

One Estonian who walked away convinced — and in turn convinced the group that its efforts had been worthwhile — was a young man by the name of Kosta.

Kosta was the leader of a street gang. He displayed all the trappings of his chosen lifestyle, right down to a rugged and rumpled leather jacket.

His gang and the Estonia '91 workers had crossed paths in a benign fashion, enough so as to result in an invitation to the gang to attend one of the group's services.

Kosta did, and so did others, and they all watched as their leader stood up at the alter call, and accepted Jesus into his life.

Another member, whose street name was "Dance," also answered the call, later thankfully telling members of the Bathurst delegation, "Because of you, I am a Christian."

Mr. Creary remembered another incident that came about early in the trip.

"There are hundreds of stories, but this is an outstanding one," he said as he began to describe an encounter with two Russian women on the overnight train from Moscow to Tallin.

Mr. Creary had decided to take a walk to the restaurant car toward the rear of the train. When he arrived, he found a member of the Estonia '91 project speaking to the Russian women about Jesus.

"She had the Russian bible out, and she was trying to have a conversation with them. They didn't understand any English, and she didn't understand any Russian."

LANGUAGE HANDY

That's when Mr. Creary's degree in Russian Studies and his resultant knowledge of the Russian language came in handy.

Even then, however, the conversation did not progress much farther than determining the names of the women, where they were from and where they were going. The linguistic gap was just too great.

When the conversation ended, all went their separate ways.

Several days later, their paths crossed again.

"We were coming back from the square one day, and when we got right to the front of our dorm, there they were; the two of them were standing there, almost as if they were waiting for us."

In a city with a population of 500,000, this alone was seen as something more than a coincidence.

This time, Mr. Creary was prepared with a Russian/English dictionary, a Russian bible and Russian phrase book.

He gave the women Russian bibles, and invited them to church the next day. They happily accepted the offer.

"We even had an opportunity to pray with them at the end, and they loved every minute of it, never having experienced anything like that before," Mr. Creary said, adding, "The fac that we ran into them after all this, you start to think to yourself, God must really have this under control."

Now that the group has returned to Canada, memories such as those of the street gang and the two Russian women have left a lasting impression on them.

Pessimism marks Labor Day speeches

By MICHAEL J. BOURGUIGNON
Northern Light Staff

Labor Day was a day of celebration in Bathurst, but it was not without its ironies.

"I don't think very much has changed since last year," Tim McCarthy, past-president of the New Brunswick Federation of Labor, told a gathering at Coronation Park Monday following the annual Labor Day parade.

At this time last year, Brunswick Mining and Smelting was in the throes of a labor strike.

This year, Mr. McCarthy noted, the province's public sector is faced with a wage freeze that he sees as "morally wrong."

About 800 turned out to hear Mr. McCarthy and other dignitaries, including provincial New Democratic Party leader Elizabeth Weir, and to enjoy in free refreshments and games for children.

But hanging over the celebrations was a mood of frustration, and speeches that focused on the dignity of workers also admonished the government's seeming unwillingness to provide it.

"I don't believe it will be a one-year freeze," Mr. McCarthy speculated, adding if Premier Frank McKenna's Liberal government is re-elected in the Sept. 23 election, labor will be in for "the fight of their lives."

"I believe the future generations of this province will be hard-pressed to find work," he said, adding quality of life cannot be achieved without prosperity among workers.

Those workers are "responsible for making the very wheels of our community," Mayor Kevin Mann said in his speech.

The labor movement lifted people out of poverty, gave them dignity and self-respect, and established a standard of living "that could never have been achieved otherwise," he told the crowd.

Whether intentionally or not, John Gagnon, vice-president of the New Brunswick Federation of Labor for Gloucester County, served up an ironic contrast to Mayor Mann's vision of a proud, dignified workforce.

"It's hard to respect a government that doesn't respect its own working people," he said to applause.

He accused government of pitting workers against workers by failing to introduce anti-scab legislation that would prevent employers from hiring replacement workers in the event of a strike.

"I believe the future generations of this province will be hard-pressed to find work."

Normand LeBlanc of Moncton, a Canadian Labor Congress representative,, took the accusation one step farther, saying the federal government is "clearly not the workers' friend."

The introduction of free trade with the United States, the Goods and Services Tax, the de-regulation of the transportation industry, and reduced funding for health and education all prove the need to tell the federal Progressive Conservative government that "enough is enough," Mr. LeBlanc indicated.

FIGHT FOR DIGNITY

Acadian Peninsula District Labor Council president Yvon Roy echoed the sentiment, telling workers they must "keep on fighting," for dignity.

It was noted Bathurst is one of the few cities in New Brunswick that traditionally holds annual Labor Day activities, such as Monday's gathering at Coronation Park, and the parade that brought out clusters of Bathurst residents to line up along downtown streets.

And despite the concerns that continue to gnaw at the heart of the labor movement, there was no mistaking the sense of celebration as workers and their families, along with the general public, were reminded that the day belonged to them.

"You are part of a great movement," Mayor Mann concluded his speech.

"You have something to be proud of."

The speeches were followed by a presentation of awards to various parade entries.

The Best Union Float and Best Overall Float awards went to the International Association of Machinists Local 1505; Best Commercial Float winner was Jean Coutu Pharmacy; Best Entertainment Float went to George Pitre; the Best Majorette Group was Les Majorettes de Pointe Verte; Best Band was the Chaleur 640 Air Cadet squadron; the Best Horse Show award went to George Pitre; Most Improved Local was the Canadian Paperwokers Union Local 120; and the Best Turnout award was presented to the Canadian Union of Postal Workers.

Canadian Paperworkers' Union Local 120 was the winner of the Most Improved Local in Monday's Labor Day parade. The parade attracted clusters of Bathurst residents who lined the downtown streets for the parade. An even larger crowd later made its way to Coronation Park for speeches, games, and food.

DAMAGES IN KING AVENUE COLLISION TOTAL $11,000

Susan Duguay, 20, of Bathurst, was carefully removed from a pick-up truck that collided with another vehicle at the King Avenue and St. Andrew Street intersection Aug. 29 shortly before 5 p.m. She was a passenger in the 1991 Toyota pick-up truck driven by Kevin Robertson, 24, of Bathurst. Also involved in the collision was 56-year-old Robert Daley, also of Bathurst, who was driving a 1986 Oldsmobile. The accident resulted in $5,000 in damage to the Oldsmobile, and $6,000 damage to the Toyota. Both drivers also sustained slight injuries, and all three were treated and released from Chaleur Regional Hospital.

Big Brothers month is underway

The official kick-off of Big Brothers-Big Sisters Month in Bathurst is slated for Saturday at Coronation Park, beginning at 1:30 p.m. A homemade kite competition will be held at the same time for children ages six to 16.

September is Big Brothers-Big Sisters Month in Canada, a time to ponder the effects this organization has had on thousands of children.

"We fill a void, and provide an influence that changes their lives in a positive way," is how Joel Maurice described it.

Mr. Maurice is public relations director with Big Brothers-Big Sisters Chaleur Region Inc., and is busy finalizing details for the special month ahead.

The annual affair is designed to promote the work of the organization, which matches children from single-parent families with a Big Brother or Big Sister. It also emphasizes the need for more Bigs, to fill a rather lengthy waiting list of Littles.

The official kick-off of Big Brothers-Big Sisters Month in Bathurst is slated for Saturday at Coronation Park, beginning at 1:30 p.m. Attending will be most of the Bigs and Littles from the local organization.

A homemade kite competition will be held at the same time for children ages six to 16, with medals provided to the top three finishers in each of three categories: funniest kite, most unique kite, and the one that best exemplifies the theme of the organization. How-to kits for building kites are available at the organization's office at 195 Main Street.

Displays explaining the specifics of the Big Brother organization will be erected at area shopping malls, complete with registration forms and information pamphlets.

The local organization presently boasts 48 matches, which include 17 Big Brothers, 27 Big Sisters, and four Big Couples.

The Big Couples program was introduced in 1989, and its goal is the same as that of Big Brothers and Big Sisters. A child from a single-parent family between the ages of six and 16 is matched with a stable, responsible couple.

"This positive influence is helping these children to become stable, responsible and confident adults," said a release.

Five more matches — four Little Brothers and one Little Sister — are expected to come about this week, while another 40 — 27 Little Brothers and 13 Little Sisters — are still waiting impatiently for their matches.

Mr. Maurice recalled how his sitting for 50 hours on a scaffold high up the side of a downtown building this summer proved a successful venture. That stunt, performed during the Bathurst Summer Festival, helped bring in 23 more applications — four Big Brothers, eight Big Sisters, three Big Couples, five Little Brothers and three Little Sisters.

He said he hopes to see the upcoming campaign follow the same route.

"We hope the public will make this as big a success as the scaffold sitting."

Other activities on tap this month include the start of Lottery Calendar sales to up the Big Brothers coffers. The calendars can be purchased for $20 each at the Big Brothers office, and entitles the holder to a chance of winning something every single day of 1992. Up for grabs are 10 prizes of $100, two $500 cash prizes, and 353 chances at $25. Winners' names are entered back into the draw.

A Jumbo Bingo is set for Sept. 28 at Ecole Secondaire Nepisiguit, with early bird bingo beginning at 5 p.m. and regular bingo at 7 p.m.

Justice Minister facing her greatest challenge

Political Scene

By STEWART MacLEOD
Ottawa Bureau
Thomson News Service

As if Justice Minister Kim Campbell didn't already face enough legislative mountain climbing — such as producing acceptable abortion and gun control laws — she is now likely to confront an even greater challenge.

With the Supreme Court of Canada striking down the so-called rape shield law in a 7-2 decision, the justice minister can expect to feel greater pressure, particularly from women's groups, for replacement legislation.

And, as we learned from the court's majority and minority reports, reaching a consensus on trial procedures for rape cases is a very daunting task.

Perhaps the minister can resist the pressure and let judges operate under the guidelines laid down in the Supreme Court decision. But it's unlikely. The first time a rape victime is tormented in court about her sexual history, we can expect an outpouring of rage. The opposition will almost certainly badger the minister for action.

It's not surprising there has been such an emotional reaction to the court's decision. Lord knows, victims of sexual assault face enough courtroom agonies without having their sexual histories trotted out.

But had the court upheld the rape shield law that barred this evidence, it could have contributed to wrongful convictions.

There is no way of knowing how many innocent people, if any, have been convicted with help from the rape shield law, which came into effect in 1983.

So there is no way to measure this against the fact that, without the law, it's even more painful for a victim to press charges. And, from every expect, we hear that only a small percentage of victims did so, even when there was no danger of their sexual histories being brought out.

The nine Supreme Court judges faced a horrendous, no-win situation when they had to rule on the constitutionality of the shield law. But this was no surprise, considering the number of times lower courts had reached differing conclusions.

Two provincial Supreme Courts had supported the law and two had disallowed it before the issue reached the highest court. There is no denying that compelling arguments exist on both sides.

And we heard both from the Supreme Court. It would be difficult to find more divergent judicial views on a single issue than those presented by Madam Justice Beverley McLachlin and Madam Justice Claire L'Heureux-Dube.

In writing for the majority, Judge McLachlin said the law could block evidence critical to a person's defence, "and the constitutional right to a fair trial must take precedence in a case of conflict."

In our society, she wrote, nothing is more important than a fair trial.

But, in her 86-page rebuke, Judge L'Heureux-Dube mounts an equally strong defence of the law that her colleagues threw out. She said the sexual history of victims is not only irrelevant but can be "highly prejudicial."

The benefits of the law, such as encouraging victims to come forward, "are obviously sufficiently important objectives to warrant overriding a right of the accused," she said. Sexual assault occur with "staggering frequency."

Furthermore, she warned, there are no guarantees that the guidelines, meant to prevent abuse by the defence of personal histories in the courtroom, will be followed. The responsibility given judges is "badly misplaced" because of existing "myths and stereo-types" about women and rape.

The majority decision said evidence of past sexual conduct can be introduced only when a judge decides its value is greater than the danger of an unfair trial — and this decision must be made before the evidence goes before a jury. Such evidence cannot be used to show a woman is "less worthy of belief as a witness."

Since so much is left in the hands of individual judges, it probably won't be long before we hear allegations of courtroom abuses. Then, the pressure on Campbell could be enormous — particularly since she said a few months ago she wanted to improve a justice system that does "not always reflect the reality of women."

They should have talked to the boss

Sept. 3

Dear Editor,

Well now. A delegation including some councillors made a trip to Fredericton looking for $5 million. They must have expected to be refused, because did you ever see such timing? When McKenna wasn't even there!

Now, if I was going for a bank loan, I'm sure I wouldn't settle for a clerk or teller. And this is exactly what they got in Fredericton, a teller. "I'll tell him when he gets back."

Is it a possibility that another of city council could be in a conflict of interest regarding the civic centre land deal?

A statement was made to the effect that between one and one and a half million dollars will have to be borrowed to renovate city hall to make it a full police station. Why should the taxpayers of Bathurst have to pay the shot for this, when most of the police work is done for the Province? We shouldn't be paying for police salaries, equipment and cars either.

Mention was made that a new water main would have to be installed in Parkwood Heights, due to low pressure because of water being supplied to Beresford. In my opinion, they should pay the cost. While I'm on the water issue, money would be better spent on an upgraded filtration system for our water supply. Did you see the sample of our drinking water at one of our drug stores? Pay a visit and take a look at it.

Getting to Frank McKenna. He must be proud of himself because Malcolm Ross is ordered out of the classroom. It makes one shudder; it's scary to think that the opinion of one man (Bruce) could be binding and adhered to by law. Who is being discriminated against now? Who's going to lose his job next? You? Me? "In Canada, they say?"

Frank McKenna was in Bathurst, then Belledune to make a big announcement, the news items said, and this is what I heard: "Two local companies to get contracts at the generating station." Big deal! And the public eats this up like candy. How many people are going to benefit?

You know it reminds me a lot of the other evening. While watching TV, I got a whiff of a skunk going through our back yard. By the time I got to the door, he had vanished and all I was left with was the smell.

Little League champs

Silver Points

By SONIA-SIMARD CORMIER
News from 25 years ago.

Sept. 8, 1966

Though not often mentioned in this particular column, sports played an important role in 1966 and many of those involved in hockey, baseball or softball 25 years ago remained quite active in this aspect of community life.

Take the numerous players involved in the little league team which in that year won the North Shore Little League Baseball Championship. Under the wing of head coach Fred Harlow and coach Johnny (Buffalo) Vienneau, the team consisted of Brian Noel, Ronald White, Brian Chamberlain, Steven Keelin, Kevin Meagher, David Ross, Peter White, Ivan Smith, John McAloon, Dirk Kiy, Paul Veniot, Jimmy Cormier, Don MacLaggan, Peter Roussy, Paul Aucoin, Marc Belliveau, Arthur Imough, Scott Kennah, James Reagan, Kenneth Doucet, Tommy Mann, Gerald Doucet, Peter Cooper and Jean Guy Pitre.

Many readers of this column no doubt remembered The Generation, the musical quartet which I wrote about a couple of weeks ago, but how many recall reading about the group attending a concert where another, slightly more popular, musical foursome was on stage. Bob Russell, Buck Hebert, Paul Cormier and Bernie Arsenault not only got to watch from 20 feet away as the Beatles performed in Toronto before a crowd of 16,000 teenagers, who were almost "hysterical," but also, with the help the Liverpool band's bodyguard, "they were able to get personally autographed pictures of the mop-headed four."

Now I'm not very knowledgeable when it comes to music or bands but I'm sure seeing the Beatles in 1966 has to be one of those unforgettable moments. For those who are music buffs, The Generation also got to see performances by The Ugly Ducklings (a particularly popular Toronto band of the day), The Fiends, The Rogues, Circle Group, Ronettes and Bobby Heb.

Finally this week, how about filling your grocery cart with seasonal produce at some old fashioned prices such as corn on the cob at 39 cents a dozen, 15 pound watermelons at 99 cents each, turnips at seven cents a pound or 50 pounds of potatoes for just $1.49.

Anybody who shops for groceries nowadays certainly knows such prices are a thing of the past.

Bathurst leading the way

Sitting Back

With GREG MULOCK
Personal opinion from the managing editor

News reports last week made mention of the need for more women candidates in today's electoral field.

Others should look to us for inspiration, as the riding of Bathurst is setting a fine example. Three out of four contenders in the Sept. 23 election are women. City councillor Marcelle Mersereau led the way for the Liberals, followed by Colette Buttimer for the New Democratic Party. Tonight, councillor Claire Wilt will follow suit for the Progressive Conservatives. (Confederation of Regions candidate Laurie Robichaud is the odd man out, pardon the pun).

Each of these women has a strong base of support, which should make things interesting at the ballot box. There are those who would say Mrs. Wilt is late off her mark, as the other candidates have a good start over her on the campaign trail. This is true, but one should remember the high number of votes she has managed in municipal election campaigns, and keep in mind her high profile in the community.

DANGEROUS RESCUE

A former Bathurst resident was involved in somewhat of hair-raising incident this past summer.

Ralph Eddy was one of three Calgary men who nearly lost their own craft while helping the survivor of a boating accident. According to a story in the Calgary-Herald newspaper by reporter Anthony Johnson, Ralph and two friends were in a fishing derby on McGregor Lake, 100 kilometres southeast of Calgary.

The trio saw something in the distance, which turned out to be a hand waving. They came across a man whose boat had capsized in turbulent water — and the bodies of the man's two companions who had already drowned.

Apparently, the rescuers signalled to fellow boaters for help, but were ignored for a substantial length of time — despite the fact that the weather was stormy — because no one recognized the trio's signals for distress.

Ralph is the son of the late Lloyd and Brigitte Eddy, who lives on St. Patrick St.

He is the service manager for a computer company in Calgary.

EDITORIAL

As hot as it gets

What's in it for us?

With the 1991 provincial election campaign well underway, that's a good question for the people of Bathurst to be asking.

The community has traditionally voted Liberal for years, and it's time we were dutifully rewarded for this loyalty — not taken for granted, which seems to be the case.

It's true we have received some things. The government of Premier Frank McKenna is renovating the courthouse, has established a regional Workers Compensation Office here, constructed overpasses in East Bathurst, and provided monies to upgrade Chaleur Regional Hospital.

Of course, the courthouse was overcrowded to the point of being ridiculous, and helping out the hospital can hardly be considered political charity. The overpasses too were a necessity, and do not qualify as a gift.

There was also a dire need here in the Northeast for a Workers Comp office, and since Bathurst is the geographical hub in this part of the province, the city was the logical site to choose.

It's time then, that we were given our due. Many other communities appear to have their hands in the election goodie bag, and we should too.

For example, we are still waiting to see the Village Bridge expanded to four lanes. Transportation Minister Sheldon Lee confirmed in July that soil testing was being done, soil testing being the first phase for an expansion of the bridge. However, such preliminary work is a long way from a firm commitment for a four-lane span.

We also need a civic centre, as most citizens realize. City officials were in Fredericton lobbying for provincial support of the project, in monetary terms, which was good to see. However, the lobbying must not only continue but be stepped up.

We must strike while the iron is hot, and it doesn't get any hotter than during an election.

Coverage of the 1991 provincial election campaign

Incumbent defends wage freeze move

(Editor's Note: This week we begin profiles of the candidates running in the three local ridings. The profiles in today's edition were written by staff writer Michael J. Bourguignon, and examine the three candidates to date in the riding of Nepisiguit-Chaleur. Next week's profiles will cover Bathurst and Nigadoo Chaleur.)

A negative public reaction to the province's freeze on wages in the public sector likely won't affect Nepisiguit-Chaleur MLA Frank Branch's bid for re-election.

"There's a handful of very militant people who would wreck the province if given their hands on the wheel," the incumbent Liberal told The Northern Light Friday, adding those people represent the minority of constituents in Nepisiguit-Chaleur.

"I think most people understand the reality of it."

The reality, as he sees it, is that the province, like the rest of the country, is under economic strain.

"If there's only ten dollars in the pot, you can't take twenty dollars out," he noted.

Proper financial management often requires unpopular measures, he indicated.

However, he also maintains those who blame New Brunswick Premier Frank McKenna's Liberal government for the state of the economy are barking up the wrong tree.

"The feds have chosen to ignore us in this region," he said, adding, "We're not alone in this; I think it's the same way across the country."

He said although the upgrading of roads is a continuing project, with $20 million spent in the last four years, more needs to be done on all Nepisiguit-Chaleur roads.

That's among his highest priorities in his campaign to again represent Nepisiguit-Chaleur, in the Sept. 23 provincial election.

"The old highway between Bathurst and Grande Anse needs improvements," he said, adding securing funds for roadwork here is "a continual struggle, because (Nepisiguit-Chaleur) is a huge constituency and road work is so expensive."

Job creation and the continued quest for funding for the Bathurst Regional Airport also top his wish list.

"It would be nice if the federal government would spend money on our airport as they do for airports all over the world, for total strangers," he told The Northern Light Friday.

The people of Nepisiguit-Chaleur must feel the same way, if the reaction Mr. Branch said he is getting to his re-election campaign is any indication.

"I'm campaigning in the usual Frank Branch way," the Liberal candidate said.

"I'm talking to people, telling them exactly what the situation is."

The situation, as he sees it, is that Prime Minister Brian Mulroney is giving "huge amounts of money to other countries," and it's time for Canadians, and the people of Nepisiguit-Chaleur in particular, to get their share.

Mr. Branch, 47, has been the MLA for Nepisiguit-Chaleur for 21 years. He and his wife Karen, have three children, Richard, 19; Ashley, 16; and Megan, 5.

Tory hopeful seeks uncommitted voters

Seeking out the uncommitted has put Nepisiguit-Chaleur Progressive Conservative candidate Bob Hornibrook on a busy schedule.

"We know the (supporters) we have; it's the ones we don't have that we're working on," the Janeville resident said in an Aug. 29 telephone interview with The Northern Light.

Mr. Hornibrook has been campaigning door-to-door and in the street, preparing for the Sept. 23 provincial election he hopes will ring in a new era of Progressive Conservative leadership in New Brunswick. The Liberal government of Premier Frank McKenna, elected in 1987, holds all 58 seats in the New Brunswick legislature.

"I'm going to work extremely hard to bring about a change of leadership," he said, adding his main priority is to "roust the McKenna government and get a good Conservative government back in office."

He said the Liberals are not fooling anybody with the clearing of ditches and patching of potholes that seem to occur only during an election year.

Such short-term work does not constitute a long-term remedy to the problems of the riding, he said.

Among those issues he feels the need to address are finding ways of developing long-term employment; improving the condition of secondary highways, such as Route 180 (commonly known as the Road to Resources) and downshore roads; and supporting farmers by helping to put farmland back into production.

Also on his agenda are improvements geared toward increasing and easing the flow of traffic at deep-sea ports, and the need to address health care problems and the abuse of the welfare system.

Mr. Hornibrook is the owner of Hornibrook Convenience Store, co-owner of Fleet Realty and president of Robert Hornibrook Enterprises Ltd.

He is also the vice-president of the Nepisiguit-Chaleur Progressive Conservative Association, and was nominated to represent the party in Nepisiguit-Chaleur at an Aug. 22 convention at the Allardville Cultural Centre.

Mr. Hornibrook, 58, and his wife Sylvie have three children: Elizabeth Ann, John, and Edward.

CoR candidate says campaign taking off

The Confederation of Regions' campaign is starting slowly but surely in the riding of Nepisiguit-Chaleur.

"Hopefully, by next week, we'll be in full gear," candidate Laurie Daley, 41, said Friday.

Mr. Daley, a stationary engineer at Stone Consolidated Inc., has taken time off work for his campaign, which he said has been receiving a good response, although posters and other materials were not yet ready when The Northern Light spoke to him.

He feels his strength as a candidate lies in the people's desire for a change from mainline leadership.

"Protest votes" against the current government of Premier Frank McKenna could swing in CoR's direction, he reasoned.

The party is best known for its opposition to official bilingualism, which has labelled it, in the minds of some, as an anti-French party.

However, Mr. Daley feels both the French and the English share the same attitude toward the mainline party.

"They're fed up," he said, charging that the riding no longer has a voice in Fredericton.

Through his campaign, he hopes to point out to both linguistic groups that official bilingualism is "a luxury we can't afford," but he also intends to listen to their concerns on such issues as employment, the waste of taxpayers' money, and the state of health care and education.

"I'm feeling them out and getting their opinions," he said, adding he is impressed with the level of support he has been receiving.

"There are a lot of people saying, 'I can't support you publicly, but you have my vote.'"

Mr. Daley has stepped into the political life as a novice, taking the leap because he is concerned about where the province is going, said a release.

"I'm running because I'm fed up, too," he said.

"We're due for a change."

Mr. Daley is married with three children, and is involved in the Scouting movement and other community activities.

He and his family reside in Salmon Beach.

NDP will have Nepisiguit-Chaleur candidate this week

There may or may not be a New Democratic Party nominating convention in the riding of Nepisiguit-Chaleur, but there will be a candidate.

The local NDP candidate search committee has identified several potential candidates to run in Nepisiguit-Chaleur in the Sept. 23 provincial election, said area NDP election coordinator John Gagnon.

He said a candidate will be announced tommorrow Thursday. However, the question of whether a nominating convention will be held depends on how many decide to seek the nomination, he added.

"If there's a need for a convention, it will be the first week of September," he said in an interview last week, adding one candidate had come forward, but "backed out at the last minute."

The deadline for candidate registration is next Monday.

Elsewhere in the region, the NDP has chosen Colette Buttimer to run in Bathurst and Raoul Charest in Nigadoo-Chaleur.

Candidates' forum set for Sept. 23

The public will play an important role in the upcoming Meet Your Candidate forum for Bathurst candidates in the Sept. 23 provincial election.

"The public will be invited to attend, (and) they'll have the opportunity to ask questions," said Rachel Kersys, general manager of the Bathurst Chamber of Commerce.

Liberal candidate Marcelle Mersereau, the New Democratic Party's Colette Buttimer, Confederation of Regions president Laurie J. Robichaud, and Progressive Conservative candidate Claire Wilt will be on hand Sept. 15 at 7 p.m., at Danny's Inn and Conference Centre, to answer questions from the public and a panel of journalists.

The event is a joint effort of the Bathurst Chamber of Commerce, and the local cable TV company, Northeast Cablevision.

The forum will be broadcast live on Northeast Cablevision's Channel 7, from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Mrs. Kersys noted questions from the public will not be addressed directly to the candidates, but are to be submitted in writing to the moderator, Chaleur Regional Hospital director Roger Bertin.

Questions may also be forwarded to the Chamber of Commerce, prior to the broadcast date.

Only reasonable questions will be considered, Mrs. Kersys said.

The evening will begin with an introduction of the candidates, after which each candidate will present a five-minute opening address.

Panelists Greg Mulock, managing editor of The Northern Light, and CKLE—FM journalist Annie Lajoie will then ask their own questions, while Mr. Bertin will relay questions from the public.

The candidates will then be invited to offer closing remarks, with a two-minute time limit.

"It's going to be kind of a flowing thing," Mrs. Kersys said, referring to the format of questioning.

"It's going to be played pretty much by ear."

The event is modelled after a similar forum for last year's municipal by-election, although the presence of a live audience at the Sept. 14 forum represents a new twist.

Wilt will run for Tories

The field of candidates for the Bathurst riding will be complete tonight Wednesday.

It is expected Claire Wilt will be acclaimed as the Progressive Conservative candidate at the Tory nominating convention, set for 8:30 p.m. at the Herman J. Good V.C. Branch No. 18 of the Royal Canadian Legion.

The Bathurst riding will then have candidates representing all four official New Brunswick political parties. Also running in the campaign leading up to the Sept. 23 provincial election are Liberal Marcelle Mersereau, New Democratic Party standard-bearer Colette Buttimer, and Confederation of Regions candidate Laurie Robichaud.

A city councillor since 1983, Mrs. Wilt sought the nomination in 1987 but lost to local businessman René Pratt. Mr. Pratt was subsequently defeated in the 1987 provincial election, when Frank McKenna's Liberals captured all 58 seats in the New Brunswick legislature.

Guest speaker for the convention will be provincial Tory leader Dennis Cochrane.

Other guests will include Jean Gauvin, the colorful former cabinet minister in the administration of Richard Hatfield.

Mr. Gauvin is the PC candidate in Shippegan-les-Iles.

Weir won't make empty promises

Provincial New Democratic Party leader Elizabeth Weir acknowledged the importance of local issues Monday, but stopped short of stating her position on them.

"I don't think election time is the time to be making promises," Ms. Weir told The Northern Light following Labor Day activities at Coronation park.

Premier Frank McKenna has called a provincial election for Sept. 23. The NDP leader is running in a Saint John riding.

Ms. Weir explained that candidates on the campaign trial often make "empty promises," and then, once elected, suffer an attack of amnesia.

"It's not fair to people, and it's not fair to communities," she said.

However, she did have a few words to say when asked her feelings on the city's proposed civic centre.

"Our party strongly supports community facilities," she said, adding she is aware of the frustration of seeking government assistance for such projects.

Currently, the city of Bathurst is awaiting word from the province on its request for funding to the tune of $5,017,000. That amount represents about a third of the total cost of the project.

She also acknowledged the need for some action on Route 180, which has been the subject of much lobbying in recent years. Community leaders and private citizens alike continue to trumpet the need for extensive repairs to the highway, commonly known as the Road to Resources.

Ms. Weir was in Bathurst to help celebrate Labor Day, which attracted about 800 people to Coronation Park for speeches, free refreshments and games.

She took the opportunity to reiterate past comments comparing Premier Frank McKenna to Prime Minister Brian Mulroney.

She said the two share the same concern for "the defecit," but questioned their understanding of the word.

"If we have air we can't breathe, that's a deficit; If we have water we can't drink, that's a deficit, too," she said.

The lack of fair laws preventing employers from hiring replacement workers during a strike can also be considered a deficit, she suggested.

Despite her conviction, Ms. Weir slipped some humor into her speech, just as she began to address the shortcomings of Frank McKenna's Liberal government.

Tormented by a wasp that continuously circled her as she stood on the gazebo, Ms. Weir swatted it away, commenting, "It must be a Liberal wasp."

McKenna queried by strikers

When is Premier Frank McKenna going to introduce anti-scab legislation in New Brunswick?

That was the question striking members of Local 12 of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers had on their minds when the premier visited Bathurst Aug. 29.

Mr. McKenna was here to officially open the Liberal campaign headquarters on King Avenue of Marcelle Mersereau, and union members took advantage of the office's proximity to the picket line to put the question to him.

Although a brief, one-on-one with Local 12 shop stewards Doug Bateman and Jay Glendenning produced no firm verbal commitment from the premier, the union was not entirely dissatisfied with the meeting.

"I was pleased he was making the commitment to look into it," Mr. Bateman told The Northern Light, adding he wanted to ask the question more as an individual than as a representative of postal employees.

He said Mr. McKenna told him he wants to organize a forum between union and management officials, to hash out a draft legislation that would prevent employers from using replacement workers in the event of a strike.

"(Mr. McKenna) said that in the end, it might not be exactly what the unions want, but management would like it less," he said, adding the premier was hinting anti-scab legislation would carry more benefits for employees than for employers.

However, the forum has yet to come to fruition, and although Mr. Bateman said he was satisfied the premier had taken time to answer his question, the matter of anti-scab legislation has now come down to a wait-and-see situation.

Meanwhile, Premier McKenna took advantage of his visit to voice his support for Marcelle Mersereau, who will represent the Liberal party in Bathurst during the Sept. 23 provincial election.

He told a crowd of about 50 that Bathurst Liberals are fortunate to have "a candidate of the extraordinary calibre of Marcelle Mersereau."

He received a warm, cheerful response from the crowd as he cut an imaginary ribbon to declare the headquarters open, clasping Mrs. Mersereau's hand and raising it high in a victory salute.

PREMIER CAMPAIGNS IN BATHURST

Premier Frank McKenna was in Bathurst Aug. 29 to officially open the campaign headquarters of Marcelle Mersereau. Having captured the Liberal nomination last month for the Bathurst riding, Mrs. Mersereau will seek election to the Legislature in the Sept. 23 provincial election.

An actor's lot is not an easy one, but former Bathurst resident Gary Levert has taken up the challenge out of pure love for the craft of acting. The son of Ed and Jackie Levert of Bathurst, he now lives in Edmonton, Alta. where he has acted in theatre and commercials. Bathurst residents who missed him when he was visiting his old hometown recently may have caught him in the movie Samuel Lount, his first part in a feature film. The historical drama was recently broadcast on the ASN television network.

Actor not deterred by lack of glamor

By MICHAEL J. BOURGUIGNON
Northern Light Staff

Acting is great work if you can get it.

But more often than not, it can't be had consistently enough to allow aspiring actors to quit their day jobs.

"There are very few Canadian actors I know who are in that position," said Gary Levert, a former Bathurst resident now working as an actor in Edmonton, Alta.

His most visible role to date has been that of a rebel in the historical film Samuel Lount, about seven years ago. The film was recently rebroadcast on the ASN television network.

The role came to him after he spied a classified ad that listed openings for extras.

"I played one of William Lyon MacKenzie's thugs," he said in a July 12 interview, while in town for a family reunion.

The role accorded him "about a page and a half of dialogue," but more importantly, it provided him with an opportunity to act.

His earliest acting experience came when he was about eight years old, when he performed in a play for the United Church. He also remembers putting on skits for his parents, Ed and Jackie Levert, who had moved to Bathurst from Sudbury, Ont. 25 years ago.

"I've always been a ham," he said, adding his interest was further developed under the tutelage of former Bathurst High School drama teacher Susan Hay.

He acted in a number of high school plays, and went on to take courses in theatre while studying at the St. Thomas University in Fredericton.

He moved around after returning from university, settling for a time in Los Angeles.

He spent much of his time there visiting friends, and despite the city's reputation for glitz and glamor, very few of Gary's days were spent pursuing his acting career.

"I was very young and a little too green," he said, adding, "I guess I wasn't hungry enough."

Upon his return to Bathurst, he helped form a community theatre group, which led to a role in a local production of Jesus Christ Superstar.

Those early days were rewarding ones, and Mr. Levert still feels strongly about the need for communities to let their youth pursue their interests, and to encourage them to develop their talents.

SIDETRACKED

Leaving Bathurst again, Mr. Levert eventually found himself on his way to Vancouver, but was sidetracked while visiting friends in Edmonton.

There he stayed, having found a place to hone his craft in the theatre.

He has since taken theatre courses at Arts Club Theatre, done a mini-melodrama for the renowned Citadel Theatre, played Ichabod Crane in The Legend of Sleepy Hollow for the Children's International Festival, and played a role in Shakespeare's Othello.

"You really have to like it (acting). "The secret is doing what you love to do and if you have a dream, to follow it."

And in 1987, he won the province of Alberta's Best Acting Award for his role in the play Lone Star.

Other theatre projects also came his way, as did a number of commercials, for Irwin Toys, Time/Life, and "a lot of local stuff."

"That was my bread and butter at the time."

His most recent plays have been Inherit the Wind and Royal Hunt of the Sun, which was just completed about a month ago.

NO ILLUSIONS

But Mr. Levert creates no illusions about the availability of work for actors, Canadian or otherwise.

The toughest aspect of the business, he said, is "getting work and being able to pay the rent."

When he isn't on stage or in front of a camera, though, he does find other jobs, as most actors do. When the acting pool dries up, he seels clothes, waits tables, and does some technical work for theatre productions. And of course, he continues to study acting.

"Even the professionals are always honing their crafts."

He views himself less as a method actor than as a technical one, comparing the two by describing a technical actor as one who is asked to cry and instantly produces a tear.

Some of the actors he most admires, regardless of whether they are technical or method actors, are Robert DeNiro and Kevin Kline.

Although he isn't afraid to acknowledge the difficulties of his chosen profession, he is quick to illustrate the benefits: "The people involved, and I guess, the limelight."

The latter, of course, doesn't happen often, but Mr. Levert acknowledged that it's fun and rewarding when it does.

"You really have to like it," he says of acting.

"The secret is doing what you love to do and if you have a dream, to follow it."

He keeps in touch with the dream with the help of his agent in Vancouver, and currently has his eye on the future, when he hopes to get more into film acting and ultimately, directing.

He would also like to do some comedy, because he feels he has good comic timing.

"Plus, it's a lot more fun to make people laugh than to make them cry."

Thailand visit a learning experience for Colleen O'Connell

By MICHAEL J. BOURGUIGNON
Northern Light Staff

What's the use of travelling if it's done without a purpose?

Colleen O'Connell of Tremblay and her boyfriend, Trent Whalen of Bathurst, know the answer to that question.

"We wanted to spend some time travelling, but we didn't want to just go and travel on our own," said Colleen, the 23-year-old daughter of John and Jeannie O'Connell.

She and Trent applied for volunteer teaching opportunities in Thailand, through the Harvard University Institute for International Development's world teaching program. They were part of a group of 26 North Americans who took in the opportunity.

As far as Colleen is concerned, it seemed the best way to travel with a purpose, "to do something worthwhile and make a contribution."

Colleen returned from Bangkok last month, while Trent is scheduled to return in a few weeks.

They had left together in October last year.

Their arrival in Bangkok, the capital of Thailand, certainly got things off to a bad start.

"When we arrived, Bangkok was flooded," Colleen said in an interview with The Northern Light, adding, "We were walking in water up to our knees, our shoes held above our heads."

"It made everything after that look great."

As it turned out, everything after that was not bad at all.

After a month of orientation, Colleen went to teach English as a second language at the Faculty of Public Health at Mahidol University. She was also involved with conducting research on AIDS and nutrition.

Trent, who is the 26-year old son of Lorne and Parise Whalen, was sent to teach English as a second language at Rajamangala Institute of Technology.

Although they were at separate institutions, they worked together a lot, because they had to come up with their own teaching curriculum, Colleen said.

EMERGING NATION

The purpose of their jobs was to help give the Thai people a stronger command of conversational English, something the country needs at the moment.

"Thailand is emerging really quickly," Colleen explained, adding their future as a player in the world market is hinged largely on their ability to communicate.

The students she was teaching included medical doctors, midwives, nurses, all from the health field.

Her students, as well as Thai people in general, were "extremely curious about our lifestyles and traditions, and how it differs from theirs," she said.

They also proved to be keen on current issues, while Trent's students, who were mostly younger, enjoyed discussing American tastes in music.

One of the qualities of the Thai people is the pride they have in their country and their unique language, which only the Thai speak.

"It's one of the few countries in the world that has never been occupied," Colleen noted, explaining part of the reason for that pride.

They were extremely curious to see their country from a foreigner's point of view, and Colleen found herself constantly asked her opinions with regards to the country and its people.

Her opinions are well-developed from a year's stay, and the first stems from an initial impression she said surprised her and Trent.

Although the country, with a population of 53 million, is 95 per cent Buddhist, signs of modern influences were everywhere.

"A sea of buildings" in Bangkok carried advertising banners for a wide range of American products and services, from sneakers to fast food restaurants.

MANY TEMPLES

Shantytown slums were built alongside the seemingly prosperous and cosmopolitan areas, and of course, there were Buddhist temples everywhere.

The influence of modern technology proved to have both positive and negative effects on the country.

Thailand is indeed emerging as an industrial nation, but it also has a serious pollution problem because of it.

Prostitution is rampant, and Colleen predicts AIDS will likely be one of Thailand's biggest problems within five years.

Despite this, the health standards are high, and a major campaign is underway to educate the people about the dangers of AIDS and means of protection.

Health standards aside, Colleen noted the water in Thailand is undrinkable, largely because of the pollution.

The food, on the other hand, is "fantastic."

"When we arrived, Bangkok was flooded. We were walking in water up to our knees, our shoes held above our heads. It made everything after that look great."

The staple of the Thai diet is rice, while most meals also consist of a spicy dish, a sweet dish, and a sour dish.

She and Trent were given the equivalent of $270 per month for living expenses, which certainly did not pose a problem where meals are concerned.

They discovered an expensive meal in Thailand costs the equivalent of $5 Canadian, while the simpler, one-dish meals cost about 50 cents.

"You do miss potatoes after a while," she said, laughing.

Every day held high points and low points, with buses figuring in the latter category.

Traffic congestion is another of Thailand's nuances, and going to work in the morning meant travelling four or five kilometres virtually hanging by the door handle, being careful not to be hit by passing trucks. Those four or five kilometres would take over an hour.

One of the customs Colleen became accustomed to was the Thai greeting known as the "wai", which is similar to the Japanese bow except that the greeter's hands are clasped as if in prayer.

As is the custom among the Japanese, the "wai" varies depending on the age and social status of the person being greeted. The head is always bowed when a superior is greeted, and the one considered inferior must always bow first.

As a teacher, Colleen merited a bow from her students. The doctors in her class, though, were considered on the same social status as their teacher.

The most endearing quality of the Thai people, however, is described in a saying they use: "mai pen rai," which, roughly translated, means "nothing matters."

That laid-back attitude frames the lifestyle of the Thai people.

Whether they lose their wallets, miss a bus, or accidently hit someone in the face, the thing to say is "mai pen rai."

"It's very different from our culture," Colleen said.

Now that she has returned, she has a better understanding of health issues like AIDS, and a clear view of what it means to live in a country that is just pulling itself out of third-world status.

No doubt, Trent will have similar insights to share upon his return.

Colleen, a 1990 chemistry graduate of St. Frances Xavier in Antigonish, N.S., begins her first year of medical studies at Memorial University in St. John's, Nfld. this month. She would also like to return to Thailand, and it turns out the feeling is mutual.

"The university is very interested in having me come back."

Bathurst area resident Colleen O'Connell, who recently returned from spending almost a year in Thailand, where she was involved in teaching and research.

Maxime Lejeune, program coordinator for the Victim Witness Services program, with a screen used in courtrooms to shield a victim witness giving testimony. Mr. Lejeune has seen the program expand since its implementation here four years ago, and new innovations continue to be put into place.
(Northern Light Photo)

Local Victim Witness Services program now four years old

By MICHAEL J. BOURGUIGNON
Northern Light Staff

Victims of violent crime who are called on to testify against their aggressors have a valuable ally on their side.

For the past four years, the Victim Witness Services office in the Keystone building has catered to the specific needs of crime victims and other witnesses.

The service, administered by the Correctional Services Branch under the authority of the Solicitor General, is an important one. However, it is a service many still know little about.

"Most people who are approached are surprised that the service even exists," coordinator Maxime Lejeune said in an interview.

The services Mr. Lejeune and his staff offer are threefold.

The first is the witness program, which offers a briefing session for witnesses called to testify at a trial. The briefing includes a 15-minute presentation that explains the court process, the responsibilities of the witness, and the roles of the key players in a court case.

When the Victim Witness Program first got off the ground, this was the only service it offered. But victims of violent crime, particularly sexual abuse, are also able to take advantage of a more intense briefing session, including a video presentation designed to make giving testimony easier.

"The victim is usually nervous, especially in a sexual assault case," Mr. Lejeune said.

In order to circumvent this, someone from the program will spend time with the victim witness, offering counselling and support. The witness will also be taken to the courtroom prior to testifying, in order to get a chance to see what it looks like, where the witness will sit, and what to expect.

These witnesses are usually referred to Victim Witness Services by the Crown, the police or the Department of Social Services, Mr. Lejeune mentioned. Often, in the case of young victims, the parents accompany them on the courtroom tour.

The second service offered is the administration of the Compensation for Victims of Crime Act.

Mr. Lejeune noted victims of violent crimes may qualify for compensation of up to $5,000 for injuries sustained, or losses incurred as a direct result of injuries.

In the case of a death, the family of the victim may qualify for compensation of up to $25,000.

The monies, provided through the federal and provincial governments, are dispensed only after strict guidelines have been observed to determine whether the victim or family is intitled to compensation.

The factors involved include whether the family already has a substantial insurance policy, whether charges were laid against the alleged perpetrator, and the results of medical reports.

The final decision is made by the Justice Department, and approved or rejected by the Solicitor-General.

The third service is the Victim Impact Statement, which Mr. Lejeune said allows the victim "to tell his or her story."

IMPACT

The VIS, which the victim prepares, is intended to describe the impact of the crime on the victim.

The information may then be used by the judge in determining the sentence of the offender.

In can also re-surface, with the victim's permission, when a convicted criminal applies for early parole. A judge may then take the victim's story into account before making a decision as to whether to grant parole.

This way, "the victim finally has a say," in helping the court decide whether a criminal should be released from prison before his or her time is served.

Such a report can be requested either by the judge, the Crown, or by the witness.

Victim Witness Services offices exist in Edmundston, Campbellton, Saint John, and Fredericton, with the four-year-old Bathurst office growing "slowly, but surely."

Mr. Lejeune works with an assistant in Bathurst, another in Tracadie, and a third in Newcastle, in addition to a part-time student and a secretary.

The local Victim Witness Services office helped a total of 285 clients in the fiscal year ended March 31, 1991, Mr. Lejeune said.

There were 168 witnesses, four child witnesses, 75 victims, and three child victims. In the same time period, Mr. Lejeune and his staff intervened with 35 contacts to friends and family of victims or witnesses, who were in need of counselling or assistance.

One development that has occurred since the office was opened, and which has Mr. Lejeune excited, is the 1989 institution of a 15 per cent surcharge on criminal fines. The surcharge, paid by the convicted criminal, goes toward the Victims of Crime fund.

"Some of the surcharge money will probably go into compensation," Mr. Lejeune said, adding crisis intervention centres may also be given access to some of the funds, which are held by the Department of Finance.

Intervention centres or other service-oriented organizations that cater to the needs of victims in the community apply for funding through the Solicitor-General.

The latest innovation to come into the hands of the local VWS office is a screen used in courtrooms to shield a victim witness giving testimony.

The screen, which is placed in front of the witness in the witness stand, allows the witness to be seen by others in the courtoom. However, the witness cannot see others.

The reason for this is to prevent an alleged offender on trial from making eye contact with the victim.

Mr. Lejeune pointed out the victim is often intimidated and harassed by the aggressor, making it difficult to testify.

"What I like is that the screen spares them this," he said, adding, "It's not easy for a kid who has been sexually abused to go into court and go into all the details."

Organizers are expecting to serve 6,000 breakfasts Friday

By JIM COUTURE
Northern Light Staff

The final details for Bay Breakfast '91 will be ironed out by organizers tonight.

Then all that remains is for the people of the Chaleur Region to support it.

"It could happen we forgot something, but if we do it again next year we'll know better," said Jeremie Theriault, president of the Council 1935 Knights of Columbus organizing committee.

Committee executive members will meet with representatives of the Chaleur Regional Hospital Foundation at 3 p.m. today Wednesday for a final briefing, then address fellow Knights tonight at 7 p.m.

The late meeting will be used to designate tasks on the morning of the breakfast, slated for Friday from 5 a.m. to 10 a.m. on Teteagouche Hill, next to the Bathurst Bowlarama.

The goal of the Bay Breakfast again this year is to raise funds for the CRH Foundation.

Since 1984, the provincial government has required hospitals to contribute 10 per cent of the purchasing cost of any major piece of hospital equipment. The CRH Foundation, since its creation slightly over a year ago, has undertaken to raise the necessary funding on behalf of the hospital.

A total of $120,000 was needed for the hospital to acquire a $1.2 Cat Scan unit, which allows doctors to view the inside of the body without the use of surgery. It allows them to see the body in slices, and gives a three-dimensional image instead of the superimposed image of conventional x-rays.

Last year's Bay Breakfast raised $43,167 towards the hospital's share of the cost, and organizers of this year's event would like to see the bill wiped clean come Friday noon.

"We'd be satisfied with $90,000," Mr. Theriault said.

"Sickness doesn't hit only the rich or only the poor; it hits everybody. That's why we're all working together on this this year, and that's why I'd like to see everyone support it."

A 40-foot by 80-foot tent was erected on the Teteagouche Hill site this morning, along with a 30-foot by 50-foot wing, which can hold up to 250 people.

About 80 volunteers helped out last year, and "this year we'll need a lot more than that," Mr. Theriault said.

The major help in doling out the breakfasts has always come from the CRH employees, although the seven councils of the Knights of Columbus — between Allardville and Pointe Verte — will be working hand-in-hand with them this year, resulting in most of the manpower.

All food has been donated for the event, with 6,000 breakfasts expected to be served this year, compared to 5,500 last year.

Breakfasts consist of bacon, eggs, tea biscuits and coffee, and are priced at $2 apiece, although larger donations will be graciously accepted. A tax receipt will be given upon request for donations exceeding $10.

SPONSORS

Publicity for the event was provided by The Northern Light newspaper, and CKLE-FM and CKBC-AM radio stations, all of Bathurst; L'Acadie Nouvelle newspaper and CJVA-AM radio, both of Caraquet; CKRO-FM radio in Pokemouche; and CHSJ-MITV television in Saint John.

Suppliers include Save Easy stores, Sobey's, Village Food Stores, Robertville Co-op, Provigo in Petit Rocher, Northumberland Dairy, Baxter Dairies, McDonald's Family Restaurant, Theriault's Grocery in East Bathurst, Dixie Lee, C.L. Petition on mini-homes received by city council

City council will await word from the administration, with regards to a petition against the installation of mini-homes in an East Bathurst neighborhood.

Council accepted the petition, containing about 100 names, at its regular meeting Tuesday. The names represent residents of St. Mary's Avenue, Packard Street and Currie Street, who object to the installation of mini-homes and trailers at the St. Mary's/Packard intersection, the petition reads.

Discussion of the petition was not permitted, because procedure allows only that council adopt a motion to accept the petition for further consideration.

However, city councillor Harvey Boucher explained the residents "were quite upset that mini-homes were placed in front of their homes," and want to block any further installations.

He said they are concerned that the value of their properties will drop as a result of the mini-homes and trailers, which he said are located directly across from Packard Street.

City manager Bob Bouchard said the matter will be brought back to council for debate once it is studied by the administration.

Elsewhere in the meeting, council voted to amount a subdivision development agreement with Squire Green Inc.

The amendment extends the Aug. 31 deadline the city had set for the installation of services and the correction of deficiencies at Squire Green subdivision.

City planning officer Marc Boufard said the developer had failed to complete the installation of a seal coat of asphalt and streetlights, and to correct "some deficiencies," by the deadline.

The city set a new Aug. 31, 1992, deadline, subject to receiving guarantees and $75,000 in bonds.

Tuesday's meeting also saw a $159,109,000 tender awarded to Doucet's Landscaping Ltd., for the excavation of the city's upper reservoir.

Councillor Gerry Doucet, who has a family connection to the company, did not take part in the vote because of a possible conflict of interest.

Meanwhile, councillor Marcelle Mersereau did not take part in the meeting at all, to avoid the perception of a possible conflict of interest.

Mrs. Mersereau, who is running as a Liberal candidate for Bathurst in the Sept. 23 provincial election, informed council she would not be attending the next three council meetings for the same reason.

MORAIS - In loving memory of our dear son and brother, Shawn, who passed away suddenly on September 8, 1990.

Beyond our smiles lies a tear,
For a son & brother we loved so dear.
It isn't what we write Shawn,
Or even what we say,
It's what we feel within our hearts,
As we think of you today.
You can't come back to us,
We know that this is true,
But some day Shawn,
We'll be a family again.
In the hands of the Lord,
We'll come to you.

Sadly missed and never forgotten by those who loved you most of all.

RUSSELL- In loving memory of Joseph Russell who passed away Sept. 6, 1989.

I wish we could have known
But death came to you so fast
When I kissed you just before you died

We've carried on without you
But its never quite the same
We talk about you every day
It helps to ease the pain.
You achieved the things you wanted
And knew life at its best
You, you've left all life's cares behind
And gone with God to rest.

Petit Rocher cyclist happy with national performance

Petit Rocher's Luc Arseneau finished in 37th place at the National Junior Road Cycling Championship in Bromont, Que. recently.

And while he knows full well he could have finished much higher, he is satisfied considering the circumstances surrounding the road race.

After covering barely three kilometres in the 98-km run through a tough, mountainous course, Luc found himself caught behind an eight-cyclist pile up. Although he didn't fall, the ensuing delay caused him to lose sight of the lead pack, and a potential finish in the top 20 was lost.

"That's why I was proud to finish at 37th; I caught up to them quite a bit," said the 18 year-old during a recent interview.

His three teammates with the New Brunswick squad all finished between 21st and 27th spot in the 106-man field. The tough course resulted in only 55 cyclists making it to the finish line.

This national competition was the last as a Junior for Luc, the son of Fernand and Dorina Arseneau, with his 18 years now lofting him into the Senior ranks.

Luc's next goal is making the provincial Senior team, with that followed by a much-hoped-for spot on the New Brunswick Canada Games team. The Canada Games are slated for Kamloops, B.C. in 1993.

Luc has a better than average chance of making both teams, thanks to steady coaching from Moncton's Valmond Cormier and Stephane Babineau.

The New Brunswick Junior team is coached by these two, as well as the Velo Arcadia club team, of which Luc is also a member. The Moncton men will also be coaching the Canada Games team, and one of them is a teacher at Université de Moncton, where Luc is entering the recreation program before he branches off into sports science.

"That's why I was proud to finish at 37th; I caught up to them quite a bit."

His immediate goal, however, is to make the Senior team.

"I'll try to make the team in my first year next year and go to the National Seniors (championship)," he said.

In the meantime, he'll begin weight training in December in preparation for next summer's schedule of Senior races. Even if he doesn't make the Senior team, he will continue training with his coaches in preparation for the Canada Games.

In the meantime, he's been earning the necessary cash for trips to Senior meets through his bicycle shop, Velo Luc, located in Petit Rocher.

Beresford 'Fox' run Sept. 15

All participants in the 11th Annual Terry Fox Run in Beresford will be running not against the clock, nor against someone else--but against themselves.

All participants in the annual fundraiser are encouraged to set personal goals, both in money raised and the time it takes them to run the course. This is to encourage runners to push themselves further, such as Terry Fox did in 1980 as he tried to run across Canada after losing a leg to cancer.

The annual run is a fundraiser for the Canadian Cancer Society, with all money collected used for cancer research.

The Beresford run is set for Sept. 15, beginning at 2 p.m. Participants will leave on the five-kilometre trek from the Beresford Municipal Building parking lot, up to the Beresford Sportek, and back again.

There were 74 participants in last year's run, which raised about $900.

Organizer Therese Blanchard will be meeting with students at Abecedaire and Carrefour Etudiant once classes begin to see about getting them involved. She proposes collecting 25¢ from each student, and getting them to perform the run during a subsequent physical education class.

She has also met with about 30 businesses and service clubs, proposing that a collection be taken up among employees or members and having at least one representative from each in the Sept. 15 event.

Refreshments and certificates will be presented to runners at the end of the run.

Registration forms may be picked up at most businesses within the town of Beresford, or from Mrs. Blanchard at 542-9544.

TOP SWIMMER

Kim Tremblay of the Bathurst Aqua Ducks summer swim team received the Kelly Young Memorial Award at the team's annual awards banquet, held Aug. 28 at the Bathurst Sports Chalet. The award is presented annually to the best overall female swimmer on the team. Kim, the 12 year-old daughter of Peter and Murielle Tremblay of Bathurst, is shown being presented the award by Bathurst Aqua Ducks president Francois Doucet.

Terry Fox runners needed

Participants are being actively sought for the 11th Annual Terry Fox Run, scheduled for Sept. 15 in Belledune.

Beginning at 10 a.m., the event will take participants from the Belledune United Church in Lower Belledune to the Belledune Municipal Hall. Refreshments will be served at the hall after the event.

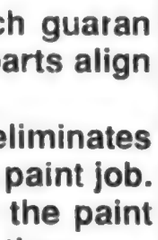
The goal for the upshore community this year is $2,200.

For more information, contact either Theresa Esliger at 237-2322 or June Culligan at 522-2148.

Monday deadline for Chamber golf tournament

Gowan Brae Golf and Country Club will set the scene for the Bathurst Chamber of Commerce and its gala event of the year--the Jubilee Classic '91 golf tournament.

Co-sponsored with the Chaleur Regional Development Commission, the Sept. 13 event will be a fun day for all who register by Monday, Sept. 9.



The program includes an 18-hole Texas Scramble golf tournament, which gets underway with a shotgun start at 11 a.m. Prizes totalling $45,000 will be up for grabs, and presented during a surf and turf dinner at 6 p.m.

The second part of the program will be the Silver Jubilee Draw, for a total of $5,000 in prizes. They include cash, Air Nova tickets, and valuable door prizes. Tickets for this draw are now available at $20 each from any chamber member or at the chamber office, at 498 King Ave.

Registration for the Jubilee Classic '91 golf tournament is $30 plus green fees, if applicable. Tickets for the surf and turf dinner only--for non-playing guests--are available for $15 each and must be picked up on or before Monday, Sept. 9.

In view of possible interruption of postal service, registration for the golf tournament and draw should be confirmed at the chamber office as soon as possible.

Prediction swayed by recent events

Out Of Bounds

By JIM COUTURE
Northern Light Sports

I take it back.

The Oakland Athletics won't be winning the World Series of major league baseball this year--the Toronto Blue Jays will.

I'm ashamed of myself for not selecting the Jays earlier this year while on my annual prediction binge, even though their past pennant drives--or lack thereof--left much to be desired.

I firmly believe the character they've shown of late in holding back the threats emanating from Detroit and Boston will serve them well come the final quarter of the season. As our parents always said, hard times build character.

It will be tough on the Jays though, and the race should go right down to the wire. I don't think the main threat is the Detroit Tigers either; I believe it'll come from the Boston Red Sox, who have yet to show their true colors.

Getting a healthy Dave Stieb back in the lineup would sure help, but they can certainly make do without this poster child for adolescence. The pitchers they have now are doing a fine job, and only the hitters need a wake up call to get the ball rolling (pun intended).

Joe Carter had better start doing something. And stand up straight; your posture is terrible.

About the only thing Roberto Alomar needs is a statue in his honor. I have not been impressed by a baseball player since first laying eyes on Kirby Puckett of the Minnesota Twins, that is until this little Puerto Rican came along. He has all the tools, and he's still relatively young by baseball's standards. He's my new hero, replacing former Expos and Red Sox pitcher Bill (Spaceman) Lee, although the latter is still the person I fashion my life around.

In fact, the only faults I see in the Blue Jays is their hitting at the bottom of the order, specifically from Mannie Lee (Manuel, shmanuel), Pat Borders, Pat Tabler and Candy Maldonado.

Straying from my subject for a moment, what were Maldonado's parents thinking about when they named the poor boy. Not his future, that's for sure. To name a boy Candy is like naming a girl Frank, as far as I'm concerned. Maybe that's why he's not hitting. It could be a deep emotional scar coming back to haunt him.

Don't laugh. I took psychology in school, so I'm perfectly qualified to make this assessment.

Anyway, my schooling and his s' pid name aside, I feel the Blue Jays have gotten over the biggest scare put to them this year. They will now coast along on a slightly bumpy ride to the American League Championship series, or my name isn't Cindy. And it isn't.

Confused? Stay tuned and it will only get worse.

Bathurst minor baseball comes to a close

The Blue Jays are the Beaver division champions of the Bathurst Minor Baseball Association.

The Jays flew undefeated through a double round-robin playoff tournament recently, with a tie the only blemish on their six-game record.

The Blue Jays won the championship with a 5-0-1 won-lost-tied slate, followed by the White Sox at 3-3-0; the Angels at at 2-3-1, and the Twins at 1-5-0.

The Blue Jays finished the season with a pair of wins over the Twins, the first coming Aug. 20.

Kirk Doucet tossed the winning pitches in the Jays' 11-3 win, with Kyle Jamieson tasting defeat.

Serge Duguay was the star of the game, however, stroking a triple and a single, stealing home, and throwing three runners out from his catcher's position. Brian Jagoe hit a single to pace the Twins' offence.

The Twins were again the victims Aug. 22, when the Jays won 11-6 behind Serge Duguay's pitching heroics. Brian Jagoe was tagged with the loss.

Serge Duguay also had a hand in the offensive end of the game with a double and two singles, while teammates Denis Theriault hammered out three singles. Raymond Boucher stroked a triple and scored twice.

The White Sox and the Angels split a doubleheader Aug. 22.

The first game saw Bruno Doucet of the White Sox pitch his way to a 10-7 victory over the Angels' René Mazerolle.

Rodney Chiasson was the offensive star of the game, stroking a grand slam home run; while Neil Daigle poked two singles and scored once in a losing effort.

The Angels defeated the White Sox 4-1 in the late game, with Scott Donnelly striking out seven of the 11 batters he faced to earn the mound

Dear Sports Editor,

The Bathurst Minor Baseball Association held a field day on Aug. 24.

Having been given responsibility of organizing lunch for this event, I would like to extend a sincere thank you to the many Bathurst merchants for their generosity. They include Jamieson's Save Easy in East Bathurst, Speedy Propane, Tim Horton's, Hostess, Frito-Lay, Ben's-Lane's Bakeries, Kraft Foods, McDonald's Family Restaurant, Burger King, Pizza Delight, Pizza Plus, Greco's, Kentucky Fried Chicken, Subway, John's Gas and Grocery, and Big River Sports and Equipment.

The day could not have been the success it was without the help of the many volunteers who worked constantly throughout the day.

Thank you, one and all.

Jean Daigle

Local dancer one of only 20 from across Canada to win scholarship

Monique Larocque is in for a treat, thanks to a dancing scholarship won in Toronto recently.

She was one of only 20 students chosen from throughout Canada for the special award--the only one from New Brunswick--from among 200 students ages nine to 12.

She was awarded the scholarship in Toronto on Aug. 7.

Her scholarship will see her travel for five weeks in major cities such as Las Vegas, Denver, San Francisco, Cincinnati, Orlando, New York, and others.

Her task will be to help students taught by such teachers as Scott Benson, instructor to Michael and Janet Jackson; Suzy Miller, who has choreographed many MTV music videos, including Diana Ross' "We Are The Children"; and many more well-known teachers from the United States.

Monique is the 12 year-old daughter of Roger and Lilianne Larocque of Allardville, and has taken dance lessons from DeGrace Diamond Dance Studio for the past five years.

She was one of 36 students from 3D Studio taking in the event in Toronto.

TOP DANCER

Sandhya Satya, 15 year-old daughter of Dr. B.S. and Indira Satya, was recently awarded the Dancer of the Year Trophy from 3D Studio, by instructor/owner Carol DeGrace.

Sandhya has been dancing for the past eight years.

Beresford Aces win Oldtimers title

The Beresford Aces have become the first team to win the Beresford Sanford Boudreau Memorial Gentlemen's Baseball Tournament twice.

OFF TO MONTREAL

Held Aug. 23 to 25, the annual Canada Employment and Immigration Commission Provincial Softball Tournament was good to Irene Losier. She won a round-trip for two to Montreal, compliments of Air Nova, in a lottery draw designed to raise funds for the tournament. Over 22 teams from throughout the province took part in the three-day event, hosted by Bathurst. Pictured from left to right are Line Saulnier, president of the CEIC Softball Committee; Irene Losier; Ivan Smith, committee member; and Carole Doucet, representing Air Nova in Bathurst.

(Northern Light Photo)

The Aces accomplished the feat by defeating the Petit Rocher Braves 12-10 in the final Aug. 25, thanks to a pair of runs in the top of the 10th inning.

The Aces last won the event in 1988, its initial year, with Petit Rocher claiming the title the following year, and the Neguac Merchants last year.

The Aces used five pitchers in earning the victory, although Len Leger was credited with the victory.

Top hitters for the Aces were Jean-Guy Pitre, with a double and a single; and Leger, Camille Frenette and Arthur Comeau, each with a pair of singles.

David Cormier, one of five Petit Rocher pitchers in the game, was tagged with the loss.

Top batters were Ronald Doucet, with three singles; and Jean Boudreau, with two doubles.

Beresford had made it into the final thanks to a 13-7 victory over the Belledune Silver Kings Aug. 24, while Petit Rocher defeated the Neguac Merchants 7-3 in the other.

The consolation final between the Bathurst Jets and the Caraquet Mooseheads was also played Aug. 24 at the Beresford ball field, with the Jets scoring two runs in the bottom of the seventh inning to squeak out a 5-4 victory.

The Softball Challenge final, pitting Nigadoo R.H. Frenette against the Petite-Rivière-de-l'Ile Bradors, will be played at a later date.

The Most Valuable Player balloting among Beresford Aces players finished in a tie, with Len Leger and Robert Doucet having their names inscribed on the Sanford Boudreau Memorial Plaque.

Road to championship bout a long one for some fighters

On The Ropes

By "Wild" BILL HUDON

Flashback to Bathurst, Sept. 26, 1953.

Pitcher's Pub takes lead

Pitcher's Pub and Eatery took a 2-1 lead in their best-of-five quarter-final series against P.J.'s Pub Aug. 27.

The South Bathurst Alpine Softball League playoff matchup saw P.J.'s fight back to tie the game at eight with four runs in the bottom of the seventh inning. However, Pitcher's Pub scored the eventual winning run with a sacrifice fly in the eighth inning, and held on for a 9-8 win.

Alvin Sonier lay claim to the pitching victory, with the loss handed to Steven Christie.

Mike Lavigne paced the winner's attack with a three-run homer and a single. Bernie Allain stroked a home run and a single for P.J.'s Pub.

Local boxer Harry Bill MacLean moved closer to a title fight for the Canadian Middleweight crown here Friday night, as he took a decision over ring-wise Arnold Fleiger of Chatham at the Bathurst Arena.

Ringside officials gave MacLean all but two of the 10 rounds, as the Bathurst Battler showed a decisive edge over his opponent.

The big, burly Chatham fighter, a veteran of more than 100 bouts, was game in his match with MacLean but took a bad beating. Fleiger was cut badly in the seventh round, and was floored twice in the 10th.

MacLean used his right hand sparingly, jabbing and countering with his left in outpointing his opponent.

On the same card, Harvey (Kid) Hornibrook boxed a four-round exhibition with Dalhousie's Lummy Plumiter.

In our world of boxing, a lot of boxers have had to fight many times before they got a title shot.

Archie Moore, the man Yvon Durelle almost beat for the Light-heavyweight championship of the world, fought 155 times before he got a title fight. Carlos Monson of Argentina had to fight 81 times before he fought for the Middleweight title.

Now, getting to the Jeff Fenech-Azumah Nelson robbery. Judges prevented Fenech from winning his fourth world title by calling the fight a draw. Maybe it's time to judge the judges.

Will the real winner please stand up! Yes, you are right, Fenech of Australia was clearly the winner. Fenech won his first title in only his seventh bout.

BRITISH LEGENDS

Even after falling in five rounds to Mike Tyson in 1989, Frank Bruno remains one of England's most beloved sports figures.

Although Tyson's handlers are supposed to curb the ex-champs drinking, Tyson told them to back off when he visited a Manhattan cafe in May and ordered two bottles of booze. The bartenders were more than delighted to keep his glass filled, and for that he tipped each of them $20.

LOCALLY

The Bathurst Boxing Club is now open, and the club's executive will soon hold its yearly meeting.

The club is located behind city hall on St. Andrew Street. The cost to register is $15 a year for Juniors, $27 a year for Intermediate, and $30 a year for Seniors.

Beresford Schooners win provincial crown

The Beresford Schooners are once again the New Brunswick Intermediate A baseball champions.

The Schooners claimed their second consecutive provincial title in Dalhousie over the weekend, and their fifth since 1981, with a final game victory over the Chatham Ironmen.

Gilles Pitre's pitching arm earned him the tournament's Most Valuable Player award.

The double-knockout affair pitted the Schooners, champions of the Restigouche Intermediate Baseball League; the Ironmen, winners of the Miramichi Valley Baseball League championship; the Lorneville Labatt Blues, champs in the Southern New Brunswick Baseball League; and host Dalhousie Dodgers, members of the Restigouche league and hosts of the provincial showdown.

The Schooners began the weekend with a 6-0 victory over the host team, with Gilles Pitre earning the win and paving the way to his eventual MVP status.

Top hitters for the local team were Gilles Proulx, with four singles, and Johnny Grant, with a home run and a single.

Barry Lagacé was on the mound in Beresford's second win, an 8-3 decision over the Lorneville Labatt Blues.

Marcel Paulin powered the Schooners to victory with a double and two singles.

The Schooners only loss of the weekend was a 3-1 setback inflicted by the Chatham Ironmen, thus setting the stage for the do-or-die final.

Chatham, having lost a previous tournament game, had to defeat the Schooners twice in order to claim the championship.

The first win was the 3-1 decision previously mentioned. The second win did not come about.

Gilles Pitre turned up the juice and proceeded to mow down the opposition, finishing the game with nine strikeouts, one walk, and silencing the Ironmen on only two hits.

Top hitters for Beresford in the championship game were Gilles Proulx, with a double and a single, and Eric Paulin, with a solo home run.

The Schooners have won the provincial Intermediate A title in '81, '83, '85, '90 and '91, and will embark on a trip to Nova Scotia Sept. 14 and 15 to try to nail down a second Maritime championship.

The Schooners won the Maritime title in Beresford in 1989, and will try to duplicate that feat with a victory in Clark's Harbor, N.S.

Team members would like to thank the many fans for making the trek to Dalhousie over the weekend, and for their continued support throughout the year.

City softball semis winding down

Finalists will be decided in the Fabrication of Plaques City Softball League come week's end.

As of Monday, Penguin Club was leading C&G Smith Trucking three games to one in their best-of-seven semi-final series, while B.J. Furs and Bistro Terrasse were tied 2-2 in theirs.

Bistro evened up its series with B.J. Furs at one game apiece Aug. 26 with a 12-3 trouncing, thanks in large part to winning pitches thrown by Robbie Arseneau. Robert Frenette was handed the loss.

Mike Lovegrove led the winning side from the plate, with a double and two singles, while Emilien Roy led the losing side with a triple.

The late game saw the Penguin Club tie its series with C&G Smith Trucking at one game apiece with a convincing 12-4 decision. Raymond Doucet was credited with the pitching victory, while Carl Smith was tagged with the loss.

The Penguin Club made it two in a row with a 9-6 victory over C&G Smith Trucking on Aug. 27. Louis Theriault was the winning hurler in this one, with Carl Smith going down to defeat.

Terry Chiasson and Marcel Thibodeau wielded the hot bats for Penguin Club, stroking a triple and a pair of singles each, while hot bats in C&G Smith Trucking's lineup were held by Carl Smith, with a triple and a single, and Eric Duguay, with three singles.

The late game saw Bistro Terrasse take a 2-1 lead in its series with a 9-7 win over B.J. Furs. Robbie Arseneau tossed the winning pitches in this game, with Eddy Couture tagged with the loss.

Roger Arseneau stroked a homer, a double and a single to lead the winning effort, with Bobby Theriault hitting a triple and a single for B.J. Furs.

Penguin Club took a decisive 3-1 lead in its series with a 9-4 victory over C&G Smith Trucking on Aug. 28, with Louis Theriault earning the mound win and Bruce Smith the loss.

Donald Comeau lined a triple and a single to lead all batters on the winning side of the field, while Kevin Peters poked a double and a single for the losers.

B.J. Furs evened up its series with Bistro Terrasse at two games apiece with a 9-7 victory Aug. 29. Robert Frenette was the winning pitcher in the contest, with Robbie Arseneau accepting defeat.

Louis Couture led the winners' attack with a triple and two singles, while Alan Leet produced a double and two singles on behalf of Bistro Terrasse.

The Penguin Club hosts C&G Smith Trucking tonight Wednesday beginning at 6:30 p.m. at the Bosca-Buraglia Field in East Bathurst, while at 8:30 p.m. B.J. Furs take on Bistro Terrasse.

The Wild Goose Guzzlers and Techno 90 are shown engaged in a Parkwood Schooner-Pizza Delight Softball League battle Aug. 28 at Centennial Park field in Parkwood Heights. On the left is Techno 90's Robert Chiasson, watching to see if the ball he just hit would stay in-bounds, while the photograph on the right shows Techno 90's Jean-Marc Finn coming in to score, avoiding the tag by the Wild Goose Guzzlers' Raymond Hicks while umpire Marcel Landry readied himself to make the call. Techno 90 won the game 9-6, thus knotting the best-of-five semi-final series at one game apiece. The winner of the series goes on to meet the winner of the other semi-final between Brasserie O'St. Pierre and the Right Spot Classics.
(Northern Light Photos)

Brasserie O'St. Pierre may be first to exit

The semi-finals are winding down in the Parkwood Schooner-Pizza Delight Softball League, and only one team has its back against the wall.

That distinction belongs to Brasserie O'St. Pierre, which finds itself down two games to one in its best-of-five semi-final series with the Right Spot Classics.

The Wild Goose Guzzlers and Techno 90 are tied at one game apiece in the other semi-final.

Brasserie O'St. Pierre had opened the series on a bright note however, defeating the Right Spot Classics 15-4 Aug. 26 to take a 1-0 lead. Paul Aucoin was the winning pitcher in this one, with Leslie Smith taking the loss.

Paul Aucoin helped his own cause with a home run, triple and single, while Marc G ilignard stroked a double and a single for the Classics.

The Right Spot evened things up the following evening with a 13-8 victory behind Roger White's pitching arm. Pat Murphy was on the losing end.

Kevin Duguay stroked a triple, double and two singles to lead the winners from the batter's box, while Jackie Roy did likewise for O'St. Pierre with a pair of singles.

The Wild Goose Guzzlers and Techno 90 met for the first time in the late game, a decisive 12-2 victory by the Guzzlers. Glen Morrison tossed the winning pitches in this one, with Christian Doiron tagged with the loss.

Bobby MacDonald hit a triple, a double and a single to pace the winner's attack. Robert Chiasson poked a triple to lead the losing side.

Techno 90 evened things up Aug. 28 with a 9-6 decision over the Guzzlers, with Christian Doiron earning the win and Glen Morrison the loss.

Roger Theriault stroked a double and a single to lead Techno 90 from the plate, while Chris Burns cracked a home run to pace the Guzzlers.

The Right Spot Classics took a 2-1 lead in their series with a 12-5 victory over Brasserie O'St. Pierre Aug. 29. Leslie Smith was on the mound to register the win, with Paul Aucoin going down to defeat.

Kevin Caissie provided the power at the plate with a triple and a double, while Paul Aucoin led Brasserie O'St. Pierre's attack with a home run and a single.

Sealy Enterprises prevail

Sealy Enterprises has swept the final of the New Bandon Men's Softball League.

Sealy downed Hornibrook Construction in three straight games last week to capture the best-of-five final, and the championship.

Jeff Wiseman registered the first of his three pitching victories Aug. 26, when he led his charges to a 7-4 victory over John Morrison and Hornibrook Construction.

Shane Good stroked a homer, a double and a single to pace the winner's attack.

Wiseman got win number two Aug. 28, an 8-4 doubling of Morrison and his teammates.

Keith Sealy stroked a home run and a double to lead Sealy Enterprises to this victory, with Troy Scott hitting a double and a single to lead the losing side.

The clincher was played Aug. 30, an 11-3 victory by Wiseman over Kirk Knowles and his Hornibrook Construction teammates.

Wiseman provided a triple and a single to lead his team from the plate as well, while Ken Hornibrook was the top hitter for the losing side with a pair of singles.

Chisholm earns rookie of the year honors

The second-half streak put together by local stock car racer Peter Chisholm has earned him Rookie of the Year honors at McKay's Speedway in Douglastown.

The honor was bestowed upon the Bathurst racer mostly for his tremendous surge in the points standings in the second half of the season, but also due to his winning seven straight races recently.

Chisholm put in another stellar performance during a special race held on Labor Day. He finished third in a preliminary race, second in one of the semi-finals, and seventh in the 25-lap feature.

Fellow Bathurst racer Kirk Jardine finished fourth in the feature event of the afternoon.

Chisholm finished the season with 268 points--only a couple points behind Jardine--giving him eighth place to Jardine's seventh. Chisholm had only 111 points on July 20, but earned almost 160 points from thereon in.

Winning the points title this year was Raymond McCrea of the Miramichi.

Parents want buses rerouted

Parents living in Lone Pine Subdivision will have to wait until late September for an answer to a lingering question.

District 42 board of school trustees read a letter during its regular monthly meeting Aug. 27 from four parents of the South Teteagouche subdivision. The parents are seeking the board's permission for school buses to enter the subdivision.

Buses presently enter the subdivision only to turn around. The parents propose that the buses circle the entire subdivision, which, at its furthest point, is 0.9 kilometres from the nearest bus stop.

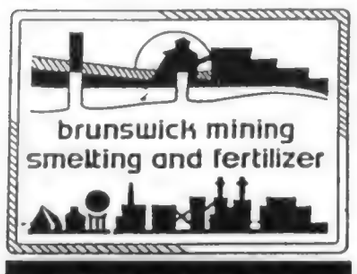
A motion calling for the tabling of the issue until the September meeting of the Board was called for due to the probability of additional similar requests.

Present regulations prohibit school buses from entering subdivisions, except to turn around.

A similar request arose earlier in the meeting from parents on Curry Road and Chaleur Street in Belledune.

School buses picked up four students on Curry Road last year, mainly because of heavy traffic associated with the construction of the Belledune Thermal Generating Station. A new road to the plant grounds has since been constructed, with the result being hardly any more traffic on the 0.5 kilometre Curry Road.

The trustees voted to discontinue the practice of entering the road, now picking up students on the main route.



Busing practises on Chaleur Street, a short distance from Curry Road, were also discussed. Last year, the school bus entered the street and travelled about 100 yards up the road to turn around. This year, however, the route has been changed, making it unnecessary to enter the street at all.

A motion to have a bus stop at the intersection of the main bus route and Chaleur Street was passed unanimously.

District 42 annual report says 1990-91 was a 'crossroad' year

District 42 superintendent Emery Goguen's annual report includes both good and bad news, in terms of reaching goals set by the district

"It would have been my sincerest wish to report a quantum improvement in our pursuit of Quality, Equity, Mastery and the Whole Child. Such is not the case," he said in his report, presented at the Aug. 27 monthly meeting of the District 42 Board of School Trustees.

"It could be said that during the 1990-91 school year, we merely held our own in regard to the mission of the district."

However, he vowed not to give up the fight towards excellence.

"Achievement results in District 42 ought to be awarded a passing grade already. But we cannot be satisfied until the equity issue has been properly addressed and the gap between the haves and have-nots has been reduced."

Mr. Goguen also reported that integration was completed in his district, with all students in regular classrooms. However, although physical integration has been accomplished, there still remains much of the more difficult task of academic inclusion and social acceptance.

The 1990-91 school year was a crossroad year in respect to school effectiveness in the district. The year saw a significant movement toward strategic planning for school growth in each school.

For several years, the school effectiveness process was mirred in necessary preparatory work in school effectiveness research, leadership development, needs assessment, and other similar activities.

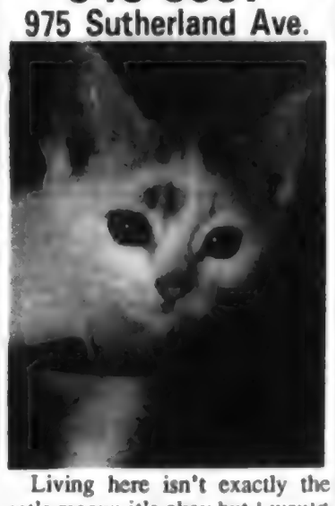
Now, each school is on the threshold of having a comprehensive, goal-oriented School Improvement Plan of three to five-year durations.

Schools, and what areas they have to improve, are: J. Gordon Chalmers Junior High School, decreasing the difference between low-achieving and high-achieving students; Superior Junior High School, improving student achievement in math and language arts for low-achieving students and to maintain achievement levels of high-achievement group; and Coronation Park Elementary School, improve student achievement in language arts, as well as maintain their achievement in other subjects.

Belledune Elementary School, increase student achievement among low-achievement groups, and to maintain or increase achievement levels of average and high-achievement groups; and Mary Gosnell Elementary School, increase student achievement in language arts and maintain or improve the students' present achievement in all subject areas.

It was noted that Parkwood Elementary School, due to a change in the school's administration, was not able to proceed with school improvement planning based on the effective schools research.

South Bathurst Elementary's plan did not move as quickly as had been anticipated. Much time had to to be spent on getting a commitment from those involved (i.e. staff).



The plan for Janeville Elementary School is not complete, but a good start was made in the form of a solid needs assessment and a comprehensive outline for the first draft. The planning process will continue early in the school year, and will result in a written plan by December.

The goal set for Bathurst High School in the school improvement process is to increase student achievement among low-achievement groups, and to maintain achievement level of high-achievement groups.

Over The Back Fence
By ELEANOR A. SCOTT
Call 546-5680 after 6 p.m.

Mrs. Reginald Knowles and her daughter Ellen Knowles, Clifton have returned home after spending five weeks in B.C.

While in Victoria they visited Mrs. Knowles' other daughter and her husband Ray Minkensky.

They also visited her son and his wife John and Debbie Knowles and baby Sara in Surrey, B.C.

This summer has been a good one for Mr. and Mrs. Rauleigh Ronalds, Carron Drive.

After an eight-year absence in Germany, Oromocto and Winnipeg, their daughter Audrey Gay and her family have moved to Bathurst.

Her husband Jake Bell, who is with the Canadian Armed Forces, is now working here as the Regular Support Staff Officer. Audrey and Jake and their children Erin, 7, and Jordan, 5, have taken up residence in Brideau Subdivision.

They were fortunate to be here in June to help Audrey's grandmother celebrate her birthday. Mrs. Olivia Ronalds celebrated her 93rd birthday at Foyer Notre Dame with three generations, her children, Rauleigh Ronalds and Elsie Jamieson, her grandchildren and great grandchildren present.

Artist David More, whose national solo tour, Forest — Fade to Silent, focused on the effect of acid rain on New Brunswick forests, has been awarded a Mayor's Recognition Award by the city of Red Deer.

David is married to former Bathurst resident Yvette Brideau.

David and Sharon Broom and boys have returned to Mount Hope, Ont. after a visit with her mother Mrs. Agnes Blackmore, Bridge Street

While in New Brunswick, they attended celebrations in Woodstock for the Nursing Class of 1966 from Carleton Memorial Hospital of which Sharon was a graduate.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Ward, Montreal (not Chatham) were visiting his mother Mr. Yvonne Ward, Bridge Street.

Jean and Bob Boylan, presently of Wawa, Ont., recently had the pleasure of attending spring convocation at Queen's University in Kingston for two of their children, Cynthia and Kevin Boylan.

Cynthia recieved an honors bachelor of arts with an English major. She will further her studies by attending Centennial College in Scarborough to obtain a diploma in book and magazine publishing.

Kevin earned a bachelor of science in metallurgical wngineering. He is now employed by Dofasco of Hamilton as a production engineer.

Kevin and Cynthia are the grandchildren of Mary and Lionel Duguay of Bathurst.

Gloucester Gourmet

Rachel Kersys has little time for hobbies since taking over the manager's postion for the Bathurst Chamber of Commerce.

On the other hand, she enjoys her new life here, having left the hustle and bustle of Montreal. She and her husband, Don, relocated to Bathurst a year ago.

Currently, Mrs. Kersys is busy organizing a golf tournament, in conjunction with the Chaleur Regional Development Commission, to raise funds for the Chamber of Commerce.

The tournament will be held at Gowan Brae Golf and Country Club Sept. 13, along with the Silver Jubilee Draw, which is also to raise funds for the Chamber.

However busy, everyone must eat; and the following recipe may well be the perfect way to cap off a hectic day.

CHINESE SALAD
3 tbs olive oil
3 tbs soya sauce
juice of 3 large lemons
2 tbs sugar
4 garlic cloves, minced
1 small onion, minced
pimentoes (to taste)
pepper (to taste)
1 slice round steak, about ¾ -inch thick, sliced against the grain into thin strips.

Comine all ingredients and marinate six hours. Prepare a salad of your choice, preferably with Romaine lettuce. Add steak to salad and use marinade as salad dressing.

Note: The acid in the lemon juice cooks the meat.

Cadets to register this weekend

The 640 Chaleur Air Cadets will hold registration this weekend.

Registration will be held Friday from 6:30 p.m. to 9 p.m., and on Saturday from 9:30 a.m. to 12 noon, at cadet headquarters in the basement of the Herman J. Good V.C. Branch No. 18 Royal Canadian Legion.

All youths, males and famale, ages 12 to 18, accompanied by a parent, are requested to come and meet the staff who will answer questions and explain the program.

A TOOL TO FIGHT HIGH CHOLESTEROL

The Bathurst branch of the Victorian Order of Nurses has purchased a Reflotron instrument which can be used to determine a person's level of cholesterol. The unit, the only one in northern New Brunswick, is shown here being used by VON staff nurse Marceline Martin (seated), and Marie Castiller of Saint John, sales representative for the company that sells the machines. Studies have proven that by lowering an individual's cholesterol level, the risk of coronary heart disease can be reduced. VON Bathurst will offer this preventive program on request for any group or company wishing to purchase this service. The VON was able to purchase the reflotron instrument, which cost about $6,800, through funds received from the Royal Canadian Legion, locally and provincially, and from private donations made during the past few years. An easy guide to sensible eating

Think Prevention!
A column on preventive health, written by members of the Dept. of Public Health.

(Editor's Note: This is the first in a series of bi-weekly columns on health-related subjects, prepared by representatives of the local Department of Health. A variety of topics will be covered to help you achieve a healthier lifestyle. This week's column was written by nutritionist Louise Collette-Bois.)

Good nutrition is the key to looking great and feeling good. Dietitians encourage you to follow Canada's Guidelines for Healthy Eating, which are as follows.

1. Enjoy a variety of foods. Include a wide variety of foods from Canada's Four Food Groups every day - milk and milk products; breads and cereals; meats, fish, poultry and alternates; fruits and vegetables.

Each food group provides your body with the different nutrients it needs daily. But there are differences within each group as well. By choosing a wide variety of foods from each food group, you can be sure you are getting all that you need to stay healthy.

2. Emphasize cereals, breads, other grain products, vegetables and fruits.

Emphasize doesn't mean "only have" but many Canadians eat too few of these foods. When choosing breads and cereals, whole grain is your best bet. This group also includes rice and enriched pasta. Try to make grains and fruits and vegetables a part of every meal.

3. Choose lower-fat dairy products, leaner meats, and foods prepared with little or no fat.

We all need a certain amount of fat, but it's very easy to go overboard. To prepare foods without adding fat, baking, broiling, teflon-coated pans and cooking sprays are helpful. Also cut down on the amount of fat in a recipe and try using fat reduced spreads and dressing. Keep your milk choices lower fat and meat lean.

4. Achieve and maintain a healthy body weight by enjoying regular physical activity and healthy eating.

Physical activity doesn't have to be strenuous exercise like lifting weights. Try taking a walk or climbing stairs. There's a whole range of weights for a healthy body, but being too thin or too heavy can put you at risk for health problems.

Remember, the key to a healthy body weight is a combination of enjoyable regular physical activity, healthy eating and feeling good about yourself.

5. Limit salt, alcohol and caffeine.

Add flavor to your meals with spices and herbs instead of salt. Drink less alcohol; try non-alcoholic beverages instead, such as mineral water and fruit juices.

Preparing for the coming of winter

From my Window
A bird watcher's observations
By MARY GAUTHIER

During September I will be preparing my yard for my winter visitors.

Bird feeders will be cleaned and repaired, suet holders will be brought back out and I'll get in a large supply of sunflower and niger seeds. (I usually have 15 to 20 feeders around my house so birds can be seen from every window.)

Bird feeders should be placed at least five feet above the ground and near some protective cover like trees or shrubs.

I'll be at the City Farmers' Market selling my favourite type of feeder for the benefit of the Arthritis Society this Saturday. A bonus bag of sunflower seeds will be given with each feeder bought. (The Bathurst Agricultural Society kindly donated the sunflower seeds to the Arthritis Society.)

The bird feeders are priced at $10, all taxes included.

See you at the market!

Group wants thermal project to proceed

Concern over economic development in northeastern New Brunswick has led to the creation of a new lobbying group.

About 35 representatives of the business community and municipalities of the Restigouche and Chaleur regions, as well as the Acadian Peninsula, met Aug. 22 in Bathurst, said a release.

The result was the creation of North Development, a group co-chaired by Bathurst businessman Ian Oliver and Petit Rocher mayor Gerald Mallais.

Mr. Oliver said the main concern of the group is to see the completion of phase two of the New Brunswick Electric Power Commission's thermal generating station in Belledune.

"We get the feeling there is a possibility it might not go ahead," he said. Phase two involves the construction of a second generating unit.

North Development will immediately initiate a plan of action in order to ensure it gets done, the release indicated.

The sod was turned at the site of the 450-megawatt, coal-buring plant in December, 1989. The North Development release noted NBPower included the infrastructure for the construction of the second unit during phase one of the project, in order to avoid incurring extra costs.

However, since then, the completion of phase two has been taken off the utility's priority list.

In a telephone interview with The Northern Light, Mr. Oliver indicated North Development wants to make the provincial government aware of the need for job creation in northeastern New Brunswick, particularly in relation to the power plant.

City waits for response

The city of Bathurst is awaiting a response from the province following an Aug. 28 meeting to discuss funding for the civic centre.

Deputy Minister Paul Lorden was met in Fredericton by Bathurst Mayor Kevin Mann and a large delegation that included city councillors Harvey Boucher, Ross Aube and Gerry Doucet, retiring Bathurst MLA Paul Kenny and Bathurst Liberal standard-bearer Marcelle Mersereau, said a release.

The delegation pitched the multi-million dollar regional civic centre project in a one-hour presentation, which the release said was met with enthusiasm.

The civic centre proposal was unveiled this spring by the Halifax consulting firm of Sperry/McLennan. The centre, to be built on Douglas Avenue, includes two ice surfaces, city hall offices, canteens, and meeting room facilities. The existing city hall offices, located on St. Andrew Street, are to be converted to accomodate the Bathurst Police Department.

The amount of $5,017,000 was identified as the portion of the total cost that would be required as a contribution from both the province and the federal government, in order to make the civic centre a reality.

That amount is calculated in 1992 dollars, up from an earlier figure of $4,733,000 increased to reflect a six per cent provision for inflation.

The city's share is calculated at $5,460,000, of which $3,960,000 will have to be borrowed. Almost $1,060,000 is expected to be raised through local fundraising efforts, while a further $1.5 million will have to be borrowed to convert the existing city hall offices into a police station.

The delegation now awaits involvement from the Ministries of Municipal Affair, Supply and Services, and Tourism, Recreation and Heritage.

No indication has been given as to when a response is expected.

American economy has grave implications for this country

Your Business
By DIANNE MALEY
Business Analyst
Thomson News Service

The world's largest economy shrank rather than grew in the second quarter. The downward revision surprised forecasters and "should shatter any remaining illusion of an economic recovery."

The U.S. economy is like a wounded duck bumping along the water, says Lawrence Hunter, economist with the U.S. Chamber of Commerce. The implications for Canada are grave.

But there is a bright side. After a week of uncertainty and reversals, it now looks like interest rates have room to fall again. In time, lower rates should spur a rebound in spending.

This week, the U.S. Commerce Department lowered its estimate of second quarter gross national product. It now says the world's largest economy shrank rather than grew in the second quarter. The downward revision surprised forecasters and "should shatter any remaining illusion of an economic recovery," Mr. Hunter said. "We are almost certain to see economic stagnation continue into the foreseeable future."

Other forecasters agree. "I think the economy is in recession and is going to stay there until next year," Robert Brusca of Nikko Securities told The Associated Press.

SILVER LINING

That's the bad news. The good news is, prolonged recession will force policy-makers to lower interest rates again. Indeed, market analysts expect the U.S. central bank, the Federal Reserve Board, to cut its signal discount rate soon. This will make way for further, although perhaps smaller, cuts in Canadian short-term interest rates.

What has happened to the economy?

From the perspective of big business, an ideal world would be one in which workers are not the same people who consume their products. Multinational corporations enjoy this ideal to some extent. They manufacture goods in South Korea and sell them in the United States or Japan, for example.

But the U.S. economy consumes much of what it produces. Workers and consumers are one and the same. So when workers don't have a job, they stop spending money and the economy grinds to a halt.

"Consumers are going to be very cautious," says Jay Levy, a New York economic analyst. "There's still a great deal of unemployment."

For Canadian manufacturers, the situation is worse. They manufacture goods in Canada, where costs are high, and sell them in the United States, where competition is fierce. The jobless rate is even higher in Canada.

CONSUMERS BUST

Consumers, the traditional engine of the economy, are spent. In the United States, where consumer spending comprises roughly two-thirds of GNP, the ratio of consumer instalment debt to disposable income is near its historic high. Usually in recessions, consumers pay off debts and build a cash reserve, notes Ed Yardeni, chief economist with D.J. Lawrence in New York.

"The story is even more disturbing if we add home equity loans to consumer instalment debt," he said. "There has been virtually no improvment at all in consumer liquidity during the current recession".

In Canada, too, consumers are cautious about spending. After subtracting inflation, household income has been shrinking for years. You can't spend what you don't earn.

Meanwhile, John Crow, governor of the Bank of Canada, is keeping interest rates punishingly high. He is doing this to head off what he perceives to be a burst of inflationary wage demands, particularly from federal employees.

Still, Mr. Crow will be able to lean against the wind only so long. Interest rates will continue to fall until the duck is airborne.

Business is given an insight into government tendering

By MICHAEL J. BOURGUIGNON
Northern Light Staff

The government wants your business, and has paved an easily travelled road to the final contract.

The Chaleur Regional Development Commission set the stage last week with an information meeting to introduce the Supplier Development Service and the provincial government's program to promote Quality Assurance Partnership.

Speakers representing both the federal and provincial governments explained the ins and outs of bidding for government contracts. Information was offered on how the government announces tenders, and how Atlantic businesses can get into the competition.

The Supplier Development Service, funded by the Atlantic Canada Opportunities Agency, is geared toward improving business opportunities for Atlantic companies.

"It's to get more Atlantic businesses dealing with government and involved with tendering," said CRDC director Donald Bishop.

One way this is done is to offer a computerized service called bid-matching. It allows the SDS to keep track of all open public tenders that are issued, and match the requirements of each tender against the capabilities of registered suppliers.

The service means companies that may have an interest in bidding for a contract can be immediately informed of their opportunity to do so through a computerized bulletin board.

Since it began in September, 1990, SDS has received and processed over 1,000 open tenders per month from all four Atlantic provinces.

Representatives of local businesses had been invited to attend the Aug. 28 information session, which also included a presentation on quality assurance programs being promoted by the provincial Manufacturing Technology Centre.

QUALITY

The Quality Improvement Program has been developed by the Department of Commerce and Technology to help companies implement quality assurance programs, said MTC executive director Alan Young.

The mandate of the program includes providing an 80-hour course geared toward employees within a company who are responsible for quality management.

Being in a position to offer quality guarantees gives companies a competitive edge, Mr. Young indicated.

"If I was buying something, I would buy it from Quebec or Ontario or the United States, because these guys have (quality assurance programs)," he said.

Mr. Young has been travelling to information sessions such as the one held here last week, explaining to company representatives how to take advantage of training and funding the program offers.

New business venture aims at self-esteem for children

There are various programs aimed at building confidence and self-esteem among adults.

Such traits are equally important for children and teens, and a program new to Bathurst and the Atlantic Provinces is targetting those age groups.

The program consists of three separate sets of cassettes, one for children ages two to 11, another for teenagers, and a third for parents. The cassettes are distributed through a company called Family Awareness Group, which is represented locally by the husband and wife team of Bob and Carla Bouchard.

In an interview last week, Mr. and Mrs. Bouchard noted the value of positive thinking for children.

"It's so important...There are so many kids and teens with problems," Mrs. Bouchard said, noting the increased amount of pressure on young people in today's society.

The Family Awareness Group started in the state of Arizona about 10 years ago. It only came to Canada this year, and is based in Toronto. The Bathurst distributorship is only the second in the country.

The Bouchards became interested in the program while in Toronto for a seminar, and decided to become involved. Both have full-time careers (Mrs. Bouchard sells real estate and Mr. Bouchard is the city manager for Bathurst), but thought Family Awareness would be a good part-time move.

"We've always been interested in young people and children, and we saw the need for this kind of thing here," Mr. Bouchard said.

The couple participated in a week-long orientation seminar in Toronto and purchased a distributorship for the Atlantic Provinces. They are now looking for sales representatives; within six months to a year, they hope to have 10 to 15 representatives selling the program in Northern New Brunswick. Preliminary planning has already begun for expanding into Saint John and Moncton.

Each part of the three-pronged program consists of six audio cassettes and a book or guide. Some of the titles for the part of the program aimed at youngsters include Give Up Your Excuses and Learn From Your Mistakes. Other examples are Handling Peer Pressure and Coping with Authority (for teens), and How to Listen to Your Child and How to Develop a Responsible Child (for parents).

The packages have been deemed tax-exempt, because of their educational status. Mrs. Bouchard said she has discussed the program with local organizations involved with young people and even school officials, and the feedback has been positive.

"It's more than just for kids; it's a package for the family," Mr. Bouchard said.

The couple would eventually like to start a support group, complete with guest speakers, to complement the program.

DONATIONS SOUGHT

Cathy Roy, the eight-year-old daughter of Emery and Francine Roy of Robertville, is in hospital in Montreal for a liver transplant. The family is asking for donations, which can be made by calling 783-4051 or 542-1608.

VON gets machine for cholesterol

The Bathurst branch of the Victorian Order of Nurses has purchased a machine which can determine a person's level of cholesterol.

Known as the reflotron instrument, it works on a system based on "dry chemistry," said a release.

The unit makes the quantitative determination of 13 parameters of chemistry possible: cholesterol, triglyceride, urea, hemoglobin, glucose, etc.

The instrument not only gives an exact determination, but delivers the results immediately, allowing prompt care for those who must change their life style.

The VON was able to purchase the reflotron instrument, which cost about $6,800, through funds received from the Royal Canadian Legion, locally and provincially, and from private donations made during the past few years.

Studies have proven that lowering an individual's cholesterol level reduces the risk of coronary heart disease.

Healthy individuals can only be optimally motivated to take part in screening programs if they are given their results on the spot, said the release.

If a person is aware of their cholesterol level, then he or she can take action if the results indicate a "high risk factor." VON will refer individuals as needed to their family physician.

VON Bathurst will offer this preventive program on request for any group or company wishing to purchase this service.

For further information, call Veronica Ratchford at 548-2448.

District 41 won't quit fight for new buses

The District 41 Board of School Trustees plans to go back to the mat to get two new buses from the province.

Trustees of the French school board were not pleased with the Department of Education's refusal to supply the district with an additional bus, and to replace one currently in use but considered too small to handle the passenger load.

The board had asked the province to replace a 72-seater with an 84-seater.

Instead, the department informed the board that is would allot an additional 100 kilometres of travel per day for the whole of the district.

The trustees discussed their dissatisfaction at the Aug. 27 board meeting.

While they agreed to send a letter to thank the department for the extra mileage, they voted to let the department know the refusal is unacceptable, and reiterate the request.

Meanwhile, the French school board is "very confident" as it prepares for the first year of public kindergarten, said assistant superintendent Maurice Doucet.

As of the time of the meeting, 29 students were enrolled in 16 kindergarten classes, which are to be housed in existing district schools

POET'S NOOK

A child's rights

A child should have a right to speak
Their own opinion.

A child should have a right not to be
The target for sick people.

A child should have a right to say no!

A child should have a right to be able to walk Around without the fear of being hurt
by some sick person.
If all of this could be true.

A child would have a right to have to Never say no again!!!

They would have a right to laugh,
Smile and have fun.

Good and bad

This world is filled up with many a kind;
Some people are good, some are not.
If you search hard enough, I think you will find,
That the good outnumber the bad —
by a lot.

But it only takes one, to bring tears to your eyes,
So be careful sweetheart, every day.
Try to be able to tell a truth from a lie,
If you're not sure that it's safe, walk away.

Please talk to us darling, if something seems wrong,
We'll protect you as much as we can.
Something I hope that you've known all along,
You just ask, and we'll give you a hand.

When you grow older, as I know that you will,
This world will be a much better place.
The good that's in people, will be stronger still.
It will bring a warm smile to your face.

Remember as you grow, you are
"never" by yourself,
Together we will make it through.
No glistening treasure will ever bring Wealth that's as precious as the love
We have for you.

Editor's Note: The first of the above poems was written by 11-year-old Amber Cormier of Moncton, following the murder of a child in that city. The second poem was written in response by her father, Jim Cormier of Bathurst.

Political figure's life detailed in publication

Hedard Robichaud

Special to The Northern Light

Hedard Robichaud is readily acknowedged as among New Brunswick's most eminent figures. The very interesting story of his career, replete with illustrations, is told in the current edition of History Review, official organ of the Nicolas Denys Historical Society.

Mr. Robichaud's memoirs, which he graciously offered for publication, occupy the complete issue, which is more than double its regular size this time around. The work was launched at the Shippagan Marine Centre during that town's recent bicentennial celebration. Among those present for the occasion were 120 members of the Robichaud Family Association.

Entitled An Acadian Politician in the Fisheries' Service, this ambitious literary effort details the life and times of an illustrious Gloucester County son, who was in turn a fish exporter, civil servant, founding father of the New Brunswick Fishermen's Loan Board, MP for this constituency, minister of Fisheries in the Lester Pearson cabinet, a senator and an ambassador. Finally he became the Lieutenant-Governor of New Brunswick, the first Acadian to be so designated. He was prevailed upon to hold this post for a second term.

It was not always smooth-sailing for Mr. Robichaud. His course was beset with downs as well as ups. For instance, his family had to move 14 times during the course of his career.

Hedard Robichaud is generous in his praise of those who helped him along the way and those who assisted in the processing of his memoirs. First and foremost among the credits in both instances is his devoted wife and helpmate, Gertrude. Without her support none of his successes would have been achieved, he emphasizes.

Kudos also go to Gertrude for a lost single-handedly bringing up their family of nine over 14 different moves. This was due, of course, due to his many frequent absences.

Editor's Note: Copies of the Robichaud memoirs ($15 each) are available from La Société historique Nicolas Denys or from other sources including Book Village at the Supermall on St. Peter Avenue.

Making sculpture by carving

Art Talk

With Bathurst artist JEAN-FRANCES

Materials required: A soft bar of soap (Fels or Sunlight will do), small knife, vegetable peeler, vegetable grater.

This week, let's go to Mount Carmel Church and take a look at the sculptures we find there. There used to be an abstracted sculpture behind the altar Praying Hands now removed that was an interesting example of a modern carved wooden sculpture.

There remains a more traditional sculpture to the left as one faces the altar Mary Mother of the World. Both of these sculptures were carved from wood. The statue of Mary follows a tradition widely followed in Quebec, that of carved religious statue created for the Church in the New World.

Churches have often used sculpture through the ages to portray and idea or to portray teaching. In Europe during the Renaissance, many were carved out of stone or marble. Michelangelo was one of these artists. He worked to "release the form inside" as he carved at a block of marble. Look him up at the library and compare his art with work you find here or elsewhere.

Different materials as well as different times change the artistic expression.

Now try carving a sculpture of your own. Take a bar of soap and a simple idea that you wish to portray. Even starting by carving a beachball or football is a good idea. Remember, you are first trying to get to know your material. A vegetable peeler allows you to work slow, and some texture can be had with a vegetable grater.

What else can you use? Have fun and see you next week!

True Canadian series may be a dying breed

BY BOB REMINGTON

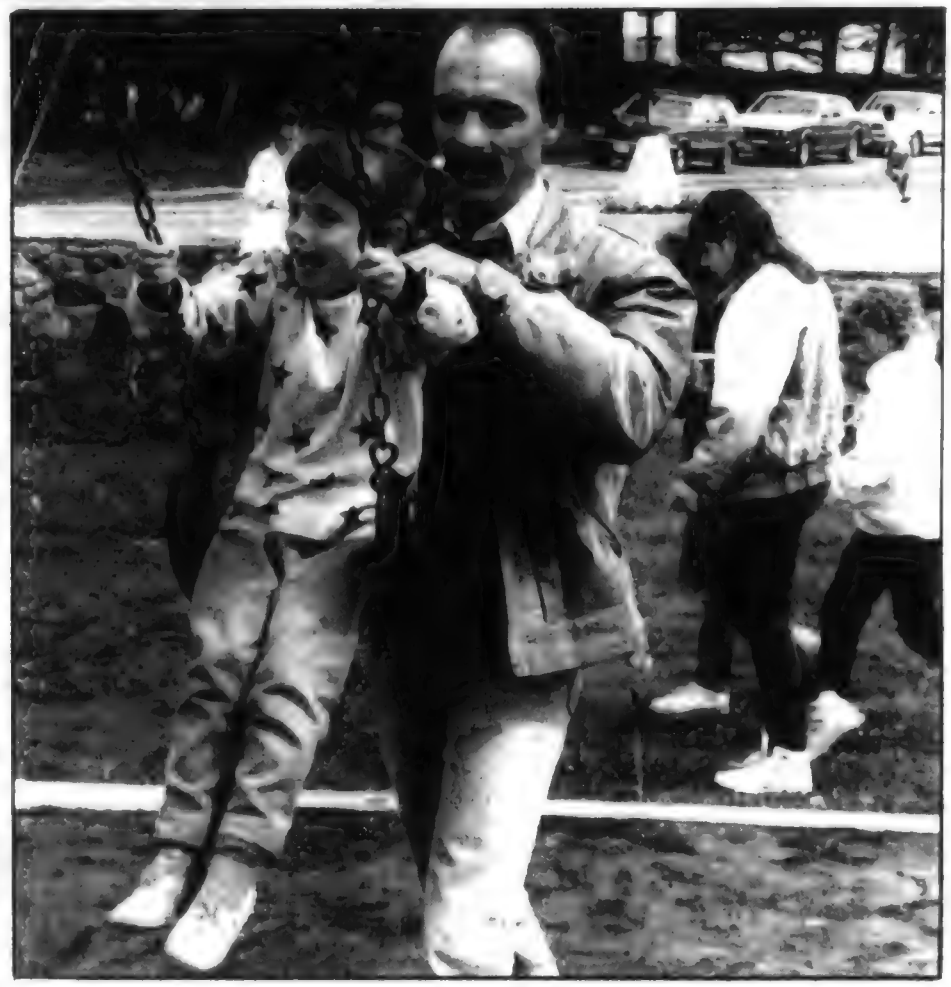
To say there are no new Canadian productions on TV this year wouldn't be quite fair. Movies, news and information programs and at least one new hour-long drama will pop up on Canadian networks this fall.

But regular prime-time series, the machine that drives the engine of television, are in short supply from Canadian producers this year as networks face the recession blues and, in the case of CBC, massive government cutbacks.

CBC has no new Canadian series this fall, and CTV has only one. But even CTV's new "Canadian" series is hardly what Canadian cultural nationalists would consider a stellar contribution to Canadian content. "Counterstrike," is a Canada-U.S.-France co-production that ran last year on American cable.

When it comes to real homegrown content on CBC and CTV, viewers will have to look to movies, sports and specials.

Rita MacNeil



Among CTV's new Canadian offerings this year is "The Sound and the Silence," a movie about Scotland-born, Ontario-raised inventor Alexander Graham Bell and the inventions he developed for his hearing impaired wife that eventually led to the development of the telephone. Buoyed by ratings success last year, CTV also has another Rita MacNeil special on tap for this season, as well as the Canadian Country Music Awards, children's specials and a number of made-in-Canada movies

Hip comedies "CODCO" and "Kids in the Hall" also return, but a beloved favorite, "Degrassi High," is gone. There will, however, be a two-hour "Degrassi" movie, as well as a six-part series about problems facing young people titled "Degrassi Talks."

Canadian movies will provide most of CBC's fresh Canadian content this year. "Conspiracy of Silence: The Helen Betty Osborne Story," comes from the producers of the highly rated "Love and Hate," which dramatized the Joanne Thatcher murder case. Three new episodes of "The Scales of Justice" will also return. The series of one-hour specials dramatizes landmark Canadian criminal cases.

Other Canadian movies include "Grand Larceny," a sequel to the five-year-old movie "Love and Larceny"; "Bethune," a movie on the legendary Canadian surgeon; "Palais Royale," a romantic adventure set in the 1950s music hall; "Golden Fiddles," a Canada-Australia co-production starring Kate Nelligan; and "I'll Never Get to Heaven," about a teen coming to grips with family and religion.

Beyond that, CBC has coverage of the Winter Olympics from Albertville, France. The network will also unveil "CBC Newsmagazine," a national supper-hour newscast hosted by Alison Smith.

LABOR DAY SWINGER

Diane Lavigne, five-year-old daughter of Charles Lavigne of Bathurst, was all smiles Monday, as she got a push from her dad on the Coronation Park swings. She was one of many children playing at the park during Monday's Labor Day games and celebrations. (Northern Light Photo)

The movie returns to CBC, on Thursday at 8 p.m. on Channel 4, and stars Gennie James as Alex, Craig T. Nelson as her father (writer Frank Deford), Bonnie Bedelia as his wife Carol, and Daniel Corkill as the Deford's son Chris.

The film was originally telecast April 19, 1986.

The film moves skilfully between past and present and follows Frank Deford's efforts to write a book that will accurately portray Alex's unique personality and strength of spirit.

Bluegrass 4 still sounding good after being together for 16 years

The Bluegrass--Sing New & Old Songs

The Bluegrass 4 have been entertaining folks in the Maritimes for the past 16 years, and during those years the band has taken many different directions and forms.

But whatever direction they take, when they head for a recording studio, you can bet they'll come out with a winner. New & Old Songs is just that, a winner.

The 4 are Eddy Poirier who sings lead and baritone and plays banjo, fiddle, guitar and mandolin. (Eddy also has several recordings out on his own, faturing his fiddle and guitar wizardry.) Francis Cormier plays guitar and sings lead, brother Vincent Cormier plays the stand-up bass and sings lead and tenor. The fourth member is Roger Hebert who plays mandolin, banjo and guitar.

Francis, Vincent and Roger were all once members of The Bluegrass Diamonds, a band which was well known among bluegrass fans. Together, this foursome produces the best bluegrass music one would find, wither it be here in the Maritimes, or in the State of Virginia.

On the album cassette, Eddy has written one song, "Until You Found Someone New" and two instrumentals, "Long Way From Home and "Cold Winter Blues," a tune which only our long winters could have inspired him to write. The 4 do a great cover of a song which was written for Bill Monroe's 50th anniversary of bluegrass. It was introduced on that TV special by Ricky Skaggs.

I like all selections on the album, but my favorite one is a cover of an old Hot Rize tune entitled "Just Like You," with Vincent on lead vocals. The project has just the right amount songs and instrumentals to keep the album exciting.

IN DIEPPE

The album is on an independent label and can be obtained by calling Eddy Poirier at area code (506) 384-8655. If during the coming fall, winter or spring you happen to be in the Moncton area, drop in to the Lafayette Beverage Room in Dieppe. The Bluegrass 4 have been playing there on Saturday afternoons for the past five years.

Until next week, keep whistling.

J. L. CONVENIENCE VIDEO REVIEW

By GREG MULOCK
Managing Editor

New Jack City

A gritty cop and dealer flick from last spring, New Jack City is vivid in detail, and realistic in its approach.

Rap star Ice-T plays a renegade detective, out to bust crack dealer Wesley Snipes (King of New York, Jungle Fever). That sounds like a formula shoot-'em-up, but in the hands of director Mario Van Peebles, it's anything but. Peebles lays out a story of greed and vengeance, told with a keen insight into the urban jungle. New Jack City is also a harrowing look at the tragedy of drug addiction, and at how the American legal system is failing in the war on drugs.

Director Peebles doesn't miss much: the viewer sees how the drug kingpin gains power, how his criminal empire works in a climate of fear and violence. We see what makes Ice-T's character tick, and witness the destructive power drugs have over the addict.

It's a message movie, but one doesn't feel preached to: there's lots of action and excitement, and Ice-T is an excellent anti-hero. Even Judd Nelson (St. Elmo's Fire looks good as Ice-T's equally anti-establishment partner.

Music fans will note the presence of singer Keith Sweat in a wedding scene, and Public Enemy's Flavor Flav as a dee jay. (A rap soundtrack serves as a Greek chorus for much of the plot).

Worthwhile viewing.

The Terminator

For all its sound and fury, Terminator 2: Judgment Day does not measure up to its predecessor. Reportedly the most expensive movie ever filmed, T2 is better than most sequels but some of the dialogue is laughable, as is the contrived sentimentality in Big bad Arnold's relationship with young Connor.

The original remains a classic sci-fi outing, and is worth watching again now that it's been re-released on video. Made for only $10 million, it has less special effects but more of a story. Arnold Schwarzenegger is well-suited to his role as killer cyborg, sent from the future to murder a woman who will father the leader of a revolution against machines. Relentless in his pursuit, Arnold shoots to kill and utters his immortal line, "I'll be back."

The plot concept is fresh, as opposed to contrived, and Arnold has never been better.

What more could you want?

Networks have diverse line-up of new TV films

BY JON BURLINGAME

With the number of quality network dramas dwindling, viewers must turn increasingly to movies and miniseries for teleplays of substance. The trends this season? More stellar casts than usual and a slight dip in true-crime dramas.

ABC stakes a claim to class by airing Neil Simon's own adaptation of his Tony-winning "Broadway Bound"; the cast includes Anne Bancroft, Hume Cronyn, Jerry Orbach and Jonathan Silverman. ABC also has Bob Newhart in "The Entertainers," Roseanne Barr in "Backfield in Motion" and Suzanne Somers in "Keeping Secrets," based on her own story of life with an alcoholic father.

Other fact-based two-hour dramas include "Last Wish" with Patty Duke, based on Betty Rollins' chronicle of the assisted suicide of her mother; "Marilyn and Me," about Marilyn Monroe's supposed 1952 marriage to writer Robert Slatzer; "Survive the Savage Sea," with Robert Urich and Ali MacGraw, about a family adrift in the Pacific; Richard Thomas and Charles Bronson in "Yes Virginia, There Is a Santa Claus"; and "Heroes of the Desert Storm," which boasts retired Gen. Thomas Kelly as its technical adviser.

It says something about TV in the '90s, however, when "Dynasty: The Miniseries" is the most eagerly awaited of ABC's four-hour programs. Most of the cast – including John Forsythe, Linda Evans and Joan Collins – returns for the finale that fans have awaited ever since the series was canceled two years ago. Also scheduled for four-hour airings: "Stay the Night," a murder story with Barbara Hershey, and an adaptation of Scott Turow's best-selling "Burden of Proof."

NBC, which successfully counterprogrammed sports events last season with movies adapted from popular women's fiction, has renewed its relationships with the authors. The NBC slate includes two Danielle Steel movies – "Daddy" with Patrick Duffy and "Palomino" with Lindsay Frost, both airing opposite CBS's baseball in October and a Jackie Collins mini, "Lady Boss." Following in the footsteps of "Fatal Vision" and "Blind Faith," both based on books by Joe McGinniss, NBC has optioned McGinniss' latest book, "Cruel Doubt," as a four-hour drama.

NBC's movie lineup also includes Dolly Parton in "Wild Texas Wind," her dramatic debut; Jessica Tandy in "The Story Lady," about a TV children's-show star; "Babe Ruth," with Stephen Lang as the baseball great (and Pete Rose as Ty Cobb); "Carolina Skeletons," a murder mystery with Lou Gossett Jr. and Bruce Dern; and for nostalgia fans, Barbara Eden in "I Still Dream of Jeannie," Robert Stack in "The Return of Eliot Ness" and Raymond Burr in two "Perry Mason" movies.

Your Week Ahead Horoscope

Forecast Period: September 8 - September 14, 1991

ARIES (Mar. 21-Apr. 19) — Forge ahead with that new project. Don't allow minor hassles with co-worker to set you back.

TAURUS (Apr. 10-May 20) — Do not waste time waiting for help. Ask and ask loudly for the assistance you deserve.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — Your health problems may generate from long-standing financial worries. Prepare a budget that you can live comfortably with.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — Jump into that endeavor that others have been avoiding. Rest for the body will come later; work until you have completed your task.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — You must come to a conclusion about that personal or business relationship that has been bothering you. Respond discreetly.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — A permanent move would not be advisable at this time. Follow your instincts regarding career choice.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) — Look for financial backing for that important project. You will receive it from the least expected source.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) — A close personal relationship turns sour. Do not dwell on what was; look forward to what will be.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) — Your life has become somewhat monotonous. Revive that romance, join that social activity, get out and have a good time.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — Family predicament causes problems for you though the worst is yet to come. Try to remain impartial throughout the dilemma.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) — Look behind that promotion and discover what will be expected of you. What looks good on the outside may be rotten in the core.

PISCES (Feb. 19-Mar. 20) — Don't be hurt by the remarks of one who does not matter. You can control your feelings. Remain confident of your abilities.

Rawlins Cross plays celtic rock

Rawlins Cross--A Turn of the Wheel

And now for something completely different.

Newfoundland's Rawlins Cross may not yet be a household name, but it's one to remember. The band's unique blend of celtic rock, infused with the sounds of such instruments as bagpipes, accordion and tin whistle, creates a new mode of entertainment that is being enjoyed by all or Canada's club circuit.

Rock Lines caught Rawlins Cross in the act last month at the New Live Penguin in Ottawa where they proved the credibility of their material beyond any shadow of doubt.

There's something to be said about a group of young men with the capacity to whip a crowd of otherwise normal club-goers into a step-dancing frenzy. This is what Rawlins Cross did, with original tunes, traditional jigs and reels and "celticized" renditions of Bob Marley's Three Little Birds and the foot-stomping country classic Jambalaya.

At the nucleus of Rawlins Cross are brothers Dave (vocals, guitar, mandolin) and Geoff Panting (keyboards, accordion, vocals).

The former writes the majority of the material, which at times recalls the same pop sensibilities displayed by South Africa's Johnny Clegg.

CREATIVE

This debut recording--released with assistance from the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation--offers a taste of the Panting brothers' creative writing talents, as well as the band's own versions of traditional bagpipe fare such as MacPherson's Lament and the raucous medley of Sleepy Maggie/Gravel Walk/Little Beggarman.

Ian McKinnon provides the moody bagpipe inflections, which reach a state of virtual euphoria on the latter and other tracks. Sleepy Maggie... caps off the outing, leaving the listener feeling transported to the moors of Scotland, in the midst of something special.

A Turn of the Wheel is available through distributors sporadically located across Canada, but writing to the band's management would likely be the surest way of acquiring a copy.

For the adventurous, the address is Rawlins Cross Productions Inc., 85 Barnes Road, St. John's, Newfoundland A1C 3X5.

HEALTH A VITAL GIFT

Ever since the first talks began about having a Ct Scan at Chaleur Regional Hospital, a tremendous interest was generated among the public of Region VI, and CRH physicians and staff. The construction of the new Ct Scan and nuclear medicine facilities began in the Spring of 1991. The project will cost approximately $4.2 millions and the building itself will cost $2 millions. The contract has been awarded to Basic Management of Moncton a subsidiary of A.C. Mallet.

The opening of the Ct Scan at the hospital will have a significant impact on the population of Region VI, which includes the Chaleur Region and the Acadian Peninsula. At the present time, patients from this region must travel to Moncton, St. John or Halifax for a Ct Scan examination.

The Ct Scan will enable diagnosis of several illnesses, therefore reducing the need to travel to other regions to have the tests. The Ct Scan should also help attract new specialists in the region. In this day and age, specialists need this kind of equipment to practice.

CT or computed tomography is an X-Ray procedure that creates cross-sectional images of an area of the body. The most common areas examined are the head, chest, abdomen and spine. Electronic detectors pick up the x-ray and feed it into a computer. This computer reconstructs the images.

Nuclear medicine is a study of the function of organs; this is done by giving the patient, either by mouth, veins or inhalation, a small quantity of radiopharmaceutical substance. This substance is a radioactive tracer that is known to accumulate in the particular organ of interest. After the patient has received the tracer, a special camera is used to detect the very small amounts of radiation given off by the tracer that has accumulated in that organ. The camera is usually interfaced with a computer for detailed studies.

A lot of things must be done before the official opening in the Spring of 1992. If everything goes according to schedule, the construction of the building itself should be completed in early December 1991. But the equipment, which includes the Ct Scanner, purchased last year from the Siemens company at a cost of over $1.2 millions, has to be installed. This will require at least four to six weeks. The staff also needs training to work with the new equipment.

Two new radiological technologist positions will be created with the opening of this unit. As for the nuclear medicine, the interviews are now being done for the selection of a Chief Technologist.

Things have changed a lot in radiology since 1972 when Chaleur General Hospital opened its doors. Pat Chiasson, manager of Medical Imaging, states, as a comparison, that 20 years ago all films had to be hand developed. It took an hour before having a dry x-ray film. Now they can have the same film in 90 seconds and in some cases, without touching it. With this progress, a better diagnosis can be provided and more patients can have tests. The images have improved tremendously in the last 20 years, says Pat Chiasson. "Smaller things" can be seen and patients receive less radiation.

But Pat Chiasson hopes that the opening of the Ct Scan and nuclear medicine will not be the end of the improvements in the Medical Imaging department. For example, cardiologists from the Isaac Walton Killam Hospital in Halifax do not come at Chaleur Regional anymore because they say the echocardiography machine doesn't do the job it should do. A new machine would cost $250,000. Other pieces of equipment should also be replaced. Some equipment date from 1972 when the hospital opened.

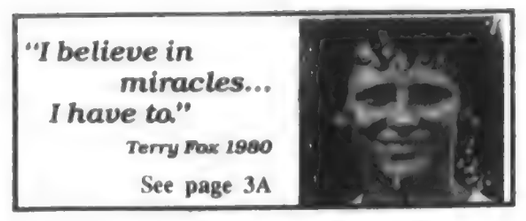
The Ct Scan will not eliminate other forms of medical imaging. Conventional procedures and methods such as ultrasound, IVP, Barium enemas will still provide basic diagnostic information. For example, because of its lack of radiation to patients, ultrasound will still be the method of choice in the initial routine investigation of the abdomen and pelvis.

In radiology, there are three forms of diagnosis; general radiography, tomography and fluoroscopy. These are different ways to obtain the images. All the machines do the same basic radiography. Some machines will just do one procedure, while some equipment will do the three. Tomography takes thin cuts or sections of an organ, but the image is not as clear as with computed tomography.

For example, for an x-ray of the kidneys, even with the Ct Scan in place, the use of traditional equipment will be necessary. With fluoroscopy, the radiologist can watch the image move.

But with the Ct Scan, better and more accurate diagnosis will be made. Some diseases will be diagnosed earlier than with some x-ray procedures.

While the Ct looks at the anatomy, the nuclear medicine shows how an organ functions. The radiologists can see if an organ is overactive or doesn't work enough. Heart problems, arthritis, diseases of the liver, pancreas, lungs, detection of strokes and brain damage, cancer, can all be diagnosed by nuclear medicine. The opening of the nuclear medicine unit will decrease the workload for the Moncton hospitals where patients of Region VI are now referred.



In 1989-90, more than 55,000 x-ray examinations were performed at Chaleur Regional Hospital. In addition to these tests, there will be approximately 5,000 exams for the Ct and 2,500 for nuclear medicine.

The Medical Imaging Department, as it is now called, has 11 full time and three part time technologists. There is two full time ultrasonographers. Ten clerical and support employees work full time and five work on a part time basis. There is a manager and an assistant manager. Two radiologists work full time in the department. The radiologists are the specialists who interpret the images and give a report to the attending physician. They also do fluoroscopy procedures and myelograms, where a dye is injected in the spinal cord.

Constant progress in the field of medical imaging at Chaleur Regional Hospital means that more patients will be diagnosed in the region and this will decrease the number of patients who have to travel to the south of the province.

Wages not the only issue for strikers

The Public Service Alliance of Canada strike is getting plenty of support in Bathurst, from both the union and the public.

"We're getting very good support from the membership," said area strike coordinator Julien Pitre.

Pickets were out in front of the Canada Employment and Immigration building Monday from 6 a.m. to 9 p.m. That strike schedule has since been continuing, on a shift basis.

Mr. Pitre said Tuesday the lowest number of pickets in the first two days of the strike was 40, while the highest was 115.

"We're getting about a ninety-five per cent turnout," Mr. Pitre said.

In addition, Mr. Pitre noted union members who are designated to work during the strike have reported that the public seems to be respecting the picket line, and staying out of the building.

"We got word from the designated employees that nobody is coming in; there are no scabs."

The PSAC called a national general strike Monday, mostly to protest a wage freeze that would see no raises this year, and three per cent wages in each of the next two years.

Mr. Pitre, however, noted the local union members have other concerns as well.

"We want the right to negotiate," he said, adding having an opportunity to discuss such issues as wages, contracting out and job security is an integral part of what the members here are looking for.

CALM SETTING

The mood on the picket line outside the CEIC offices, located in the Nicolas Denys building on Harborview Boulevard, has been relatively calm this week.

Management staff on its way in and out of the building has been greeted with boos and catcalls from the strikers, and Mr. Pitre noted photographs are being taken of those who cross the picket line.

While he said this latter move intimidates the line-crossers, the main purpose for taking the pictures is "for our memories."

He explained that to mean a union member who shows a letter proving he or she is designated to work will likely be disciplined by the union if it is discovered the letter has been falsified.

So far, though, everyone who should be on the picket line has been, he added

In addition to holding demonstrations at the CEIC building, the union will send what Mr. Pitre called "flying squads," to other locations this week.

That means groups of pickets will demonstrate outside smaller federal offices that have fewer unionized employees. The purpose of this is to show support for those employees.

"When there's only one person on strike, that person feels very alone," Mr. Pitre said.

The strike affects about 350 at the CEIC building, and several more at various offices in the city.

Public Service Alliance of Canada employees demonstrated outside the Canada Employment and Immigration Centre Monday, as part of a nation-wide strike. A public sector wage freeze is at the heart of the national dispute, but members here are equally concerned about the union's right to negotiate with its employer.

McKenna not committing to civic centre

Premier Frank McKenna was tight-lipped about possible provincial funding for the Bathurst regional civic centre Friday.

However, he was anything but pessimistic.

"I have no doubt in my mind that we'll be making an offer," Mr. McKenna told The Northern Light after a brief appearance at the 22nd annual meeting of the New Brunswick branch of the Canadian Institute of Mining, Metallurgy and Petroleum.

A delegation from the city of Bathurst presented a proposal to the province last week, asking for a $5,017,000 contribution to the project.

That figure represents about one-third of the total cost. The city hopes to get a similar amount from the federal government, while the remainder would be contributed locally through fundraising and borrowing.

Despite his encouraging prediction, Mr. McKenna would not make a firm commitment Friday, indicating it is too early in the game to make "any false annoucements."

"It has to follow one step at a time," he said.

"We have to do all the analysis leading up to construction."

Nothing sacred with BM&S cutbacks

The union representing Brunswick Mines employees hopes a future exists for laid-off workers.

"Hopefully, we'll see (them) come back," said Blair Doucet, president of Local 5385 of the United Steelworkers of America.

Mr. Doucet was referring to 42 employees laid off from their jobs at the Mining Division of Brunswick Mining and Smelting Corp. Ltd., as part of the company's cost-cutting program.

As of last week, 40 layoffs were carried out at the mines, and 50 were carried out at the company's Smelter Division, company spokesman Roger Clinch said.

Some were given recall rights, meaning they can be called back to work if needed, Mr. Clinch said.

Layoffs were carried out either by way of early-retirement or voluntary severance agreements. However, 42 hourly-wage workers at the mine were simply laid off, according to Mr. Doucet.

A committee has been struck to look into future possibilities for laid-off workers, he said.

Secondary training is one of the options being looked at.

Mr. Doucet noted a job-sharing program pitched by the union was rejected by BM&S.

The program would have called for workers to come in for shorter work weeks. The union reasoned that the program would save the company money, and would provide an alternative to layoffs.

CUT COSTS

The layoffs that have occurred are just one part of BM&S's overall cost-cutting program, the objective being to slash costs by 10 per cent.

"We're cutting everywhere," Mr. Clinch said.

"Everything from the most minor to the most major cost-cutting (measure)."

The program was put into effect Aug. 30, and there is no indication how long it will continue.

However, the company's objective is to cut the workforce down to 400 hourly positions at the smelter, and 900 at the mine.

The program was deemed necessary to offset the drop in mineral prices on the global market.

In its most recent quarterly report, released July 19, the company reported a net loss of $10.1 million, or 26 cents per share in the second quarter. That brought the net loss so far this year to $14.4 million, or 37 cents per share.

In comparison, 1990 saw earnings of $19.2 million in the second quarter, representing 49 cents per share. In the first six months of last year, the earnings were reported at $26.5 million, or 68 cents per share.

Low-income housing needed

The director of the Bathurst Volunteer Centre wants the city to develop a municipal housing program for low-income families.

"Just handing out food is not solving the problem," Mike Gendron said in a presentation to Monday's regular public council meeting.

Mr. Gendron said the Bathurst food bank, which operates out of the volunteer centre, has 500 area families on file. The situation is such that the food bank must turn away 40 per cent of those who come to it for help, because of a lack of supply to satisfy the demand.

The Bathurst food bank has frequently been the focus of community efforts to raise funds, and to gather food for needy families.

Earlier this year, employees of Via Rail in New Brunswick and Nova Scotia rallied to band together to collect about a ton of food for the centre.

But the root of the problem runs deeper, as does the solution, Mr. Gendron indicated.

LOW INCOME

Once the basic necessities such as rent, heating and electricity are paid, the average family of four on income assistance has less than $50 per week for food, he said.

He noted low income among families detracts from the well-being of the children, which he sees as a primary concern.

He said a prime contributor to the problem is housing, noting the New Brunswick Housing Alliance has a waiting list of some 160 families.

"It is time to address the issue of poverty," rather than apply a "bandage solution," he said.

Council told him it would consider his proposal of setting up a municipal program for affordable housing, and of forming a committee of councillors and representatives of the private, non-profit sector to study the problem.

Fire spreads out of control

A Downshore boating accident ended without injury Sunday, but resulted in the loss of close to two acres of shoreline property.

A group of five people had reportedly been fishing about a 100 feet from shore in Bass River, when their boat capsized by strong winds around 2:45 p.m., said assistant district ranger Clifford Glazier of the Department of Natural Resources and Energy.

The group swam to the Salmon Beach shore, where they proceeded to build a fire to keep warm.

"They were frozen, apparently," Mr. Glazier told The Northern Light, adding reports indicated the boat had been damaged and the group used its wood to build the fire.

The flames spread to a nearby field, located behind properties belonging to Milton Knowles and Dale Hadley.

DNRE detection planes were out, and smoke was spotted. Both DNRE firefighters and the Bathurst Fire Department were called to the scene, Mr. Glazier said.

They were on hand until 8 p.m. Sunday, and returned Monday to ensure the fire had been put out. Mr. Glazier said a maximum of two acres, both private and public property, was lost.

No charges are being laid, and the names of those involved were not available at press time.

Bathurst candidates square off Sunday

Forum '91 will shine the spotlight Sunday on candidates vying for representation of the Bathurst riding in the provincial election.

The Bathurst Chamber of Commerce, in cooperation with Cable 2000 Inc., will be presenting the forum, which is to air live at 7 p.m. on Cable 2000's Channel 7.

The candidates, Marcelle Mersereau for the Liberals, Progressive Conservative Claire Wilt, the New Democratic Party's Collette Buttimer, and Confederation of Regions provincial president Laurie Robichaud will be on hand at Danny's Inn and Conference Centre for the bilingual forum.

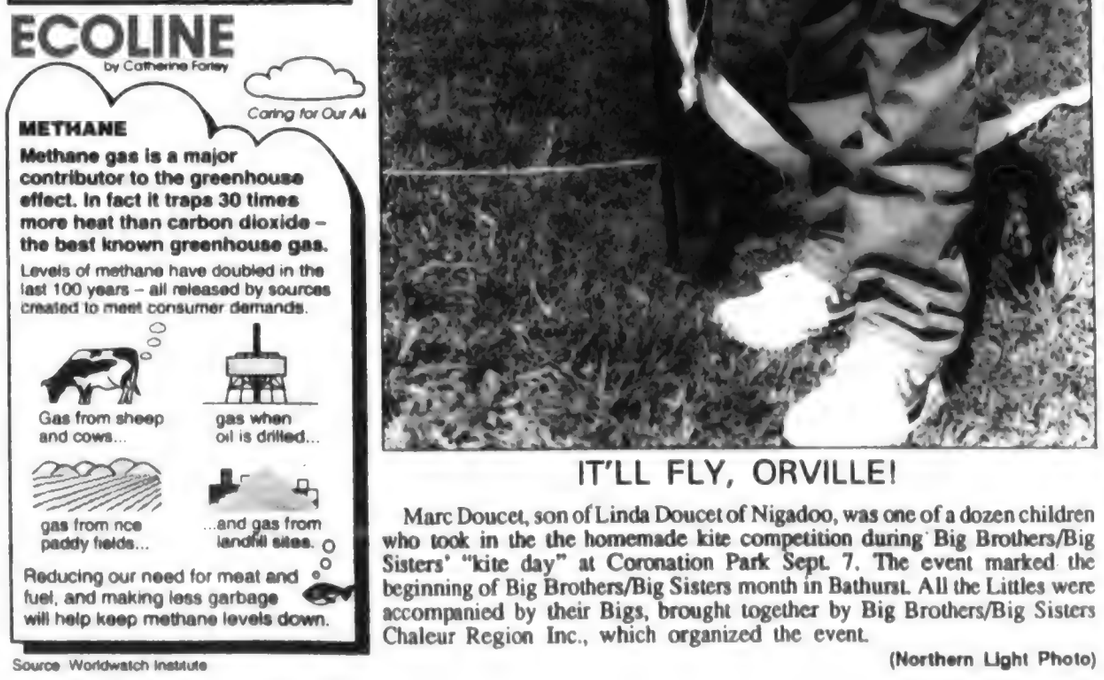
They will field questions on various topics, such as regional economic development, health and social services, education and transport.

"The format chosen will give equal opportunity for each of the candidates to respond or present their views to every question addressed," Chamber of Commerce general manager Rachel Kersys said in a release.

"We feel this format will properly inform voters on each party's standing."

The panel handling the questions consists of Northern Light managing editor Greg Mulock, and CKLE-FM journalist Annie Lajoie.

The general public in the audience will be able to submit pertinent questions in writing, to be relayed to the candidate or candidates by the mediator, Chaleur Regional Hospital director Roger Bertin.



Those who cannot attend may also submit their questions by calling the Bathurst Chamber of Commerce before Friday.

Forum '91 represents the first time the local cable company has broadcasted live from outside its Bathurst studios.

"Being able to link a feed with (Danny's Conference Centre) gives us the opportunity to accomodate a live audience," Cable 2000 program director Luc Foulem said in the release.

"This will obviously give a more personal nature to the debate."

For those who wish to attend Forum '91, doors will be opened at 6 p.m. at the Conference Centre, located at the rear of the building.

Tenders awarded to city company

City council awarded a $216,475 contract to Doucet's Landscaping Monday, for general street work and paving.

The work, awarded to the local company at Monday's public meeting, includes rectifying drainage problems on King Avenue, sidewalk continuation on Sunset Drive, sidewalk work and street patching on Riverside Drive, storm sewer work on Orser Drive, paving on Sutherland Drive, and improvements to the Pleasant Street intersection at St. Peter Avenue.

Elsewhere in Monday's meeting, council said it will take a look at concerns over an unpaved portion of Bellevue Court in its next budget exercise.

Council was responding to a letter from Bellevue Court resident Ralph Hachey, who asked that the city look into the matter.

"I believe the yearly maintenance cost of grading and gravel required now far exceeds the cost of completing this road," he said in the letter.

Councillors did not get into a discussion of the problem Monday, but tabled the matter for consideration at budget time.

Injunction results in dismantling of NB Power plant blockade

A dispute involving workers at the NB Power Thermal Generating Station in Belledune has apparently been resolved.

An injunction granted to NB Power (New Brunswick Electric Power Commission) effectively ended demonstratoins last week by woodcutters and truckers involved in the construction phase of the plant project, said Sonia Roy, public relations officer for the thermal plant.

Members of the Nigadoo-Chaleur and Restigouche truckers' associations, under contract at the plant by the Miramichi firm ATCO Construction, had set up a blockade Sept. 5, refusing to allow other workers into the plant.

The demonstration was brought about as the result of a dispute over wages, Ms. Roy said.

A meeting between ATCO and the truckers that same day failed to bring about a resolution, she added.

However, an injunction was served Friday, requiring the dismantling of the blockade. The truckers were expected to go back to work Tuesday.

Ms. Roy said the incident was not the first to take place at the plant site.

Woodcutters hired by NB Power held a demonstration Sept. 3, to protest the laying-off of four fellow woodcutters, she said.

About 50 woodcutters and truckers, who joined the protest in a show of support, were involved in the demonstration.

The woodcutters, who also supported the truckers' protest were back to work Monday. Their involvement in the truckers' protest swelled the numb.r of demonstrators that day to 100.

About 15 workers involved in the construction of the plant had been kept out by the demonstrators.

Mediator has the respect of local Canada Post union

Canada Post employees in Bathurst hoping for a contract settlement have joined their national counterparts in a game of wait-and-see.

Members of Local 12 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, which represents Canada Post employees in Bathurst, were called to the picket line Aug. 29. However, they were back on the job Friday, as the contract dispute between CUPE and Canada Post entered the mediation stage.

At issue are wages, service to the community, proper staffing and job security.

The appointment of mediator Alan Gold in Ottawa last week brought an end to rotating strikes that began across Canada Aug. 24.

The union is now waiting to see whether Mr. Gold will be able to bring the two sides to a settlement.

Doug Bateman, a shop steward with Local 12, said a wait-and-see attitude has been adopted, but noted Mr. Gold is a trusted negotiator.

"He's respected by the union, and, I think, by Canada Post."

However, he also noted the union is still in a legal strike position, and if the mediation process in Ottawa does not prove successful, "you'll see us back on the picket line."

Nine centres ready for Terry Fox Run

Local interest in the annual Terry Fox Run has not waned in the least after 11 years.

In fact, it seems to be growing more and more each and every year, with no less than nine runs planned for this area of the province Sunday.

Bathurst, Beresford, Belledune, New Bandon, Petit Rocher, Pointe Verte, St. Isidore, South Teteagouche, and St. Sauveur have already hopped on the bandwagon for 11th annual event.

More than 14,000 New Brunswickers took part in the 1990 run, raising more than $290,000. The goal for this year is to top the $300,000 mark.

The run is held annually to raise funds for the Canadian Cancer Society. It also serves as a tribute to Terry Fox, the young man who tried to run across Canada in 1980 to raise money to fight cancer. His right leg was amputated in 1977 because of the disease, and claimed his life June 28, 1981, after he had completed 5,342 kilometres on his Marathon of Hope.

Besides the nine communities, Gilbert Vienneau will set out for the fourth straight year on an individual effort to raise funds for his favorite charity.

The 59 year-old Rough Waters resident will try to rollerblade from Sheila to Bathurst--about 80 kilometres--and hopes to better the roughly $1,500 he raised last year.

"I hope for about $3,000 or $4,000," he said, in a recent interview.

"If we don't make it, it's not because we didn't try."

The member of the Council 8678, Knights of Columbus, is an ex-cancer patient himself, and the upcoming challenge--as well as the ones before--does not come easy for him.

"It's hard. The problem with that route is there are many hills," he said.

Bathurst's Parks, Recreation and Tourism Department is organizing the city run, beginning at 2 p.m. at Coronation Park.

Participants will have the choice of either a seven-kilometre run, or a three kilometre run, with both routes ending back at the park. A barbecue will follow.

Pledge sheets are available at city hall.

For more information on the run, or to volunteer some time to help organize it, contact the Parks, Recreation and Tourism Department at 548-0410.

The Belledune run gets underway at 10 a.m. at Belledune United Church, with a goal of $2,200 set for the tiny community.

Participants will leave the church property and head out towards the Belledune Municipal Building, where refreshments will be served upon the completion of the run.

For more information, contact either Theresa Esliger at 237-2322 or June Culligan at 522-2148.

In Beresford, beginning at 2 p.m., participants will follow a five-kilometre route from the Beresford Municipal Building to the Beresford Sportek.

There were 74 participants in last year's run, which raised about $900.

Registration forms may be picked up at most businesses within the town, or by contacting organizer Therese Blanchard at 542-9544.

The small community of South Teteagouche had about 60 people out for their 1990 run, raising about $2,000, but organizers are looking to beat that this year.

"We want to try to do better; at least $2,500," organizing committee member Mary Jane Gammon said.

That run gets underway at 10 a.m. at the South Teteagouche Recreation Centre, with runners heading out 4.2 kilometres on Rose Hill Road, then back again, for a total of 8.4 kilometres.

A fruit and vegetable lunch will be served following the run.

Pledge sheets are available at One Stop Variety in St. Anne.

The run in Petit Rocher gets underway at 2 p.m. from the village's municipal building, with registrations accepted on site from 1 p.m. onward.

Pledge sheets are available at most businesses and financial institutions in the village.

Atlas Park will be the site of the run in Pointe Verte, and gets underway at 2 p.m.

Participants will get a chance to view a short video on Terry Fox prior to the run.

The run will take the participants from Atlas Park to the Pointe Verte Municipal Building, where Mayor Maxime Lejeune will address them, then back to Atlas Park for the presentation of participation certificates.

For more information, contact Eric Haché at 783-7973.

For information on the St. Sauveur, St. Isidore and New Bandon runs, contact the New Brunswick Terry Fox Run headquarters at 1-800-561-8369.

THESE ARE GREAT!

Danny Lanteigne (right) was recently introduced to the new child safety books, distributed by Canadian Tire petroleum manager Sharon Gallant (centre). The 16 books, titled "Go Crazy, Find Mazey!", were donated by Canadian Tire to the Child Life Department of the Chaleur Regional Hospital. The purpose of the books is for the child to find the "Mazeys" in each picture and to distinguish the safety message. A pair of sets in both English and French were donated. Also shown in photo is Donia Lagacé (left), special educator with the Child Life program at the hospital. Danny is the eight year-old son of Marie-May Lanteigne of Lagaceville.

Wilt carries Tory hopes

Claire Wilt hopes her experience in civic politics and record of involvement in the community will help her get elected MLA for Bathurst.

"I have proven that with me, people come first," she said at a Sept. 4 Progressive Conservative nominating convention, where she was unopposed in her nomination to carry the PC banner for Bathurst in the Sept. 23 provincial election.

About 100 supporters were on hand as Mrs. Wilt, a Bathurst city councillor, accepted the nomination and pledged her loyalty to the riding.

"I want to be able to help the people of Bathurst, my family," she said, adding she knows what doors to knock on in Fredericton in order to get things done.

She said she would put herself "into high gear" as her campaign gets underway.

Although it appeared provincial party leader Dennis Cochrane was to be a no-show, he entered the Bathurst Curling Club, where the convention was being held, moments after Mrs. Wilt stepped onto the stage.

Mr. Cochrane voiced his support for Mrs. Wilt's campaign, referring to her as a hard worker who never gives up.

He also took the opportunity to put in a few jabs against the Liberal government of Premier Frank McKenna, as did Nepisiguit-Chaleur candidate Bob Hornibrook and Shippagan-les-Isles hopeful Jean Gauvin.

"Money is important, but sometimes people matter more," Mr. Cochrane said in summarizing the premier's policies.

Mrs. Wilt pledged to put people first. She cited better employment for youth, the preservation of industry, pay equality and day care services among her top priorities.

McCrea the NDP candidate

A new name has been added to the ballot for the MLA race in Nepisiguit-Chaleur.

The candidacy of Karen McCrea of South Teteagouche was announced in a release late last week. She has since been working hard on her campaign.

Mrs. McCrea, 35, is a 1979 graduate of the Bathurst School of Nursing.

She has been employed at Chaleur Regional Hospital, as a nurse in the Nursery/Neo-natal department, for the past 11 years.

Karen McCrea

Mrs. McCrea is a member of the New Brunswick Association of Registered Nurses.

She is also a member of the New Brunswick Nurses' Union, and has been involved on behalf of her union in the local effort to protest the recent public sector wage freeze imposed by New Brunswick's Liberal government.

She is strongly against Premier Frank McKenna's wage freeze, and also feels it is time to get anti-scab legislation adopted in the New Brunswick legislature.

She is concerned about the need for jobs in Nepisiguit-Chaleur, the need for a fair taxation system, and the protection of the environment.

If elected, road development in Nepisiguit-Chaleur would also get her attention, particularly where it concerns Route 8 in the Allardville/St. Sauveur area. She would also like to see the upgrading of Route 180, commonly referred to as the Road to Resources.

Above all, Mrs. McCrea wants to put "determination and honesty" back into the political vocabulary.

Mrs. McCrea is married to Bathurst and District Labor Council president Hazen McCrea, and has three children: Sarah, 9, Douglas, 6 and Holly, 3.

Among her many affiliations, Mrs. McCrea is an active member of the Bayview Baptist Church, is a member of the church choir, teaches Sunday school, and has worked with the Vacation Bible School.

She is a volunteer with the Pioneers Club Canada (Christian Children's Club), and an active member of the Missions Committee, part of which provides for collection of food for the Bathurst Volunteer Centre.

Mrs. McCrea is also interested in the Co-op movement, and serves on the Co-op membership committee.

Pair guilty of armed robbery

Two men who pleaded guilty to robbing Proprio gas bar Aug. 31, will be sentenced later this month.

Jean-Paul Duguay, 36, and Valier Duguay, 23, were both charged with armed robbery, and with wearing masks with the intent to commit an indictable offence.

They pleaded guilty to the charges, stemming from an incident whereby the two men used a knife to thwart a Proprio employee, while they stole an undisclosed amount of cash.

Valier Duguay himself is a former employee of the St. Peter Avenue gas bar.

They were arrested and appeared the next day before provincial court judge Frederic J. Arsenault, who set sentencing for Sept. 30.

Leader should avoid comparisons between Quebec and Baltics

Political Scene

By STEWART MacLEOD
Ottawa Bureau
Thomson News Service

Jacques Parizeau, the portly leader of the Parti Quebecois, might rue the day he drew a parallel between the independence of the Baltic states and the sovereigntist movement in Quebec.

What appears helpful one day can easily become a hindrance the next.

At a recent PQ "think-tank," where the main topic was, naturally, Quebec independence and the question of getting officially recognized by other sovereign states, Mr. Parizeau seemed to get great inspiration from the Baltics.

"What's happening in the U.S.S.R. just confirms our ambitions," he said. "It has been years that we have been saying the idea of a little people wanting to have a country isn't an idea of the past, it's the future.

"With all that is going on in the world, we should be considered visionaries, nearly prophets," he told some 80 participants.

What buoyed the PQ leader was the fact that so many countries, Canada included, lost little time in recognizing the independence of Lithuania, Estonia and Latvia. Parizeau suggested this recognition of splinter states would make the world even more understanding of Quebec separating from the rest of Canada.

It's not a very compelling comparison, and Mr. Parizeau, being no dummy, is well aware of it.

DIFFERENT BACKGROUND

It really is stretching things to compare the birth of Canada with the formation of the Soviet Union, and particularly the annexing of the Baltic countries. What we had on this side of the ocean were people getting together, willingly and freely, to establish a new country.

On the other side, we had a forced annexation, an occupation.

To have the Baltics return to their original state is a far cry from breaking up a country that was brought together peacefully and democratically.

But the objective of Mr. Parizeau and his Parti Quebecois is to market the joys of independence. And since there seems to be a fair amount of joy in the world over the independence of the Baltic states, it's perhaps not surprising that parallels would be drawn.

It's noticeable that Mr. Parizeau doesn't go out of his way to compare the Yugoslavian situation with his proposed Quebec independence. While such a comparison would be just as valid, it wouldn't be nearly as helpful to the PQ cause. What's happening in Yugoslavia is not pretty to watch.

But who knows what the situation might be in the Baltic states a few months or years down the road.

COULD HURT

At the moment, there is understandable euphoria in the Baltics--and much of the world--over the return to independence. Flags are waving, people are dancing in the streets, and foreign leaders are bumping into each other in their race to visit these countries.

Yes indeed, these are happy times. The joys of sovereignty are great.

But when economic realities set it, Mr. Parizeau might not want Quebecers spending too much time drawing parallels. In fact, we can almost hear him beseeching his followers to ignore all events in the Soviet Union; telling them there is absolutely no comparison to be made.

Lithuania, Estonia, Latvia--and perhaps many other Soviet republics--are going to face enormous economic adjustments, many of them painful.

And it's not going to be easy for them to get the foreign help that's needed.

It's one thing for other nations to open embassies or consulates in the Baltic countries and raise flags, play anthems and extend the hands of friendship. It's quite another to hand over hard cash.

Look at the trouble Mikhail Gorbachev has had trying to get help from western nations--even when those nations were desperately anxious to save him. These same countries won't find it easy to bypass Moscow and offer help to individual republics.

No, over the long haul, drawing parallels won't likely help the Parti Quebecois with its objectives. But, in the glow of the moment, the temptation was probably just too great to resist.

"Signs" of Fall

"Signs" of fall are everywhere and the hues of red, orange, yellow and blue abound. Unlike the perennial changes occurring in our environment, this year's fall colors signal the approaching provincial election and would seem to have very little to do with nature.

Not so long ago, the environment held a place of importance on all politicians lips yet, it would now seem all but forgotten. Where do our local candidates stand on this issue, one of the most important in the country as well as the world?

Perhaps they think they cannot have an impact on this monumental problem but, like all social ills, this must be addressed at home before the larger problem can be solved.

There is much to think about--industrial, residential and agricultural pollution are quite visible in our environment as it contaminates the air, earth, and water vital to this planet's survival.

Policies on waste management, wildlife preservation and forest management are of little value if not enforced by individuals committed to improving and preserving life as we know it.

Local, national and indeed world politics and events have put environmental issues on the back burner once again. Can we truly afford to leave the situation simmer for much longer before we take definitive action?

A year tough on bridges

The Moving Finger Writes
Events from the archives of The Northern Light

70 YEARS AGO
September 1921

The wooden structure spanning Little River at the head of the Basin and commonly known as Little River Bridge caved in last Sunday afternoon. Immediately after an automobile had made the passage in safety, one of the spans gave way and, with a roar of tearing timber, the bridge became a wreck.

Numerous motor and other vehicles had already traversed the bridge and the wonder is that the crash was so fortunately timed as to involve no accident to passengers.

The bridge has been regarded with suspicion for some time.

This is the second bridge mishap that has occurred during the year, the previous one involving the temporary breakdown of the Teteagouche Bridge. On that occasion also a motor vehicle had just made the trip across when the span broke and precipitated the floor of the bridge into the water.

60 YEARS AGO
September 1931

A ceremony of unusual interest to residents of Bathurst as well as to the county in general took place at West Bathurst Vale Farm on Monday last, when Sir James Dunn of London, England turned the first sod in connection with the new tuberculosis sanatorium which was donated to his Lordship, the Bishop of Chatham, by Sir James some time ago.

Tenders for the construction of the new 92-bed building have already been awarded, the construction of which will commence immediately. The new sanatorium will be erected in a large field west of the CNR line on high ground and is considered an ideal spot for a building of its kind.

50 YEARS AGO
September 1941

After an absence of eight months, when their store was destroyed last December in the Gloucester Hospital Building fire, National Shoe Stores returned to Bathurst this week and are again re-established in the new Eddy Block, King Street.

The National came to Bathurst for the first time in 1935. The new store carries the most modern equipment obtainable and a wide variety of all types of shoes.

Open letter to all people who abuse telemarketers

Sept.5

Dear Editor,

This letter is to all those who answer phone calls from all of us who call them for a living.

We're the anonymous voices people get to yell at, curse at, stomp on, tongue-lash and verbally abuse, just for the heck of it. As voices from the beyond we, of course, don't have brains or hearts, so therefore we are not human and are not affected by anything thrown our way. Or at least we feel this is how we are viewed, considering what people say to us on the phone.

We are the telemarketers (eek!!). Yes it's us. Now don't run away; we won't hurt you, promise. We're just airing our thoughts for a moment. Because we're mind-boggled over how rude people are to us on the telephone, you would think we had done them a personal wrong.

Some comments are not fit to be repeated, but here is a small example of a response from some gentle-hearted soul out there: "You just shut up right now. I wouldn't buy anything from you if you gave it away. I can't stand people like you. Why don't you find a real job?"

First of all, as this job pays money, I guess you could call it real (the money is, anyway). Secondly, telemarketing is not exactly the job you grow up dreaming of and wishing it could only be yours. Choice does not always play a role in employment matters. Thirdly, telemarketing is not some sort of cult that is out to destroy the world. We are not mass murderers. We are mothers, fathers, daughters, sons, students, and homemakers, just trying to make a living when work is extremely scarce. Telemarketing companies supply our jobs.

Now we did not write to ask for any favors; just to air our thoughts.

A short thank you to all those people who verbally refrain and just hang up in our ear. We love you!

To all those who treat use as humans with hearts, a special thank you.

Mixed feelings from CoR conference

Sept. 4, 1991

Dear Editor,

Several years ago I attended the first New Brunswick Confederation of Regions provincial conference in Fredericton. I came away with mixed feelings.

On the one hand, I sympathized with many of the well-meaning people who had jumped aboard. I believed they had just cause for grievance against a deaf bureaucracy. Still, I couldn't shake the strong feeling that these honest, trusting folks were being sucked into a racist and bigoted political machine that was simply too well organized to be the grassroots organization it pretended to be.

Of course, the fact that so many people could be taken in says something definite if not very positive about the available options. The traditional parties had, as usual, gone into hibernation after the previous election. It didn't seem to be a matter of concern that a lot of people in New Brunswick were either umemployed, underemployed or had just simply given up. Despite all the fancy marketing energy and tax dollars being pumped into advertising to tell us how perfect our province is, about all the great research goings-on in our universities, and the great re-training opportunities available through CEIC and Community College--do we still really believe this hype?

I've been there. I went back time and again, hopeful of finding my work niche, only to be told over and over that I lacked something. Either I needed French, or I needed more formal education, or I needed a better attitude. Off and on, about 29 years worth of excuses--your typical CoR target.

Now, with a provincial election only weeks away, my thoughts follow these lines by Henry David Thoreau, "It takes two to speak the truth, one to speak and one to hear."

Over the next few weeks, the party folks will all be doing a lot of speaking. Many of us who haven't had our spirits broken, and our illusions totally shattered, will rally behind a favorite candidate who had the courage to come forward, even at the last hour. For a little while our hopes will be buoyed up by what we hear and hope to be "The Truth."

And after the elections? What then? Will it be like last time, and we all go back to griping about what our government isn't doing for us?

We could, instead, keep those parties active and strong, and our government listening. But they won't hear anything if we don't speak up for ourselves and our community. In New Brunswick we have no real reason to fear take-over by French or English. The big danger is us drowning in our own apathy.

Coverage of the 1991 provincial election campaign

Experience Wilt's biggest asset

With just two weeks left before the provincial election, Bathurst Progressive Conservative candidate Claire Wilt plans a "fast, short and sweet" campaign.

Mrs. Wilt was acclaimed as the PC candidate for Bathurst, at the nominating convention held Sept. 4 at the Bathurst Curling Club. Close to 100 party faithful attended the convention, enthusiastically applauding their new candidate. Mrs. Wilt also received words of support from provincial party leader Dennis Cochrane, and PC candidates from other nearby ridings.

A city councillor since 1983, she sought the nomination in 1987, but lost to local businessman René Pratt. Mr. Pratt was subsequently defeated in the 1987 provincial election, when Frank McKenna's Liberals captured all 58 seats in the New Brunswick legislature.

"People are calling and pledging support," she said in an interview with The Northern Light.

Many of those who have already begun to call Mrs. Wilt feel that it's time for a change in provincial politics, Mrs. Wilt said.

One issue on their minds is the public sector wage freeze imposed by Mr. McKenna's government. Mrs. Wilt feels this is an important issue that needs to be addressed.

Pursuing the issue of the city's civic centre plans will also have a place on Mrs. Wilt's agenda.

Job creation, particularly where it affects local youth, is an item of the highest priority, Mrs. Wilt indicated.

"The youth are important; they are intelligent, aggressive and full of life," she said.

"They shouldn't have to leave (the city) to get jobs."

Mrs. Wilt also wants to work toward getting more day care centres, equal pay for equal work, and a fair shake for the local labor force.

"We need our industries, and we need our labor force," she said, adding employees should be able to "work with dignity."

She feels her position on city council, and her involvement in various community projects, has helped her to understand these and other needs of the community.

"I would be comfortable going to Ottawa on (the city's) behalf, with this experience," she told the convention, adding, "I believe in Bathurst and I believe in the people, and that's why I get involved."

CoR candidates to work together

With an official headquarters now in place on King Avenue, Bathurst Confederation of Regions candidate Laurie Robichaud is ready to hit the campaign trail.

Mr. Robichaud, who is the CoR party president and is seeking to win the Bathurst MLA post in the Sept. 23 election, kicked off his campaign at a meeting Friday. The purpose of the meeting was to allow local supporters to meet CoR candidates.

Mr. Robichaud's campaign will involve door-to-door visits and stops at shopping malls. The campaign will be conducted in close association with Nepisiguit-Chaleur candidate Laurie Daley, he said.

"We're going to work very closely together."

Among the issues that concern Mr. Robichaud and the CoR party in Bathurst is the need to make certain local college courses available to everyone.

The Bathurst campus of the New Brunswick Community College offers some courses only in French.

"A select group of people is receiving these; they should be available to everyone," Mr. Robichaud said.

In addition to reinstating English courses, Mr. Robichaud endorses the idea of local adult French-language training.

Mr. Robichaud also wants to see the full development of Route 180, commonly known as the Road to Resources; the development of the Bathurst Harbor, to increase shipping and employment opportunities; increased development of the Bathurst Regional Airport; and development of seniors' services.

Other issues of concern include the need to develop the mining industry, in order to promote the wealth of mineral resources in this area; and the need to encourage industry to finish the milling of ore products locally, rather than relying on industry outside the community.

He also feels a regional civic centre would bring the area's communities closer together.

Mr. Robichaud, 61, is a New Brunswicker of Acadian descent. A resident of St. Stephen, he has been involved with the Confederation of Regions party since its inception.

Health issues concern Mersereau

Bathurst Liberal MLA candidate Marcelle Mersereau feels her background in the public sector is a definite asset to her campaign.

"It has at least made me very sensitive to the needs we have, and to finding solutions," said the 48-year old mother of two.

Mrs. Mersereau is regional director for the Department of Health and Community Services, and was chosen by an overwhelming margin to represent the party in the provincial election.

Understandably, some of her concerns centre around health issues, such as the need for community-based health care services that would focus on support services in the home.

The special needs population also deserves consideration, particularly during the transition to adulthood, she said.

"The needs don't stop just because they turn 19 or 21."

If elected, she would also turn her attention to the need for accessible, affordable housing for the elderly.

Mrs. Mersereau has been spending as much time as she can meeting the public in their homes and at public functions.

"I'm trying to touch base with as many people as I can," she said.

She is a director with the Nepisiguit Economic Conference, which has been studying the needs of about a dozen private and public sectors. Knowing those needs will help her campaign, she indicated, because "they come from the people."

Job creation, better education and promotion of tourism are among those priorities.

Mrs. Mersereau also feels strongly about the need to improve Route 180, commonly known as the Road to Resources, to promote small business, and to keep fighting for the environment.

As a city councillor, Mrs. Mersereau is also well aware of the civic centre issue. The city has approached the province for funding assistance for the project, and is currently waiting for a response before proceeding further.

"I'm in favor of a civic centre for Bathurst," Mrs. Mersereau said, adding, "Any project Bathurst has, I'll carry it to Fredericton."

Liberals fueled Buttimer's candidacy

Frank McKenna's Liberal government gets at least part of the credit for pushing Collette Buttimer into politics.

The New Democratic Party candidate for the Bathurst riding, Mrs. Buttimer is president of Local 1507 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees.

The union represents workers at Foyer Notre Dame de Lourdes, one of the organizations affected by Premier McKenna's enforced one-year wage freeze on public sector salaries.

That means she knows exactly where the public employees are coming from when they talk about what the Liberal government is doing.

She feels the province needs to be operated in the same way as a business, and as far as she is concerned, Mr. McKenna's Liberals are not good business people.

Although new to the political arena, Mrs. Buttimer was acclaimed as the NDP candidate for Bathurst at an Aug. 25 nominating convention attended by some 40 local supporters.

She will square off against Liberal candidate Marcelle Mersereau, Confederation of Regions president and Bathurst candidate Laurie Robichaud, and Progressive Conservative representative Claire Wilt.

If elected, she intends to seek the completion of the city's civic centre project, which is currently awaiting government funding assistance.

"I'm very high on that, because we really need it," she told The Northern Light.

She feels it is time to see the plan through, something she believes would already have been done had it not been for outside interference and politicking.

Other items on her political wish list include funding for a four-lane Village bridge, downtown and waterfront development, and water and sewer system improvements.

Mrs. Buttimer has been pounding the pavement leading up to the election, knocking on doors, meeting potential delegates in local shopping malls, and dialing telephone numbers.

"The reaction is pretty good," she said.

A resident of Salmon Beach, Mrs. Buttimer, 40, is the wife of Kenneth Buttimer. She is a mother of two.

Bay Breakfast organizers not discouraged

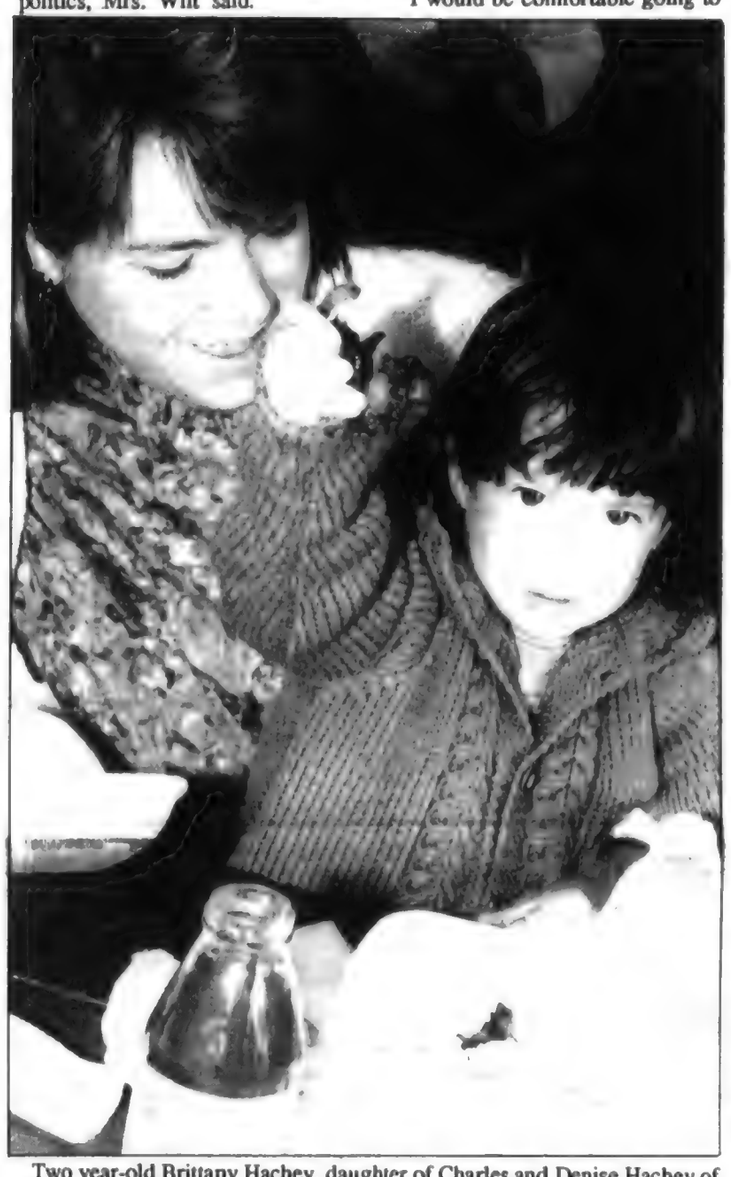
Bay Breakfast '91 has fallen short of its financial goal, but organizers are not discouraged.

"We did well," said Willie Battah, financial secretary for Bathurst Council 1935 Knights of Columbus, which organized this year's event.

A goal of $90,000 had been set. The Bay Breakfast itself, held Friday in the parking lot of the Bathurst Bowlarama, raised $28,547.88.

However, Mr. Battah indicated the figures are deceptive.

"It's important to remember that there's some money to come in yet," he said, adding donations, submitted on top of the more than $28,000 from the breakfast, brings the total collected so far to $35,966.63.



Also, the goal of $90,000 was "just a figure out of the sky," which organizers came up with simply by doubling last year's take of $43,167.

Mr. Battah estimated more than 5,000 breakfasts were sold inside the 40-foot by 80-foot tent that had been set up in the parking lot.

The purpose of this year's Bay Breakfast was to raise funds for the Chaleur Regional Hospital Foundation.

The CRH Foundation itself was created just over a year ago as a means of raising funds to defray 10 per cent of the cost of any major piece of hospital equipment, as required by the provincial Health and Community Services Department.

Under a seven-year old agreement, hospitals must raise 10 per cent of the tab, while the province picks up the rest.

Two year-old Brittany Hachey, daughter of Charles and Denise Hachey of Bathurst, was either showing off her bacon, or had caught the spirit of sharing during last Friday's Bay Breakfast '91. Brittany and her mother (left) consumed two of the approximately 5,000 breakfasts sold to benefit the Chaleur Regional Hospital Foundation.

Razing made way for progress

Silver Points

By SONIA-SIMARD CORMIER

News from 25 years ago.

Sept. 15, 1966

Demolished in 1966, "The Lodge", as it was known for more than 50 years, was one of many Bathurst landmarks razed to make way for city expansion. Built in 1913 by Bathurst Paper Ltd. as lodgings for their Company construction crews, the rooming and cook house was located on Main Street, close to the mill.

In later years, the building had been divided into two apartments, which at the time were occupied by Warren Chamberlain and Jack Craig and families. Both families continued to keep Company boarders, the last one being George (Pope) McKinnon.

And if buildings were being torn town to make way for progress, one can only wonder why so many businesses have disappeared in the past 25 years.

Metro Delivery, Stop & Go Dinette, Bathurst T.V. & Service Ltd., Burns Equipment, Bathurst Sports Centre, Stedman's, Sand's Department Store, Pepper's Drug Store, Kent's Supermarket, North Shore Realty, C. Smith & Sons, Heatmaster Co., Gray's Velvet Ice Cream. All of these and countless others have been relegated to a passage of our local history.

Still, lest we get too pessimistic, it's nice to reflect on the many companies and businesses (and those are truly too numerous to mention) which have not only remained an integral aspect of the city but have prospered and continue to do so, thus making ours a community with a positive prognosis.

Freemen of the City honors bestowed

City council approved applications for three Freemen of the City Monday.

Florence Roussy, the family of Augustus Leach, and former Bathurst mayor Richard J. Cormier had been nominated to receive the prestigious title, and were accepted in Monday's regular public council meeting.

A date has yet to be set for the three awards to be presented.

The title of Freeman is bestowed upon those who have made an outstanding contribution to the city.

Richard J. Cormier served several terms as a city councillor, and as Mayor of Bathurst from 1957 to 1959. Currently, he is retired from a long career in the public service, having served as a manager for the New Brunswick Liquor Commission in Bathurst.

At the time of his retirement, he was the regional supervisor for Northeastern New Brunswick.

He is a World War Two veteran and, upon his return from the war, operated a local boys' club that later became a Boy Scout troop. He remained associated with the group for more than 30 years.

In addition, he was involved in minor hockey and boxing, organized a badminton club, taught gymnastics and supervised swimming activities for adults.

Mr. Cormier has been very active in his church, has served as president of the Herman J. Good V.C. Branch No. 18 Royal Canadian Legion, and Grand Knight of the Bathurst Council No. 1935 Knights of Columbus.

Mr. Cormier is also a 1990 Volunteer of the Year Award recipient.

HELPING SENIORS

Mrs. Florence Roussy is well known for her involvement in the community.

She has served as president of the Villa Chaleur Golden Age Club, president of a Seniors' Bowling League, was a member of the Catholic Women's League for 51 years, served as a committee member of the Holy Family Parish Council, and worked with past Hospitality Days and Canada Days activities.

Her volunteer work includes a stint as secretary on the Executive Committee for the Department of Health, representing New Brunswick seniors; director for the Tourism Commission representing seniors, and director for the Community Services of the city of Bathurst, representing local seniors.

She has received numerous awards over the years, in recognition of her activities.

The Leach family, consisting of Augustus Sr., Augustus Jr., Lawrence Clark Leach, Norman Laurence Leach, and Linda Anne Leach-Radcliffe are the owners of the property where the Gowan Brae Golf and Country Club is located.

The city leases the property from the Leach family, for one dollar, and 50 pounds each of oysters and shrimp every year.

Now living in Western Canada, the Leach family, through the unusual leasing agreement, has given the city a beautiful and challenging golf course that has hosted numerous championship tournaments over the years.

CoR wants anti-French branding to stop

The Confederation of Regions party wants to shake its anti-French image.

"Every time we turn around, the Liberal party, the Conservative party, the New Democratic Party and a lot of the media are branding us (anti-French)," party president Laurie Robichaud told 50 supporters at a campaign-launching meeting in Bathurst Friday.

Mr. Robichaud, a resident of St. Stephen, is seeking to represent the CoR in Bathurst in the Sept. 23 provincial election.

Friday's meeting was set up to officially launch the campaign for Mr. Robichaud, Nepisiguit-Chaleur candidate Laurie Daley, and provincial party leader Arch Pafford.

The party is seen by some as anti-French, because of its stance against legislated bilingualism. Early in his address, Mr. Robichaud proposed to do something about it.

"I know what we can do to change their minds, and that is to win this next election," he said to a round of applause.

Mr. Robichaud's bid for the MLA post in Bathurst came about as a result of what he acknowledged as the difficulties of representing CoR here.

In earlier media interviews, Mr. Robichaud, who is of Acadian descent, said the party felt he would have a better chance at acceptance than would a local candidate.

"I am aware of the problems in Bathurst," he said Friday, citing instances of "intimidation" on the part of those who do not agree with CoR politics.

He noted the party has had difficulty getting its followers to help out with the campaign here because "people just can't be seen helping the CoR party."

"That in itself should be enough to make us mad enough to want to do something," he said.

"Nobody in this country today should be afraid to stand up for what they believe in."

NEED A CHANGE

He blamed the problem on Premier Frank McKenna's legislated bilingualism policies, adding, "If ever a need for change was there, it's now."

Party leader Arch Pafford, who was at the meeting as part of a New Brunswick tour to launch the provincial campaign, also spoke against the intimidation he feels is behind the lack of open public support for the party.

"I didn't believe something like that could happen in this province and in this country," Mr. Pafford said, adding, "We are not the cause of this intimidation; we want to put an end to it."

He stressed the party is not opposed to bilingualism, but rather to the legislation that makes bilingualism essential to securing employment with the provincial government.

If elected, the party proposes to make English the working language of government, but Mr. Pafford said jobs would be awarded based on ability, not language.

But Mr. Pafford gave assurance that the party's "one-issue" image is also false.

He illustrated this by pointing out other proposals that include lowering the provincial sales tax from 11 per cent to nine per cent as a means of stimulating the economy.

Should the party win the election, it would also cut taxes on restaurant meals and accomodations, Mr. Pafford said.

Lowering the taxes would cost the government, but the money would be recuperated by eliminating legislated bilingualism, Mr. Pafford claimed.

He also promised to reverse the public sector wage freeze imposed by Premier McKenna.

CUT TOP SALARIES

Even further, he proposed a 20 per cent reduction of his own salary if he were premier.

Cabinet ministers--of which there would be 12, as opposed to the current 24--would also take a 20 per cent cut, he said. MLAs, meanwhile, would chop off 10 per cent.

"We're going to cut the cream off the top," he told the crowd.

CoR policy would also dictate that cabinet ministers purchase their own automobiles, and Mr. Pafford promised that MLAs who do not perform to the satisfaction of their constituents could simply be "recalled."

Privatization of such institutions as the New Brunswick Liquor Commission would be called for, with the stipulation that employees would retain their jobs at the same wage.

Mr. Pafford could not go into specifics with regards to the level of funds that would be saved if CoR's policies were implemented, but promised simply, "We're going to eliminate the waste."

Also on hand at Friday's meeting was Nepisiguit-Chaleur candidate Laurie Daley.

Mr. Robichaud, meanwhile, indicated to The Northern Light that a candidate likely would not be found for the Nigadoo-Chaleur area.

Monday was the deadline for candidate registration.

DECOSTE- The family of the late Harold DeCoste wishes to express their heartfelt thanks to their relatives, friends and neighbours who supported them during their recent bereavement. We thank you for the gifts of flowers, mass offerings, memorials, cards, telephone calls, food and visits to the home as well as the funeral parlour. Thanks also to Elhatton's Funeral Home, Fr. Arsenault, Pallbearers, Honorary Pallbearers, Readers, Organists, Servers and Special Thanks to the Extra Mural Nurses and Dr. Tony Wade for their numerous visits to the home and for their warm and attentive care. A friend, Hayward Lane, will always be remembered for his endearing eulogy. Everything was much appreciated.

KNOWLES- The family of the late Beulah Knowles would like to take this opportunity to extend gratitude of appreciation to each and everyone who supported us through her stay in Hospital with cards, visits, and encouragement. A special thank you to the Doctors, and Nursing staff of 3rd floor East of Chaleur Regional Hospital. Thanks also to Elhatton's Funeral Home, the active and honorary pallbearers, the Clergy, the choir of First United Church, organist Joseph A. MacDonald, Ladies Auxiliary Branch 18 Legion, Chaleur Evening Stars and those who sent flowers, made contributions to different organizations and assisted with baked goods and other foods. Your kindness will always be remembered by the Family.

PITRE- The family of the late Mrs. Meldona Pitre wishes to thank Dr. Mazerolle, Dr. Eddie, the nursing staff of the Intensive Care Unit at Chaleur Regional Hospital for the tender care given to our dear loved one. Also to Father Wade, Elhatton's Funeral Home and all who sent mass cards, flowers and food. Your kindness will always be remembered.
Alex & Pearl Pitre.

IN MEMORIAM

THIBODEAU- In loving memory of our dear mother Céline Thibodeau who passed away Sept. 16, 1983.

In our hearts your memory lingers,
Sweetly tender, fond and true,
There is not a day, dear mother,
That we do not think of you.

Sadly missed by Carol, Daniel & grandchildren.

Hospital team wins again

For the third straight year, a team from Chaleur Regional Hospital has won the Provincial Mixed Softball Championship for hospital employees.

Bathurst #1, coached by Michel Haché, is the most recent provincial champion, emerging at the head of the 16-team pack this past weekend in Lameque.

The field was divided into four divisions and, after completion of a round-robin preliminary round within each division, Bathurst #1 emerged as one of the semi-finalists with a perfect 3-0 won-lost record.

Bathurst #1 gave up only 12 runs in the three games, and won all in convincing fashion. They handled Caraquet #1 23-0 to kick off the tournament, then beat Edmundston #1 15-4 and trounced Centracare Saint John 27-8 for the berth in the semis.

Suzanne Landry was on the mound in the semi-final game, pitching her way to a 6-2 win over Tracadie.

Chris Quinn was both the offensive and defensive star of the game for the local side, making several outstanding plays and stroking a two-run triple and a double.

Lameque #1, hailed far and wide as the team to beat, was Bathurst's opposition in the final, and proved to be no opposition at all in the 17-5 game.

Suzanne Landry was the outright star of this game. She was the winning pitcher once again, and contributed from the batter's box as well with four singles, the same output as teammate Tina Deschenes.

Top hitters for the guys on the team were Michel Haché, with a triple and two singles, and Jean-Yves Fournier, with three singles.

Bathurst #2, coached by Jean-Paul Couture, narrowly missed a playoff berth themselves.

They allowed only three runs in their first two games--defeating Lameque #2 22-0, then George Dumont #1 27-3--before losing a heartbreaker to Tracadie by a score of 11-5.

Tracadie, with a perfect 3-0 record, advanced to the semis.

Next year's event is slated for Bathurst.

O'St. Pierre earns berth in final

Rumors of Brasserie O'St. Pierre's imminent demise in the Parkwood Schooner-Pizza Delight Softball League playoffs have been greatly exagerated.

After falling behind two games to one in their best-of-five semi-final series with the Right Spot Classics last week, Brasserie O'St. Pierre came back with a vengeance to claim a berth in the final.

Brasserie O'St. Pierre put together a pair of convincing victories this past week to turn the tide in their favor, starting with a 17-7 win Sept. 3.

Paul Aucoin was on the mound to register the win, with Roger White taking the loss.

Don McKay stroked a triple and a pair of doubles in leading the winning effort, with Kevin Duguay hitting a home run and a double in a losing effort.

They clinched the series with a 16-7 victory Sept. 4, with Pat Murphy recording the pitching victory and Leslie Smith the loss.

Jamie Melanson was the offensive star of the game for the winning side, with two home runs and a single to his credit. Danny Deschenes stroked a homer and a double in a losing effort.

The Wild Goose Guzzlers and Techno 90 played Monday night to decide who would face Brasserie O'St. Pierre in the final, with that series tied 2-2. Results of the final game were unavailable at press time.

Techno 90 had staked themselves a 13-8 decision over the Goose on Sept. 3, with Christian Doiron the winning pitcher and Glen Morrison the loser.

Jean Marc Finn stroked a pair of doubles and a single to pace the winning attack, while Jarvis Chiasson hit a double and a triple in a losing cause.

The Guzzlers tied the series at two with a convincing 22-9 victory Sept. 4. Glen Morrison was on the winning end of the decision this time around, with Doiron tasting defeat.

Jarvis Chiasson was again the offensive leader for the Guzzlers, with two triples and two singles on the night, while the same honor was bestowed upon Jean Marc Finn, with a double and a single.

The final got underway Tuesday at Centennial Park field in Parkwood Heights.

International title to local shooter

For a mere rookie, Ron Chamberlain has come a long way in the world of target shooting.

The Nigadoo resident claimed the First Experts' Open Revolver Match title and the High Canadian Shooter title at the International Police Combat Pistol Association competition, held in Houlton, Maine on Labor Day weekend.

To win, he had to defeat about 50 of the best civilian and law enforcement shootists from the New England states and the Maritime provinces, which he did with a final score of 1,439 points out of a possible 1,500.

One of only seven civilians in the competition, the Brunswick Mines mechanic tore up the simulated police target training course.

But that's nothing new for this sharpshooter.

"I just started to (go to competitions) less than a year ago. I've gone to about five or six, and I've won all the ones I've been to," he said.

Mr. Chamberlain is president of the Elite Marksmen Target Shooting Club, which boasts a membership of about 75 and is located on Atlantic Avenue in East Bathurst. He has been a member of the club since it opened about four years ago.

For his most recent efforts, he won two trophies, a handgun, and a pair of medals for finishing among the top two shooters in two of the five matches.

The competition involves shooting from different positions (prone, kneeling, standing, etc.) and with both hands, and brings speed and accuracy into play.

The Nigadoo resident claimed the First Experts' Open Revolver Match title and the High Canadian Shooter title at the competition, featuring the best civilian and law enforcement shooters from the New England states and the Maritime provinces.

Petit Rocher equestrian leads N.B.

A Petit Rocher woman has led New Brunswick to a gold medal finish in the Sixth Annual Eastern Canadian Heritage Championship in Quebec City.

The equestrian event, held from Aug. 31 to Sept. 1, saw New Brunswick's adult team amass 138 points to Quebec's 136, with Ontario third at 106.

Aubé, aboard Classic Reward, finished the event with 34 points, 13 more than her closest teammate.

She also won four medals, with a gold in Showmanship, a silver in Reserve High Point Champion Adult, and bronze medals in Trail and Horsemanship.

Belledune Mooseheads take Intermediate B baseball crown

A second local team from the Restigouche Intermediate Baseball League has claimed a provincial championship.

The Belledune Mooseheads were crowned New Brunswick Intermediate B Baseball Champions on Labor Day weekend, about the same time the Beresford Schooners were claiming the New Brunswick Intermediate A title down the road in Dalhousie.

Taking part in the title chase were the St. Martins Mooseheads, representing the Southern New Brunswick Intermediate B Baseball League; the Arthurette Athletics, here on behalf of the Tobique Valley Intermediate Baseball League; and the Campbellton Merchant Hawks, also representing the Restigouche league.

The Belledune squad acted as hosts for the provincial championship.

The Mooseheads sailed unbeaten through the preliminary round, defeating Arthurette 8-1, and St. Martins 6-5. The last game had Belledune down 5-2 in the bottom of the ninth. After Belledune scored once and loaded the bases, Jim Guitard came up to the plate with two out and proceeded to smack a double off the wall, scoring three.

With Belledune undefeated, St. Martins had to defeat them in two straight in order to steal the title.

The second game was never played, as Belledune squeaked out an 8-6 decision in the protested game.

The protest came from St. Martins in the fourth inning, after their pitcher had been thrown out for intentionally scuffing the ball. The judgement went in favor of the St. Martins club, but a successful appeal was launched by the Belledune entry.

This marked the first time a Belledune Intermediate baseball team had ever won a provincial title.

The Mooseheads will now travel to Charlottetown, P.E.I. this coming weekend to take part in the Maritime Intermediate B Baseball Championships.

T-Birds close out season

The Bathurst Beaver T-Birds finished out the season on Labor Day weekend with a trip to Amherst, N.S. to compete in the David Maltby Memorial Invitational Tournament.

And they brought back the same trophy as last year, as runners-up in the consolation division.

There were eight teams taking part in the tournament, including Glace Bay, Waltham, Mass., Moncton, New Glasgow, Lancaster, Amherst, Sackville, N.S. and Bathurst.

The T-Birds faced the Canadian Little League champion Glace Bay Colonels in the opener. Their ace pitcher, Robert Piercy, allowed only one run on two hits and a sacrifice fly in recording an 8-1 victory.

T-Birds' pitchers Brian Gaillard and Adam Sullivan combined efforts on the mound, with great defensive help from Katie Gammon, Brent Nelson, Stephen Duncan, Joshua Gammon, Eric Gillis, Serge Leger, and Jeff MacDonald.

In the second game against Sackville, the local squad came out strong and made the bats start talking. Brent Nelson, Eric Gillis, Serge Leger, and Michael Duncan accounted for six of the nine runs pushed across by the T-Birds in the 9-4 victory.

Serge Leger handled the mound duties for three innings, allowing only two hits and one walk while striking out five. He was relieved by Stephen Duncan, who struck out two while getting great defensive help from Michael Duncan and Adam Sullivan.

In the trophy round, sound pitching from Brian Gaillard and Adam Sullivan kept the T-Birds in the game through five innings, until Amherst broke away with one strong inning to grab a 6-1 victory.

Shooting competition set for Elite Marksmen Sept. 22

The Elite Marksmen target shooting club in East Bathurst is extending a special invitation to all civilians and law enforcement officers in northern New Brunswick.

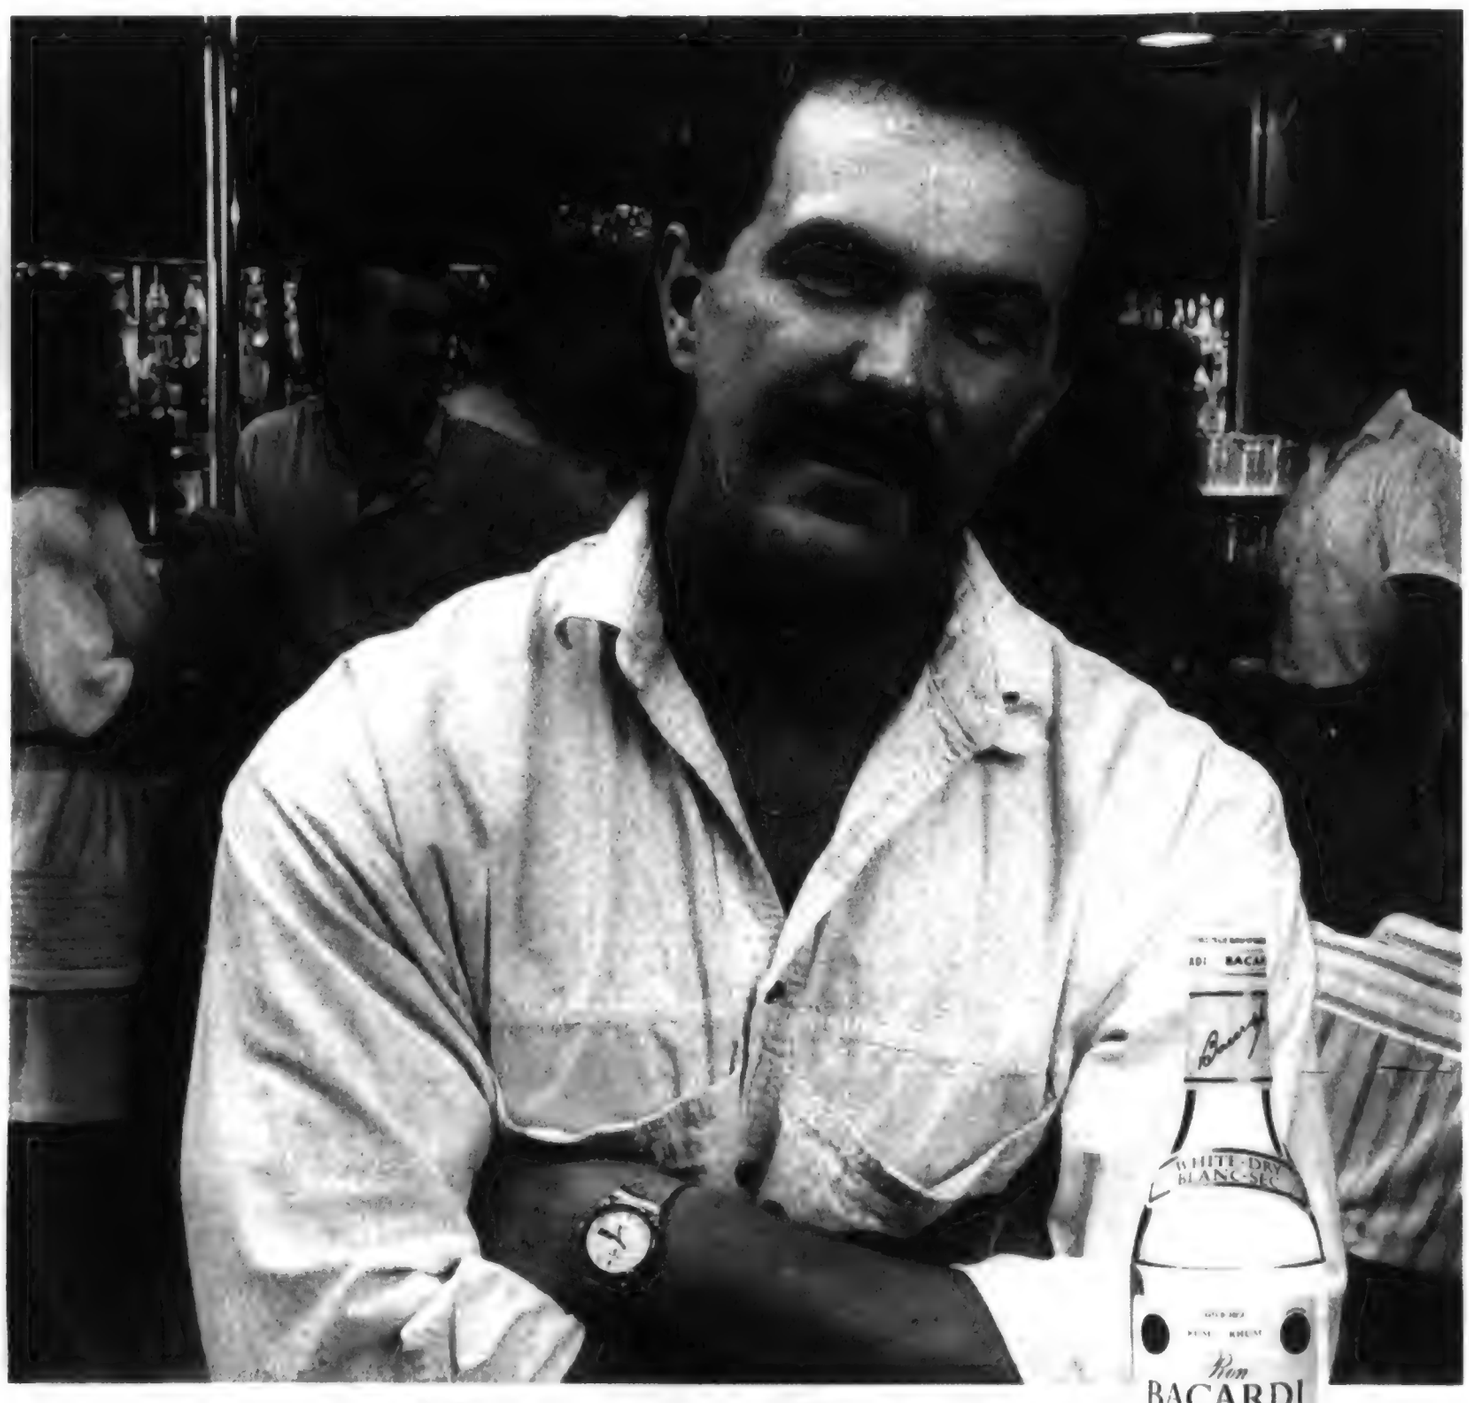
The club is inviting everyone to join it in a unique target shooting competition, slated for Sept. 22 at 10 a.m. at the range on Atlantic Avenue.

The competition will feature five different courses, with many abilities needed to excel in each.

The first course involves four shooters at the firing line, with guns loaded and resting on the table and cyclinders open. At the sound of a whistle, the shooter must run as quickly as possible to the 50-metre target line and back. At the sound of a second whistle, they will pick up their firearm and commence firing 12 rounds in 30 seconds at a target set at 20 metres.

The second course will see targets placed at the 25-metre mark, with the lights on at both the 25- and 50-metre target lines. The moment the range officer blows the whistle, he'll also extinguish the light at the 25-metre line, thus giving the shooter only the shape of his target to shoot at. He must shoot six bullets in 10 seconds, and repeat the action a second time under the range officer's order.

The third course sees the targets set at 50 metres. The shooters, upon hearing the whistle, run to the 15-metre line, stop, shoot six rounds, holster the gun, run to the 25-metre line, empty and reload the gun, then shoot six rounds at the target.



The fourth round sees the targets set at an angle, and two shots will be allotted per target. Using firing corridors no. 5 through no. 7, targets will be set up at the 15-, 20- and 25-metre lines with all lights off. With the help of a flashlight, the shooters will go through the course twice.

Round five will see clay pigeons come into play. The shooter runs from the 25- to the 40-metre line, where he positions himself behind a barricade. At the sound of a whistle, he steps out from behind the barricade, draws his gun and shoots at selected targets. There will be eight clay pigeons--four red and four black--and the shooter will have 10 seconds and six shots to hit the four red clay pigeons. If the shooter hits a black pigeon he will be disqualified.

Registration fee is $10, and trophies and other prizes will be presented to top finishers.

Holmes wins another easy one on comeback

On The Ropes

By "Wild" BILL HUDON

Larry Holmes is very busy these days.

He has just won his third comeback fight in as many bouts, stopping Michael Greer in the fourth round. Holmes' record is now 51-3 won-lost, with 36 knockouts.

Greer, 36, saw his record fall to 41-12, with only three knockouts.

As you can see, Michael Greer is also over the hill.

I will spell it out for you: if Holmes keeps fighting opponents like Greer, he could fight every week. He could fight 10 guys like this in one night and still win them all. Holmes got $60,000 for this fight.

But worse than that, 57 year-old Robert Conrad wants to start a boxing career. He said he could beat some of these guys Holmes is fighting. Well, maybe he could.

Now, getting to former Heavyweight champion Mike Tyson. There are many people who write bad things about Tyson, but they don't write about his good side.

Remember how he helped that young lady in upstate New York who was allegedly abducted and raped by five men and left in a wooded area? Tyson gave her $50,000 to put towards her college education.

Another time, on Thanksgiving, he handed out 5,000 turkeys to needy families. He also donated funds to help rebuild a church, and spent time working with mentally handicapped children. And last but not least, he announced last year he was contributing $50,000 to set up a foundation for abused children.

Come on guys, give him a break.

Only two Light-heavyweight champions in the history of boxing have gone on to win the Heavyweight title: Michael Spinks and current Heavyweight champion Evander Holyfield.

OCT, 1937:
GLASGOW, SCOTLAND

Scotland's first world boxing champion was Benny Lynch, who won the Flyweight title in 1937.

JULY, 1948:
CHATHAM, N.B.

Yvon Durelle stopped Sterling Adair in the second round.

Just last week someone asked me how old Durelle was. Well, he was born on Oct. 14, 1929, so he's 61.

"Wild" Bill Hudon is a member of the Canadian Boxing Hall of Fame and the Bathurst Sports Hall of Fame.

Volunteers needed for Short Fat Guys Run

Here's your chance to make a real difference in the life of a terminally ill child in New Brunswick.

The first organizational meeting for the annual Short Fat Guys One Mile Downhill Run is scheduled for Sept. 18 at the Labatt's offices at 1154 St. Peter Avenue, beginning at 7 p.m.

The run has been held annually in Bathurst, with all proceeds turned over to the New Brunswick Children's Wish Foundation. The foundation grants wishes to terminally ill children living within the province.

Michelle (last name not given), a 10 year-old girl from Bathurst, had her dream come true Aug. 25, 1989 when she received a cassette player, complete with Conway Twitty tapes and an autograph picture of the country music star.

Clayton, a 13 year-old boy from Nash Creek, suffered from Recurrent Sarcoma and wished for a computer. His dream was realized on June 2, 1989 when he received his wish, complete with desk and computer games. Clayton passed away Oct. 10, 1989.

Richard, a 12 year-old boy from Anse Bleu, had his wish fulfilled on March 31, 1991 when he received his much-wanted Sega Genesis game, along with a remote control television and cabinet. The games Richard selected were Super Monaco, Golden Axe, and Tommy Lasorda Baseball. He suffers from cancer.

As you can see, not all wishes are trips to Disneyland, but all are important to the children.

Money for the foundation is collected by participants through pledges.

If you would like to help organize this year's Short Fat Guys One Mile Downhill Run, show up at the meeting or call Denis Langlais at 548-4255.

Seles and Capriati ought to be ashamed

Out Of Bounds

By JIM COUTURE
Northern Light Sports

There are a few things bugging the hell out of me this week, and it's all thanks to a notebook I now carry around with me wherever I go.

Now don't get me wrong, it's not this notebook per say that's bugging me, but the things I've written down in it and a few of those items have me seeing red.

I jotted down the worst of those things upon the completion of the Monica Seles-Jennifer Capriati semi-final of the United States Open tennis championship over the weekend.

I couldn't believe it. Seles, 17, and Capriati, 15, were too busy to be bothered with signing autographs for a bunch of little kids after their match.

All each of them did was grab a pen and splatter ink on each of their pieces of paper. Some of the luckier kids actually got an 'X' written on their paper, others just a line across it. You had to see it to believe it; they must have signed about four such autographs a second, for about five seconds, then walked away.

The kids were still happy to get the scratchings, but I'm sure they would have been much happier with a full-fledged autograph.

What has this world come to when two young teenagers like this believe their time is so precious that they can't even sign a decent autograph. It makes me sick to think they're so self-righteous and self-centered to think they don't owe it to these kids--their fans--the ones who pay good money to see them play.

Jimmy Connors is a bigger star than either one of these can ever hope to be, but he took the extra time needed to sign autographs to anyone who wanted one. He did it with a smile on his face, and seemed genuinely happy to oblige.

Now, I know that after a match is sometimes a very emotional time for these players, but if they didn't have the time then, why not tell the kids to meet them outside the dressing room in 15 minutes or so.

As far as I'm concerned, that was the most disturbing thing I've seen in quite a while. Spoiled brats, with no concern whatsoever for anyone but themselves.

And did you ever hear Monica Seles give an interview? I did, you know, and, you know, it sort of, you know, bugged me that, you know, she says "you know" about every third word.

I bet she could spit out 300 words in a minute, that's how fast she talks, but her famous "you know" would account for about half that output.

Another reason to hate the little brat.

NO LIP

Now, getting to the subject of baseball umpires.

I think the game of baseball, or even softball for that matter, wuld be much better off if the umpires would just throw out an abusive player as soon as he opened his mouth.

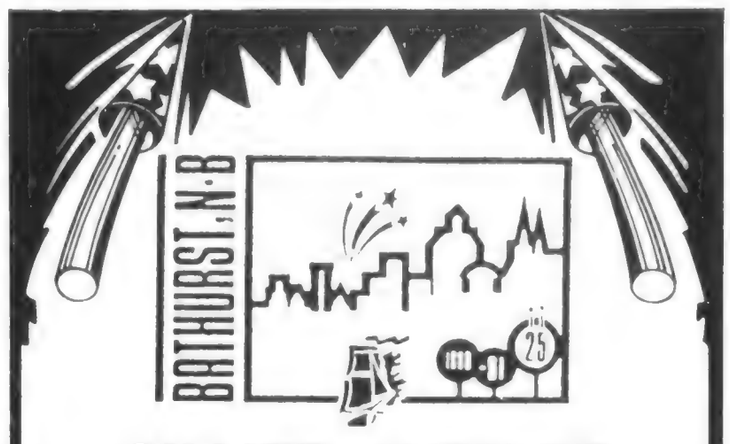
But no, they let them tongue wag to no end, and very seldom throw them out unless something is said about the umpire's mother or illegitimate child.

I saw one umpire take about five minutes of abuse from a player last week, and the guy wasn't even thrown out. The guy was arguing about a called strike, and that's a no-no in baseball. You can argue about anything, but not a ball or strike call from the home plate umpire. That's usually an automatic toss out, but not this time.

I say throw them out as soon as they even look at you sideways, and anybody that doesn't like it should get thrown out as well.

WHAT HAPPENED?

And how about that Canada Cup? Who would have thought for a minute that Sweden, Czechoslovakia and the Soviet Union would all be fighting for the fourth and final playoff spot, each with an identical 1-3 won-lost record as of Sunday.



I can understand the Russians being in the basement, seeing as they don't have to listen to any Communists anymore, including their coach, but the Swedes are the world champions, and the Czechs always came with a good team.

When you see Finland and the United States ahead of these teams, you know there's something wrong.

But is there?

If you've seen any of the games involving the United States and Finland, you'll notice that most of those teams are made up of National Hockey League players.

I think this just proves that the NHL is the best league in the world, bar none.

Tough guys set to rumble Oct. 19

Here's a chance for local tough guys to prove exactly how tough they really are.

The town of Newcastle will be the site of the first ever All-Canadian Toughman Championships on Oct. 19.

Promoted by Sports Productions (N.B.), the event will be held at the Civic Arena and pit street-fighters, martial arts experts, bouncers, football players, and ex-boxers against one another, with each man vying for the title of Canada's toughest man.

Winners will pick up a hefty $5,000, with the runner-up receiving $2,500. All participants will be presented with a medal commemorating the event.

Fights are held in a boxing ring, with fighters using 16-ounce gloves and wearing headgear and groin protectors. Fighters who intend to kick will wear kick pads. All matches will be three rounds duration, and there will be two weight classes in the event: Lightweight, under 180 pounds; and Heavyweight, 180 pounds and over.

The fights will be controlled by a referee inside the ring, with judging performed by three ringside judges. Winners can be declared on points or by knockout, and three knock-downs within the same round will end a contest. Fights can be stopped from the corner, and winners only will advance.

All combatants must be 19 years of age or older, and medical checks will be done on each fighter the day of the contest. Only strong, healthy individuals will be allowed to participate.

This event will be reported Canada-wide, and promoters are working at having the whole event televised.

Information and entry forms can be obtained by writing to Sports Productions (N.B.), Box 297, R.R. #3, Rogersville, N.B., E0A-2T0, or by calling Armand Girard at 1-605-753-5128.

A list of rules will be sent out with the entry forms, and the deadline for applications is Sept. 30.

Golfing still popular

Gowan Brae Ladies Club

Even though the days are getting cooler and shorter, golfing activities at Gowan Brae Golf and Country Club are still running at a busy pace.

On Friday the Bathurst Chamber of Commerce's Jubilee Classic '91 golf tournament is being staged, while the Danny's Pepsi Classic will be played Saturday.

Ladies' Day matches continue to be played. Last Tuesday morning, Sept. 3, the format of play was a four-woman scramble, enjoyed by all. Following play the ladies honored Maria Landry on her feat of scoring a hole-in-one on the 15th hole the previous week.

This past Saturday many Gowan Brae ladies took part in the Miramichi Best Ball, with the title going to local golfers Kathy Grebenc and Kelly MacDonald. After 18 holes they were tied with a Riverside twosome. Kelly and Kathy won it on the third hole in the sudden-death playoff that ensued.

Other Gowan Brae prize winners were Gisele Shaw and Valerie Frenette, second low net in the first division; Ilona Schnarr and Isabel MacLaggan, second low net in the second division; Marie Dykeman and Bernice Jardine, third low net in the second division; and Paula Lee and Pille Leonfellner, first low net in the third division.

The Closing Dinner and Dance will be held Oct. 5. Members are encouraged to attend with their friends and make this event a successful finish to a great season at Gowan Brae.

Ladies are also asked to mark Sept. 30 on their calendars for their monthly meeting, which gets underway at 7:30 p.m.

Laforest completes half-ironman

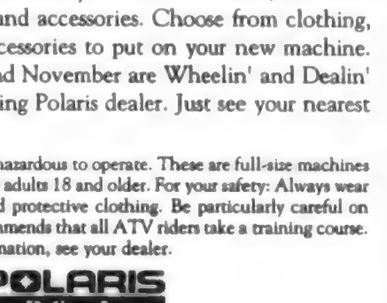
Berestord triathlete Pierre Laforest feels that, with a little luck, he could have finished much higher in the Dartmouth, N.S. half-ironman competition held Sept. 1.

"It was going really well, but I had a flat tire and lost about 20 minutes," he said.

Laforest, the only member of the Chaleur Roadrunners Club taking part, eventually finished around the middle of the 40- to 50-man field in a time of five hours and 23 minutes.

Called the 11th Annual SRI-Chinmoy Half-Ironman Triathlon, it is both the oldest such competition in Atlantic Canada, and the longest of the five triathlons Laforest has entered this year.

The competition features a two-kilometre swim, followed by a 90-km cycling portion, then a 21.1-km run.



Laforest trained about 15 hours a week since May in preparation for the triathlon season, which is now over.

HEALTH A VITAL GIFT

If you think your house needs a lot of upkeep every year, just imagine how much a 315,000 square foot building needs. In addition, when a building this big is a hospital, the task takes on gargantuan proportions.

If you add the maintenance of more than 1,000 pieces of equipment directly affecting patients to the maintenance of a building of this proportion, you will have a glimpse of what might go on every day at Chaleur Regional Hospital in the Plant and Maintenance Department and the Biomedical Engineering Department.

Maintenance at the Chaleur Hospital

PLANT AND MAINTENANCE DEPARTMENT

The Plant and Maintenance Department is responsible for repairs and preventative maintenance of hospital equipment such as: sterilizers, boilers, emergency diesel generators, the electrical distribution system, communication systems, distribution panels and cabling. There is also piping, sinks and toilets, sewer pipes and medical gas pipes.

This department also takes care of general painting and repairs and maintenance to tables, chairs, cupboards, floors, ceilings, carts on the floors, beds, wheelchairs, stretchers, etc. There is also heavier equipment such as elevators, air-conditioning units, motors, ventilators, intercoms, the nursing paging system, heating and ventilation which this team keeps operating smoothly.

With this amount of work, there is enough to keep a total of 23 employees busy, and that's not counting the various contractors who work on construction or projects that the Plant and Maintenance Department has neither the time nor the resources to do. There is, at times, between 30 and 60 extra people working for these contractors.

The Plant and Maintenance Department has three electricians and one electronic and instrumentation technician. There are two plumbers, one cabinet-maker and one cement-finisher, plasterer, wall, tiles, flooring repair carpenter. The department has one painter, one utility/trades helper, one part-time groundskeeper, one clerk typist, one construction coordinator, one assistant manager and one manager.

As for plant operation, that is, heating, there is one chief engineer, five stationary engineer operators and one part-time operator.

The Plant and Maintenance Department receives, on averages, more than 8,000 requisitions a year, ranging from minor repairs to major repairs. Requisitions can vary between changing a lightbulb and repairing a motor; therefore, a requisition can take a few minutes or several hours. If equipment should break down in the evening, on the weekend or on holidays, staff are on call 24 hours a day.

What is the biggest difference between what had to be done in Plant and Maintenance 20 years ago and what is being done today? Twenty years ago, when the hospital was first built, there were only five building and safety codes applicable to hospitals, but today there are over 40. This can cause certain problems. For example, the electrical system was installed according to the 1972 code; however, the electrical codes have had many changes since then. The same thing can be said of the fire code.

The Plant and Maintenance Department has an annual budget of over $1.3 million. Add the construction work currently under way and we're talking about $2 million for the CT Scan wing, a 1,216 square meter addition. The Nursing wing, a 290 square meter addition, costs $790,000. Furthermore, $2 million will be spent on repair work on the air-conditioning, ventilation and heating systems in the next two years. This means nearly $5,000,000 invested in our community.

Every year, the Boiler Room produces, on average, more than 94,500,000 pounds of steam. Some of this steam is sold to the Foyer Notre-Dame-de-Lourdes, located near the hospital. The wood-fired boiler produces over 44,700,000 pounds of steam a year. This is more than 47% of the required steam. The boiler burns wood residue purchased at a Nigadoo mill. The hospital is this mill's client for wood residue. As for electricity, the hospital consumes 6.9 million kilowatts/hour a year, representing an expenditure of $437,000. The hospital consumes 154,000,000 liters a year, or 33,900,000 gallons, of city water.

There is a close link between work done by the Plant and Maintenance Department and the patient. According to Raoul Benoit, Plant and Maintenance department head, the air-conditioning system, electricity and elevators must all be checked to ensure that they are functioning properly; patients directly benefit from a smoothly running hospital. A touch of paint can make a patient's stay more pleasant. In fact, according to Mr. Benoit, the Plant and Maintenance Department's work consists of creating a comfortable atmosphere for the patient. This department must work with all departments within the hospital; there is not one department with which they do not deal.

Jean Marc Thériault, Bio-medical Technologist in nursery fixing Isolette.

BIOMEDICAL ENGINEERING DEPARTMENT

Ligouri Roy, department head of the Biomedical Engineering Department, has a simple slogan: "No question is too silly to be asked." According to Mr. Roy, it is important that all equipment operators be informed and ask questions; we cannot take chances where patients safety is concerned.

The Biomedical Engineering Department's role is to ensure that all equipment affecting the patient be in mint working condition. This department and its two employees' role is to evaluate, inspect and repair the hospital's biomedical equipment. This equipment includes every monitor that could be found on the nursing units, cardiology and medical imaging equipment, and as of next spring, equipment from the CT Scan, Department and Nuclear Medicine Department.

This department's work begins even before the purchase of the equipment because the equipment is evaluated prior to buying it. The equipment must meet with the standards set by the Canadian Standards Association and the Canadian Hospital Association.

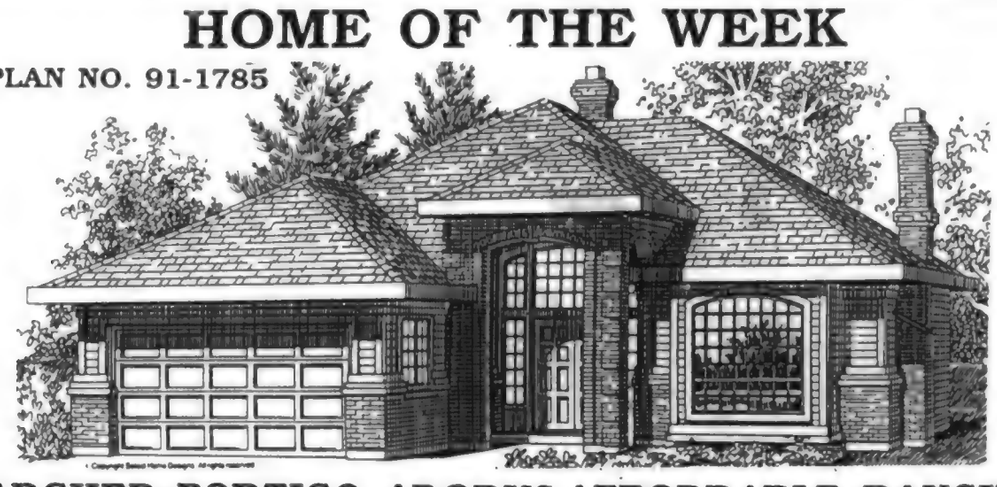
The equipment must also be inspected every six months and a follow-up must be done to ensure that it still meets all the specifications. In other words, defective equipment must be repaired. The department receives between 10 and 15 requisitions a day or 4,000 to 5,000 a year.

In addition to evaluating, inspecting and repairing equipment, the Biomedical Engineering Department acts as a consultant for equipment operators, be it the staff or the physicians. According to Ligouri Roy (department head), this consulting role is very important.

Why must the Biomedical Engineering Department ensure that the equipment be in mint working condition? First and foremost, it is a matter of safety; a patient could be electrocuted while being hooked up to a monitor if it is not installed properly or checked regularly. Secondly, we must ensure that the equipment will provide physicians with accurate results, test after test (in Cardiology, for example). Both staff members can repair just about any piece of equipment; however, there are still certain service contracts on some pieces of equipment. In some cases, the equipment's age causes problems for replacing parts. When replacement parts cannot be obtained, the equipment must be replaced. In Medical Imaging, for example, the equipment in Room B came from the Hôtel-Dieu and will be replaced in September 1991.

Have there been major changes since Ligouri Roy first arrived at Chaleur General Hospital in 1972? He says there is no comparison. In 1972, he was alone and there was hardly any radiology equipment. There is now ten times more equipment than in 1972 and it is much more sophisticated. For example, all the Radiology rooms are new, and this does not take into account the CT Scan and Nuclear Medicine equipment which he sees as a challenge for his department and anxiously awaits. Nuclear Medicine will also be a new field for the department and, to begin with, only 30% of the service will have to be provided. The Biomedical Engineering staff will be trained directly by the company who sold the equipment.

When a new specialist arrives, there is almost always new equipment. A new specialist might bring between 10 and 15 new pieces of equipment with him or her. In the past years, the Neonatology Department and the Otorhinolaryngology Department were created and new equipment was brought along.



To do this job, you must be a biomedical technologist. Ligouri Roy took courses in electronics, industrial electronics, industrial instrumentation and biology. He also took upgrading courses in medical electronics.

One of the dimensions of the Biomedical Engineering Department's work is its team work with the Plant and Maintenance Department. Mr. Roy believes that his department cannot work alone and he must be involved with other departments.

Ultimately, the patient and his or her safety is this department's number one priority. This is why "no question is too silly to be asked."

Writer liked Bathurst

Over The Back Fence
By ELEANOR A. SCOTT
Call 546-5680 after 6 p.m.

Most people are impressed with Bathurst upon their first visit, and it was no exception for Bill Gaston and his wife Dede.

Bill has the distinction of being "Writer in Residence" at University of New Brunswick, which gives him the opportunity to act as a literary resource person for other aspiring writers.

Bill has published a collection of short stories and some poetry, and has a play currently in workshop at U.N.B. His novel Tall Lives is in the process of being translated into French.

His wife Dede, formerly a ballet dancer with several American ballet companies, has forsaken teaching ballet in Fredericton and is devoting her time to their two children, Lise and Conner.

Joining them for a holiday at Youghall Beach were the children's friends, Oliver, Katie, Cameron, Christopher, Shawn and Jackson.

Also in Bathurst over the weekend from Fredericton was Lane MacIntosh, who is currently researching three articles on the North Shore of New Brunswick for an American publication.

Katharine Shellmer, her daughter Loma Shellmer and the latter's friend Jeffry Chisholm spent the past week in South Teteagouche visiting Katharine's mother, Mrs. Annie Foley. The Shellmers reside in South Raintree, Mass.

Prior to their visit, Annie entertained her granddaughter and husband Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Morgan, Holbrook, Mass. and their daughter Danielle.

This week she has been entertaining her granddaughter Linda Shellmar, Braintree, Mass., and her friend Dana Olsen, Holbrook, Mass.

Also visiting are Mr. and Mrs. David Lane (another granddaughter) and their children Nicole and Kristin, Abington, Mass.

Guests of Kit and Jarvis Gauthier this week were their daughter Daria Armstrong, Greenwood, N.S. and their son David Gauthier, his wife Eileen and their granddaughter, Andrea, Saint John.

Mrs. Mary Branch of 625 Brunswick Ave. has returned home from an extended holiday in Ontario and the United States.

On June 22, in Timmins, Ont., she attended the marriage of her granddaughter, Charlene Smith, to Steven Butler.

Flying to Tyler, Minn., she attended the marriage of her son, Gerald, to Caron Goehle on July 4.

On July 17, driving from Timmins with daughter Dorothy and son-in-law Paul Smith, they left for a visit with Paul's sister, Harriet, in Chester, Virginia. From Chester, they drove to Nag's Head, N.C. for a Smith family reunion.

They returned to Timmins July 31, where she spent the remainder of her holiday, with the exception of a visit with her grandson Wallace and his wife Mireille in Kirkland Lake, Ont.

Mrs. Branch returned home Sept. 4 with daughter Dorothy, who will be spending two weeks with her.

Nicholas Denys relief sculpture explained

Art Talk
With Bathurst artist JEAN-FRANCES

Materials required: Stiff cardboard or a small piece of masonite board; wood scraps that represent small blocks, as well as some irregular shapes; Bondfast or other wood glue.

This week we'll take a look at a relief sculpture created as part of a wall. Inside the Nicolas Denys building on Harborview Boulevard we can see an interesting effect in the lobby walls, achieved by placing bricks at different angles to each other.

These three relief sculptures were done 10 years ago and, because of budgetary restraints introduced at the time, remain unfinished as well as unsigned. The original models were in color and represent the forest, land and sea.

Upon talking to Hilda Lavoie-Frachon she gave the following information: The seas were represented with turquoise blue, earth colors were used for land, and orange was to be for the forest, at it's finest in the fall. She has not signed her work because it has remained unfinished. It could not be colored because the budget for art works was cut and, once colored, it certainly would look like a piece of art work. Hopefully we can view the models at some time but for now appreciate the sense of rhythm she has created with the arrangement of the bricks. Can you perceive weeds undulating in the wind or waves? Which one represents the forest? How do these three themes relate to Bathurst?

We can try experimenting with a method of relief sculpture at home by gluing wood blocks and scraps on a piece of board. But careful, it is not as simple as it looks. Plan your design carefully before gluing it. Arrange your blocks in different patterns until you like your arrangement--then glue. Even popsicle sticks can be arranged in a sculptured relief pattern.

Do an identical relief sculpture and color it. What difference does this make? Have fun. See you next week.

Lessons in pet responsibility

Pet News

By MARGUERITE MORRISON

Do you own a pet cat or kitten? Are you supposed to leave your cat roam at all times?

If you said "yes" to our first question, it should be "no" to the second one.

Lately there has been reports in the East Bathurst area of the city that many cats have gone missing.

You are responsible for your pets at all times, be they cat or dog. They will leave home in search of food or companionship if they are not spayed or neutered, because that is their nature. So, to keep them safe at home and not out bothering your neighbor or causing an accident on the road, check your pet. See where he is if you do not have a fenced-in yard, tie your pet in a safe place, give him room to move around, talk to him during the day and make him feel wanted.

Helpful tips on child rearing

VON In The 90's

By VERONICA RATCHFORD
Executive Director
of the Bathurst VON

Well, it is that time of the year again when all children and adolescents return to school and the home environment returns to a more normal routine.

This week, I would like to pass on some information written by Dr. Coyne regarding Parent/Teen Relationships.

When a young individual is between the ages of 12 and 18, both teen and parent are often left feeling inadequate, alienated, and confused.

During this time, there should be greater emphasis on communication and listening.

Discuss assignments (i.e. school work, household chores, part-time jobs, etc.) privileges, and forms of discipline with your teenager. No one likes to be bossed around.

If a teenager has been involved in the planning as to what he/she expects of himself/herself, and what the parents expect, the teen will behave accordingly.

Parents are encouraged to be firm, consistent, realistic in their expectations, and let the teenager win some battles. No one likes to lose all of the time.

Allow the adolescents to demonstrate self-responsibility, but prevent them from making decisions they are not mature enough to handle. For example, if you leave a 14 year-old home alone for the weekend he or she may not be able to handle it, and many problems for the teenager could result from this overload of responsibilities.

Remember, most young people are caring, appreciative, and understanding--they just do not express or show it very frequently in the teenage years. They usually grow up to be "great adults".

VON has always cared for the family as a unit, therefore if you require any information or need our services, please call 548-2448.

How to avoid business pitfalls

Your Business

By DIANNE MALEY
Business Analyst
Thomson News Service

Ever dream of going into business for yourself? What would you do? Would you build a business or buy one? For a growing number of Canadians, the dream of being boss is becoming reality, if not by choice, then by necessity.

Perhaps you have taken early retirement from your job. Or you have been laid off from a high-paying job and given a big cash settlement. Time is weighing on your hands. Your lump-sum payment is burning a hole in your pocket as you search your local newspaper for business opportunities.

Slow down. Almost assured success attends only the top 70 franchise chains, says Jerry White, president of J. White and Associates, a Toronto consulting firm. The success rate for the next 200 largest chains is only 45 to 50 per cent. After that, it dips to a scant 30 per cent.

PITFALLS ABOUND

Buying an independent business is at least as risky as buying a franchise. Hundreds of small businesses have been crippled by recession. Their owners have put them up for sale in desperation, hoping to unload them before things get worse.

When you walk in the door, the business appears to be humming. The owner is enthusiastic. He infects you with his dreams. He pulls out his statement for the past year; it looks good. Six-month results look healthy as well.

What you can't tell by looking at the numbers is that revenue may have begun to slide two months ago. The hard-pressed owner has been trying to sell equipment to stay afloat. Word is out in the community that the company is in trouble. Not knowing this, you buy, and the slide continues. You may never know what hit you.

To avoid surprises, you can watch a business for a while to see if it endures. If it is faltering, unbeknownst to you, it may be insolvent six months from now. Talk to employees, suppliers and customers, Jerry Zeidenberg advised in a recent column in The Globe and Mail.

You will also need some knowledge of the business, the market and your competitors. Although this seems basic, many would be entrepreneurs do not bother to take this important first step, advisers say.

TO BUY OR BUILD

Say you have $50,000 to invest. Would you be better off starting from scratch? Possibly yes. This is especially true if you have a side-line or hobby that you would like to expand to fill the commercial market. You may have made cabinets in your spare time. Now you would like to set up a small manufacturing plant. Or you have been selling pies at local fairs. Now you would like to open a specialty pie shop at the local mall.

Two obstacles budding entrepreneurs often overlook are government regulation and the difficulty of finding good help. If you are selling food, you will have to meet all kinds of health and safety regulations; inspectors will be buzzing around your door. If you are embarking on a manufacturing venture, you may have trouble finding skilled workers.

But the one thing that scuppers most empires-in-the-making is shortage of capital. If you have to rely on bankers for additional financing, you are as good as done for. Better to put your nest-egg in a GIC (guaranteed investment certificate) and look for a part-time job.

Investment strategies

Money Talk

By GARY LeROUX
Chartered Financial Planner

Investing is taking what money you have and trying to do better with it than simply leaving it in the bank. This is not an elegant definition, but I believe it is what most people mean when they say they want to invest their money.

This week I would like to run briefly through the most common investment instruments that are available.

T-Bills:

T-Bills may be bought from investment dealers and banks in multiples of $1,000, with often a minimum purchase of $5,000. T-Bills are sold at a discount. At eight per cent, a $1,000 T-Bill maturing in 60 days would cost approximately $925, with the increase in value being treated as interest.

Investors with over $25,000 may get better rates than investors with smaller amounts. Compare rates and fees, as they may vary. Investors who divide their bank accounts between one or more banks or trust companies due to the limit of $50,000 on an insured deposit should consider the advantages of consolitating their funds and buying T-bills.

Bonds:

Buy bonds only if you believe interest rates will drop or remain steady during the life of the bond. Government of Canada bonds have the greatest trading liquidity, and are best for most individual investors. If you would buy a five-year GIC (Guaranteed Investment Certificate), consider a five-year Canada Savings Bond, which offers liquidity and a direct government guarantee not limited to the $60,000 ceiling on insured deposits.

Striped Bonds:

These work effectively much like T-Bills in that a future single payment is discounted to a present value based upon a stated interest rate. They are generally most suitable for self-directed RRSPs or other tax-free account due to the requirement that individuals must now report accrued interest annually.

Preferred Shares:

A preferred share can be viewed as a bond that hasn't quite made it in terms of safety, or as a common stock without the profit potential. Investors buy preferred shares because they pay dividends that, because of the dividend income tax credit, generally pay an after-tax rate of return greater than that of interest-paying investments such as bonds and GICs.

Common Shares:

These are the basic units of equity ownership. Prices of common shares may change throughout each trading day. Share prices reflect the general outoook for the stock market; investor expectations about a firm's profits, dividends and other developments that affect the company; and the prospects for the industry the firm is involved in.

Feed agreement helps New Bandon farmer

Gerald Daley, a New Bandon dairy farmer, has undertaken three projects during the past four years through financial assistance under the Canada-New Brunswick Livestock Feed Development Subsidairy Agreement.

His most recent project, expanding his hay barn, is well under way and should be completed this month, said a release.

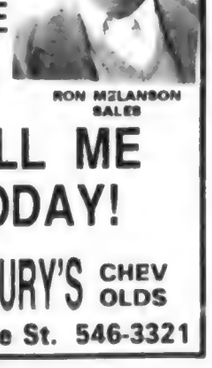
Daley's present barn holds about 14,000 bales of hay. His operation now requires storage for 17,000 to 18,000 bales. The expansion will provide storage for 19,000 bales.

When the expansion is complete, Daley says he will have adequate space.

"I'll have more than enough room to store all I need. In past years, I've lost quite a bit of hay, because I had to leave some outside."

In the spring, Daley installed an electric fence around 40 acres of new pasture. He says it will let him manage his pasture land better, improve quality, and increase the number of animals per acre.

Under the agreement, Daley also has purchased a grain storage bin equipped with a ventilation system.



"The bin gives me more storage space, so I can grow barley. The ventilation system greatly reduces the risk of grain spoilage and reduces my operating costs," he said.

Daley is pleased with the Livestock Feed Development Agreement.

"The agreement has been very useful to me. The programs are simple and there isn't much red tape. I hope another agreement like this will be put in place for the next five years."

The Canada-New Brunswick Livestock Feed Development Subsidiary Agreement is administered by Agriculture Canada and the New Brunswick Department of Agriculture.

Wolf provokes readers to thought with biker story

Book Review

On the sultry morning of July 4, 1947, 500 independent bikers roared into the rural California town of Hollister. For the next 36 hours, they succeeded in terrorizing the tiny, isolated community and its largely volunteer, seven-member police force.

This single precipitous action, more than any other, altered the already ugly face of criminal activity in North America as drastically as if someone had cut it open with the jagged edge of a broken beer bottle.

Reading an account of the overblown biker riot in Harper's magazine, Hollywood producer Stanley Kramer shrewdly saw the potential for stark drama and larger-than-life characterizations played out on the silver screen.

When he cast a pouting Marlon Brando against a chisel-featured Lee Marvin as hero and anti-hero in The Wild One (1954), fiction not only mirrored reality, it gave it a new and brutalized dimension.

The outlaw motorcycle rider, with his heart on his sleeve and a propensity for petty crimes against an intolerant and inhumane society, was born. It wasn't hard to see the gleam in Brando's eye as he rode to freedom "jamming in the wind"; 15 years later, a similar image recurred in Dennis Hopper's Easy Rider.

In this respect, the latest paean to these motorized Don Quixotes, Daniel R. Wolf's The Rebels...A Brotherhood of Outlaw Bikers (University of Toronto Press; 349 pages, $29.95), is a sincere, if uneven, attempt at capturing and analysing the curious chemistry that has enabled the phenomenon of outlaw motorcycle gangs to become as vital and enduring as it has.

The author is certainly one of the more intriguing archetypes of the biker as "brain and brawn." With his club colors now hung in the closet and his Harley safely tucked in the garage, he's an adjunct professor of anthropology at the University of Prince Edward Island. To research The Rebels, Wolf spent three years in the field doing ethnological work with--what was for an academic--a rather unusual community, the Rebels Motorcycle Club of Edmonton, Alta.

In The Rebels, Wolf walks a tricky tightrope between pleasing his academic peers and his earthy subjects. Understandably, he sometimes stumbles into partisan pitfalls on either side of a rather narrow line; as when he gets involved in a barroom brawl, to better experience biker brotherhood. Or when he waxes grandiloquent about out-law motorcycle clubs in florid academic prose that would make most hardened bikers shake their heads in disdain.

In Wolf's topsy-turvy world, police are portrayed as crude, brutal ogres who constantly harass and intimidate bikers, violating their civil rights. In passages that fly in the face of reality, bikers are seen as rugged individualists whose greatest crime, when confronted by the establishment, is to retaliate by physically expressing themselves with such acts of good ole boy spontaneity as petty theft, minor assault, and intimidation, both verbal and physical.

NEVER-NEVER LAND

The author's is a never-never land of virile easy riders, stretching to a filmy blue horizon; of endless pit-stops to chug-a-lug beer and ravish willing, long-legged women under starry skies; a world where ultimate perfection is manifest in a Harley Davidson Heritage FLST.

One might almost be lulled into believing bikers would win Good Neighbor Sam awards wherever they pitch tent. Even overt acts of violence are justified by Wolf as righteous, as when his "old lady" savages a car door with a well-placed boot, to terrorize a driver who'd earlier committed the cardinal sin of carelessly changing into their lane.

Wolf tries to be too many things to too many people. In a futile effort to satisfy two irreconcilable cultures--a mainstream society that he derides ad nauseam, and bikers he's observed and befriended--he seems unable to establish who his final audience should be.

For a work that purports to have academic overtones, Wolf's research is occasionally rather threadbare.

Charts, when they are included at all, are rudimentary at best, and were better left undrawn. There's little to be said for the legal sources quoted. There are no interviews with criminologists or Crown attorney's who've dealt with the biker phenomenon across Canada. There's no mention of sworn testimony gleaned from public hearings on organized crime, which might have provided rich and fertile source material to critically balance the musings of Wolf's subjects. It's the telling absence of such data that is The Rebels' greatest draw-back.

Wolf's ostensible search for academic truth is curiously couched in rather weak qualifications. The vested interests of the motorcycle club were apparently allowed to influence what was included in this work.

Perhaps the most poignant and telling irony in reviewing this text is the incontrovertible fact that, while criticizing much that is wrong with the straight world, the author has accepted what many regard as the ultimate accolade available within the same "wretched" establishment, the trappings of Academe.

Still, parts of Wolf's writing are engrossing. His anecdotes, when not earthy as barnyard refuse, are quite humorous. Like the tale of Raunch, who reconciled his "ole lady's" disdain for greasy tools and stinking chemicals about the house by constructing a ramp over the porch stairway, directly into the living room, so he could work on his bike in relaxation, while watching Gunsmoke.

Did I like The Rebels? Well, surprisingly, I did, if only because of rough gems hidden in the fabric of the work. Daniel Wolf provoked me to thought, anger and, at times, exasperation. Because the author is mining new territory, he deserves to be complimented. Perhaps, though, in his reluctance to make the hazardous trek toward what could have been a motherlode of information, he's allowed himself to be taken in by so much fool's gold. And then perhaps not.

Gloucester Gourmet

September is Big Brothers Big Sisters Month, and that means Joel Maurice is on the go.

He is the organization's public relations and recruitment officer for the Chaleur region, and has therefore been looking after organizing the month's events.

As an active and busy member of the community, and as a bachelor, Joel relies on the Bachelor's Guide to Ward Off Starvation, a cookbook put out a few years ago by Big Brothers-Big Sisters of Canada.

Of the many recipes therein, the following is among his favorites.

STUFFED PEPPERS
4 green bell peppers
¼ lb ground beef
2 tbsp uncooked rice
½ onion, diced
dash of salt
dash of pepper
dash of garlic powder
dash of oregano
1 cup tomato sauce
¼ cup grated mozzarella cheese

Heat oven to 375 degrees. Cut the tops off the peppers (like a Halloween pumpkin) and remove all the seeds from inside. Boil enough water to cover the peppers, drop the peppers into the boiling water and cook for two minutes.

Combine the ground beef, onion and seasoning. Mash them all together until they are thoroughly acquainted.

Stuff the mashed mixture into the peppers. Stand the stuffed peppers in a casserole dish and dump the tomato sauce over them.

Cover with foil and bake in oven for about 40 minutes. Uncover and top with the grated cheese five minutes before the end of cooking. Serve 1 or 2.

Every month, a draw will be held, with one of our Gloucester Gourmets for that month winning a cake from Jamieson's Save-Easy in the Place Bathurst Mall. To enter, simply submit a recipe along with your name and telephone number and The Northern Light will make arrangements to get you into the Gloucester Gourmet column for your chance to win! Our winner for the month of August is Tina White.

HARVARD SCHOLARSHIP

Linda Maxwell, 17-year-old daughter of Dr. Samuel and Irene Maxwell of Beresford, has received a $2,000 Harvard Women in Science scholarship from Harvard University in Boston, Mass. Linda, who will be entering Grade 12 at Bathurst High School this fall, has been studying at Harvard this summer in an intensive science and math-oriented summer program. The scholarship goes toward defraying the cost of the program, which will earn her credits toward her post-secondary studies. Linda, who plans to study medicine, has a sister, Cindy, who is currently majoring in chemistry at Harvard.

FURTHERING STUDIES

Heather Louise Wolfe of Truro, N.S., a graduate of Cobequid Educational Centre, has been accepted to the University of Toronto to study for a bachelor of science in nursing. She is the daughter of Doug and Mary Wolfe, and granddaughter of Gary and Mary Stratton of Bathurst.

Homeowners hold up land clarifications

City councillor Ken Frenette plans to personally meet with three homeowners who have yet to sign documents clarifying land ownership in their South Bathurst neighborhood.

When Mr. Frenette asked for another update on the situation at the Sept. 3 regular meeting of city council, Human Resources director Tracy Branch told council the quieting of titles is being held up by the three homeowners, who have not yet consented to sign the documents.

The quieting of titles is a procedure meant to clarify ownership of property designated only by outdated and imprecise deeds.

Mr. Branch said he did not know why three homeowners are holding out, but speculated they are concerned the size of their properties may decrease.

Mr. Frenette noted the impasse creates a problem for the other homeowners, who would like to finally get the legal title to their properties.

"This has been dragging on for three years," he charged, adding the situation is also resulting in mounting legal fees for the city.

He asked that Mr. Branch provide him with the names of the holdouts following the meeting, so that he could meet with them personally.

Councillor Frenette also requested an update on the city's new transient trader bylaw, enacted in June.

The bylaw was passed to help regulate the activities of traders and peddlers who temporarily set up shop in the city.

He was told four trader's licenses have been issued under the bylaw, spot checks are being conducted by the Bathurst City Police, and all traders that have been queried have produced city-sanctioned licenses.

Only one complaint has been received, and the offending vender voluntarily ceased his vending activities.

Also among councillor Frenette's concerns were the city's street patching program, and a matter regarding consultant's fees related to the extension of water and sewer services in Hussey Subdivision in South Bathurst. However, he was unsuccessful in getting those matters addressed.

When he became perplexed with City Manager Bob Bouchard's inability to provide answers, Mr. Bouchard told him it is impossible for him to be prepared for questions he had no idea would be asked.

"It would be so simple if items were submitted beforehand," instead of being introduced only at the start of meetings, he said.

"There is no way in the world I can address those questions."

He could only pledge to look into the matters and report back to council. The same answer was given when councillor Harvey Boucher asked about sidewalk work on Bridge Street.

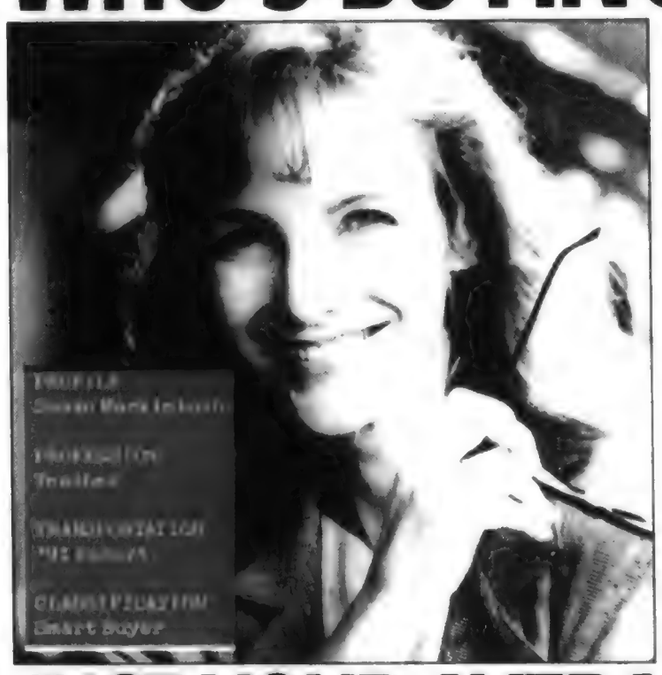
You're so brave,
All Canada should rave.
Just do your best,
And accomplish your quest.

Good luck, and have a great journey!

Good luck

Through days of long walking,
And tough times you go through,
You will always have our wish and love,
No matter what you do.

You could walk a million miles,
And still be full of smiles,
We know you're grateful and kind,
With an open-hearted mind.



So keep your hopes up,
And you'll always have good luck.

Editor's note: Both poems were written to encourage blind Bathurst man Ken McColm in his Incredible Journey, which will see him walk across Canada in an effort to raise awareness and funds for the Canadian Diabetes Association.*

The first poem was written by Krista Baldwin while a Grade 6 student at Parkwood Heights Elementary School last year. Krista is the daughter of Ron and Kathy Baldwin of Bathurst.

The second poem was written by Alana Hartley, also a Grade 6 student at Parkwood Heights Elementary School last year. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Hartley of Bathurst.

Beauty of 45th parallel

Travel Today

By VINCENT EGAN
Travel Columnist
Thomson News Service

There's something slightly mystical about the 45th parallel of latitude, precisely halfway between the North Pole and the equator.

Nature seems to have lavished her beauty along its course — nowhere more than in central Ontario. The Muskoka and Haliburton regions, straddling the 45th parallel, abound with clear, sparkling lakes and rivers, separated by deep forests yet accessible by modern highways.

An advertisement in Thomas Cook's Travellers' Gazette of July 1905, described the Muskoka Lakes — with pardonable hyperbole — as "the grandest spot in all America — lakes of blue set with isles of emerald."

It's a matter of never-ending debate whether the natural beauty if great in the green and sunny days of summer, or during that brief period — late September, early October — when the pastels give way to the brilliant gold and vivid crimson of an eastern Canadian autumn.

That colorful extravaganza annually draws throngs of visitors from Canada and abroad. (Characteristically, many Canadians fail to realize that such displays don't occur on other continents.)

ROOM AT THE INN

Overnight accommodation for the period of the fall color cavalcade is already heavily booked, particularly on weekends, although diligent seekers should still be able to find space.

This summer — except for last weekend, when Monday was a holiday throughout Ontario — finding accommodation in Muskoka and Haliburton hasn't been much of a problem.

Although there are exceptions in particular locations, the trend has been toward lower levels of tourism annually for the past few years. Fewer Americans seem to be visiting central Ontario's resorts, possibly because of the new-in-1991 seven per cent goods and services tax.

On the other hand, many Ontario families maintain a strong loyalty, spanning generations, to the region and its long-established resorts. At Canadian Pacific's luxurious Deerhurst Resort just east of Huntsville, founded in 1896, vice-president Bob Miron notes that the number of guests from southern Ontario during the peak summer season is still growing.

If U.S. visitors are fewer, the slack is at least partially being taken up by German and Japanese visitors on package tours, utilizing other services of the Canadian Pacific travel organization.

YEAR-ROUND FUN

It wasn't long ago that "the season" in Muskoka was limited to the period between Victoria Day and Thanksgiving Day. Only a few resorts, such as Deerhurst, maintained a full range of services year-round.

Miron, in charge of development at 370-room Deerhurst, says that he is concentrating on activities for spring and fall guests. The resort recently opened a 7,000-yard, 18-hole championship golf course called Deerhurst Highlands, supplementing the par-65 Lakeside course.

By December, tourism in central Ontario will be picking up again with a full range of winter activities — cross country and alpine skiing, skating, snowshoeing, tobogganing, snowmobiling and winter trail-riding.

HELPING TO CURB COST OF EDUCATION

Sylvie Gauvin of Petit-Rocher was one of 17 second-year French nursing students taking part in a car wash Saturday at the Irving Car Wash and Convenience Store on St. Peter Avenue. The group raised $654 with the endeavor, helping to finance their Registered Nursing Exams. The exams will be held in January, 1991, and cost $600 per student. The students would like to thank Irving Car Wash and Convenience and McDonald's Family Restaurant for sponsoring the event.

IN FOCUS

"A Fish Called Wanda," which makes its network television debut Sunday, Sept. 15, on ABC, stars Jamie Lee Curtis (l.) as a jewel thief who involves a lustful English barrister, played by John Cleese (r.), in a robbery plan. Kevin Kline plays her macho partner-in-crime. Sight gags abound in the often riotously funny film. The script was written by former Monty Python troupe member Cleese, and Kline won an Oscar for his performance.

This could be the year for singer Trisha Yearwood

Trisha Yearwood--Trisha Yearwood

Trisha Yearwood is destined to become one of the top new ladies of country. All you have to do is listen to her self-titled, debut album for MCA records, and you will be convinced.

This album is filled with love ballads, something which seems to be Trisha's forte. She can also cut loose and give you a rousing number as well, the best example being her version of a song James House did recently, entitled, "That's What I Like About You."

Her first single, "She's In Love With The Boy" is doing well on the charts, and the video is also getting a lot of airplay. It tells of how young Katie is in love with Tommy, but her father hates the kid, but as in most songs true love always wins in the end.

Garth Brooks helps Trisha on harmony on "Like We Never Had A Broken Heart" and "Victim of the Game." Brooks co-wrote the latter with Mark D. Sanders, and the former with Pat Alger.

On "The Woman Before Me", the words, The woman before me/ Must have been hard on you", explain what it can be like to break away from the past.

In "Fools Like Me", Trisha sings about how some people fall in love blindly, and in my favorite, "The Whisper Of Your Heart", she sings of the advice a father gives to his child about the pit-falls of life: Roll with the punches/Aim for the mark/But listen to the whisper of your heart.

This is a good debut album for Trisha Yearwood, and should chart several more singles. Those to watch for are "Lonesome Dove", a Carl Jackson and Larry Gordie tune, and "You Done Me Wrong (And That Ain't Right)."

This could very well be the year and the album for Trisha Yearwood.

Until next week, keep whistling.

Make your move.

Badminton's easy and exciting! After work or on the weekend, make it part of your game plan!

J. L. CONVENIENCE VIDEO REVIEW

By MICHAEL J. BOURGUIGNON
Northern Light Staff

Queens Logic

An excellent ensemble cast that includes John Malkovich (Dangerous Liaisons) and Kevin Bacon (He Said, She Said) glorifies life in the New York neighborhood of Queens.

Growing up as boys in the 'hood has impacted on all them, and when they are reunited by a friend's wedding that may or may not happen, they discover they all still have some growing up to do.

It's the new improved Big Chill, taken out of the home and into the streets.

The cast runs through a full gamut of emotional problems and, in a few cases, some rather serious dysfunctions.

One is a schmuck whose wife dumps him, filling him with a burning need to prove him manlihood by repeating a heroic childhood stunt; the other is a failed Hollywood actor unable to face up to his lack of success; another is a reclusive homosexual who can't relate to gay men.

An emotive outing that provides a refreshing change of pace from the kung-fu-with-automatic-weapons films that seem to cram the market, Queens Logic is a well-acted movie that's worth a look.

Consider yourself a prime candidate for viewing if you have ever suffered a mid-life crisis, or expect to sometime soon.

Cruising Bar

For denizens of the French art-film section (if there exists such a thing), Cruising Bar ranks with the best.

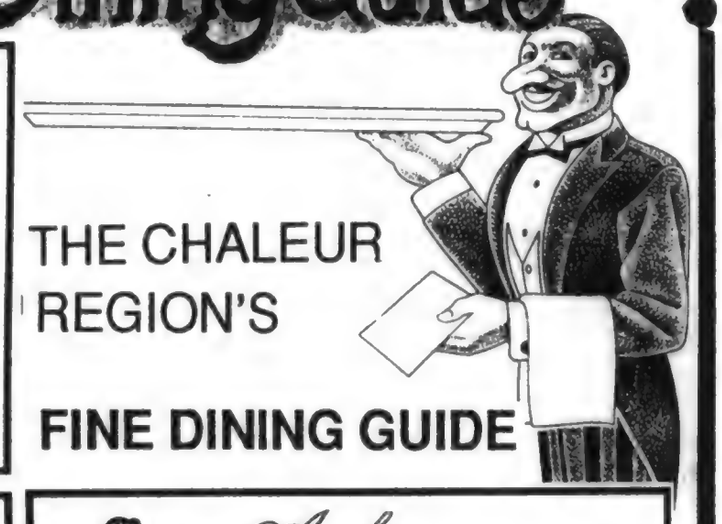
It's the simple story of four very different men who go out to very different bars, hoping to get lucky.

While it has more than a little potential for sleaze, the film stops short just where it should.

Instead, an interesting and often very humorous character study develops.

A barside conversation between an arrogant but non-communicative yuppie and his target pickup provides one of the brightest comedic moments, so watch for it.

As for the hellish busride one character takes, well, it's funny too, but keep the remote control handy. You may need to fast-forward.



The separate stories, although simply told, are cleverly interwoven, and an amusing transaction used both to start the film and to bring it all together.

It should be noted that Cruising Bar is recorded in French without subtitles, but if that's not a problem, neither is enjoying it.

Kirsty MacColl is in fine company, but David Hallyday is instantly forgettable

Kirsty MacColl-Electric Landlady

England's Kirsty MacColl has long been in good stead with fans of eclectic, intelligent pop. And rightly so.

MacColl has worked with such popular artists as Talking Heads, The Smiths, Robert Plant, Morrissey, Happy Mondays, and the Pogues--a fine pedigree indeed.

For her latest effort, she surrounded herself with an equally impressive crew of contemporaries, including former Smiths guitarist Johnny Marr and the Pogues' Jem Finer.

The result is a very listenable collection of bouncy yet provocative soapbox pronouncements that prove MacColl possesses a heart and mind at least as big as her talent.

The musical company she keeps doesn't hurt either.

Produced by MacColl's husband, Steve Lillywhite, Electric Landlady moves from light fare such as All I Ever Wanted (Was a Little More Respect From You) (penned by MacColl and Marshall Crenshaw) to severe socio-political examinations such as Children of the Revolution, which Johnny Marr helped shape.

In the latter, MacColl sings, in her sweet and steady voice: Children of the revolution/ Coming out to play/ Bombers ripped the night apart/And blew the school away.

Heavy stuff, sure. But then, in real life, it's not always "Hammer-time."

Musically, there isn't a single "skip-over" track in the lot, and lyrical evidence of MacColl's wry humor appears in just about every one.

All in all, Electric Landlady is entertaining and accessible, not only to those with fiercely alternative tastes. It can and should be enjoyed by many.

David Hallyday--Rock 'n' Heart

Say, I didn't know Jon Bon Jovi had a new release on the market. Wait a minute, this isn't Jon Bon Jovi; it's Bryan Adams.

Whoops! Turns out this guy's name is actually David Hallyday. Who? Precisely.

Despite an impressive background (He's the son of Johnny Hallyday and Sylvie Vartan, and has scored seven consecutive top ten singles), there is nothing to distinguish David Hallyday from the rest of the pack, aside from the possibility that his music is artistically emptier than most.

To wit, consider this snippet from the chorus of "Ooh La La", which is the lead track, and a sorry way to start any album: I said ooh la la/baby, do that ooh la la/I really love your ooh la la/Do whatever you want with me.

No, thanks.

Unfortunately, it gets worse. Check this one out, from "Hey, Louise": Runnin' hot and cold, babe/Is there somethin' that you need?/'cause I'm givin' all I got, girl/you're such a hungry mouth to feed.

Grammatical transgressions aside, the stuff is trite, fading clumsily into the ugly tapestry of trash.

Despite this (or perhaps because of it), the blonde-haired, blue-eyed Hallyday's latest outpouring will probably score big with the younger, unenlightened set.

And they can have it.

Leaders debate

All four of New Brunswick's party leaders have agreed to participate in a live televised debate Sept. 12.

They will trash out the issues of the campaign in the CBC studios at 1160 Regent Street, Fredericton.

The debate will be broadcast commercial-free throughout New Brunswick over the facilities of CHSJ Television. It will begin at approximately 6:16 p.m. and will take 66 minutes. The moderators will be Terry Seguin and Carole MacNeil, the two hosts of CBC News for New Brunswick.

Details of the debate were announced by Mark Pedersen, executive producer of CBC News for New Brunswick.

"This will be a good opportunity for the voters of the province to see the party leaders address some of the major issues," Pederson said

Here is the structure of the debate:

--Each leader will be allowed a two-minute opening statement, and a two-minute closing statement.

--In addition, there will be five ten-minute segments, each on a separate issue. The issues will be job creation, language, social spending, taxation and political vision.

--Each segment will begin with an opening question from one of the moderators. Each leader will be allowed a one-minute uninterrupted reply. The remainder of the six minutes will be a more open debate guided by the moderators, with leaders able to challenge each other.

Preliminary hearing continues in Bathurst double murder case

By MICHAEL J. BOURGUIGNON
Northern Light Staff

The preliminary hearing for Alan Watt continues today Wednesday.

Watt, 44, faces two charges of second-degree murder in the June 16 stabbing deaths of Gary DeGrace and Diane Aubie, at the Sportsman tavern on Main Street.

The deceased, both of Bathurst, were aged 42 and 33, respectively.

The preliminary hearing, which is to determine whether enough evidence exists to proceed to trial, began Tuesday morning. It attracted a full courtroom of spectators to the Bathurst courthouse.

The media is forbidden from publishing testimony from a preliminary hearing, and Watt's attorney, Henrik Tonning of Saint John, reminded the court of this by making a specific request to this effect.

Watt was brought into the courtroom by members of the Bathurst City Police. Handcuffed and dressed in a white shirt and black pants, he was led to the prisoner's dock, where he remained flanked by police officers. He appeared thinner than he had been at his original court appearance June 17.

When Provincial Court Judge J. Frederic Arsenault granted a request from Watt's attorney that the handcuffs be removed, several spectators could be heard whispering their concern and disapproval.

Unlike the last time he appeared in court, Watt did not hide his face from television cameras when he was ushered into the courthouse.

Crown Prosecutor Aurele Poitras, who is assisting George Chiasson in prosecuting the case, said at least six witnesses were called to the stand Tuesday. He would not say how many witnesses the prosecution intends to call throughout the hearing, which he said could end today.

Striking federal workers back to work

"Do you stay out, do we go in and block the system, or do we take it? There are always three or four options."

Local members of the Public Service Alliance of Canada were to meet tonight Wednesday to vote on how they want back-to-work legislation handled nationally by the union.

PSAC strike coordinator Julien Pitre said Tuesday the meeting was slated for the Ecole Secondaire Nepisiguit school.

However, a Broadcast News report Tuesday night stated that picket lines were to come down at midnight last night, and the federal government would negotiate with the PSAC. The back-to-work legislation was to be put on hold.

Mr. Pitre said if back-to-work legislation is enacted, the union may oppose it in any number of ways.

"Do you stay out, do we go in and block the system, or do we take it? There are always three or four options."

He noted, however, that the members would likely try to block the system if they are forced back to work.

"You know what bureaucrats do, they play with paper," he said.

The PSAC, which represents workers in the public sector, began a national strike Sept. 9. They are protesting the federal government's plan to implement a wage freeze on public sector workers for this year, and increases of no more than three per cent in 1992 and 1993.

On Monday, the government introduced legislation in the House of Commons to force the striking employees to return to work.

Striking federal workers tightened up the picket line Monday amid talk of the impending legislation.

About 100 strikers blocked the entrance to the Canada Employment and Immigration Centre in the Nicolas-Denys building Monday, in an effort to slow down production from management personnel and designated employees.

"We basically told the designated workers they needed an escort to get in," Mr. Pitre said.

Police officers arrived at the CEIC building Monday morning to escort non-striking personnel through.

A similar strategy was expected Tuesday morning, so police officers were called in to lead the non-striking workers from the outset.

However, Mr. Pitre said the move by the non-striking employees was unnecessary.

"We had agreed before we'd play it cool," he said, adding the situation basically amounted to the workers "crying wolf."

The PSAC is comprised of 156,000 members, of which 46,000 are designated by law as essential employees and therefore not allowed to strike.

In Bathurst, the strike involves about 350 workers at the Nicolas-Denys building.

Josianne Lanteigne (right) and Claire Savoie were among the striking Public Service Alliance of Canada members demonstrating Monday outside the Nicolas Denys building on Harborview Boulevard. More than 90 PSAC members marched along Main Street to protest the federal government's move to legislate the strikers back to work. They carried a lookalike dummy of Prime Minister Brian Mulroney which was later hung.

Scabies outbreak at hospital controlled

An outbreak of scabies at Chaleur Regional Hospital is now under control.

About 50 to 60 people were treated early last week for the highly-contagious skin disease, brought into the hospital in August by a patient, said public relations officer Leopold Poirier.

Scabies is a common skin disease caused by an almost invisible organism, or mite, that lives beneath the skin and causes extreme itching. It takes from four to six weeks after contracting the disease before the tell-tale itching begins.

The treatment was carried out by Dr. Annette Seguin, district medical health officer; and Dr. Angela Hickey.

The entire fourth floor was closed off early last week to treat the patients. The treatment consisted of applying lotion on the patients' bodies, with a bath or shower eight to 12 hours later clearing up the disease completely.

Hospital staff were kept busy recently contacting as many potential patients as possible.

"Everyone who could have had contact (with the infected patient) was called," Mr. Poirier said, but added that there may still be some they missed.

The disease is not life-threatening, and consists mainly of an itchy, red rash.

If someone has the symptoms mentioned above, they should contact their family physician.

Give the gift of blood

It may be a few months before Christmas arrives, but here's an ideal gift suggestion.

Give blood.

More specifically, give blood Sept. 24 and 25 at Donald Eddy Memorial Hall on St. Patrick Street in Bathurst.

That's where the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Herman J. Good V.C. Branch No. 18 Royal Canadian Legion will sponsor a Red Cross Blood Donor Clinic, and one donation can help as many as four people. Whole blood is made of red cells, white cells, platelets, and plasma, and all are used for a variety of purposes in hospitals throughout the province, which go through about 100 blood donations per day.

And they never have too much. "They need blood all the time," said Marjorie Good, chairman of the Bathurst blood donor clinics.

The Sept. 24 clinic will run from 2:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m., and again from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m., while the Sept. 25 clinic will run from 1:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m., and from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m.

The quota for each day is 250 donors.

On average, it takes about 45 minutes to give blood, and anyone 16 to 60 years of age is eligible. If someone had given blood leading up to his or her 60th birthday, they can continue doing so up to their 71st birthday.

Any questions related to giving blood will be answered by nurses on the site.

Enrolment up in Dist. 42

Enrolment is balancing out in District 42 schools, thanks to the kindergarten program, and an influx of students at Bathurst High School.

"This is the largest enrolment ever at Bathurst High School," said Joan Pettigrew, chairman of the local English school board.

Preliminary enrolment figures unveiled at Tuesday's regular monthly board meeting showed there are 983 students enrolled at the high school this year.

Total enrolment in District 42 schools is 3,102.

While that figure is unofficial, superintendent Emery Goguen noted it is a good increase from last year's official enrollment of 2,978.

Earlier this year, the school board expressed concern over declining enrolment, due in part to declining birth rates. The board saw a decrease of 150 students in the district in 1989, with another 100 was expected by the end of the 1990-91 school year.

So far, though, the decrease is not nearly that bad.

"If you compare apples to apples, we're down by 36," Mr. Goguen said.

The difference is attributed to a large number of mature students returning to the high school this year, as well as to the 160 pupils enrolled in the new public kindergarten program, which was introduced for the first time this fall.

However, Mr. Goguen has said in the past that the phenomenon of decreasing enrolments, which has been more prevalent in the elementary grades, would likely continue for the next five years.

He predicted Tuesday the enrolment at Bathurst High School will likely decrease by a further 200 in three years' time.

Meanwhile, it was noted some concern exists as to whether all kindergarten-aged children have been enrolled in the mandatory program.

The board had originally projected an enrolment of 166, up to a maximum of 180.

While he is not concerned about those who are attending private kindergartens, Mr. Goguen said some parents may be keeping their children at home.

For further coverage of Tuesday night's District 42 board meeting, see page 11.

Chaleur voters have a diverse range of candidates

The buck on the 1991 provincial election stops Monday.

That's when MLAs will be elected in 58 ridings in New Brunswick, filling a Legislative Assembly which will guide the province's affairs for the next four years.

Liberal Premier Frank McKenna will be out to regain power once again after sweeping all 58 seats in the 1987 election, although it is considered unlikely that the Liberals will sweep once more.

However, Liberals running in the Bathurst, Nepisiguit-Chaleur and Nigadoo-Chaleur ridings have a better-than-average chance of election, as all three ridings have traditionally voted Grit.

BATHURST

Marcelle Mersereau, regional director for the Department of Health and Community Services, is the Liberal hopeful in Bathurst, taking over the party candidacy from Paul Kenny, who retired after 13 years as MLA.

Her platform centres on the need for diversifying the economy, moving away from a mainly mining and pulp and paper industries.

"We have to take a good look at (small businesses)," she said, adding she'll concentrate most of her efforts on attracting more such business to her riding if elected.

Colette Buttimer will carry the New Democratic Party hopes in the election. She'd like to get the nod to ensure that the next government doesn't freeze public sector wages, one piece of legislation which directly affected her salary.

"It'll be easier for them to freeze wages the next time around," she said.

Mrs. Buttimer is president of Local 1507 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, representing about 120 workers at the Foyer Notre Dame de Vallee Lourdes nursing home.

St. Stephen's Laurie Robichaud is parachuting into the city to take hold of the Confederation of Regions Party's hopes, a decision prompted by the difficulty in attracting a local candidate.

Mr. Robichaud's main concern is to seek a more equal form of technical training for both English and French at the local campus of the New Brunswick Community College.

He also firmly believes the legislation of official bilingualism has to be done away with, and people hired for what they can do, and not for what language they can or cannot speak.

Claire Wilt will carry Bathurst's Progressive Conservative banner, and believes she has the experience necessary to serve her constituents well.

"I have served nine years as city councillor, and this experience has taught me the mechanics of government and what strings to pull in order to achieve the desired results," she said.

If elected, she would obtain a "shopping list" from Bathurst city council and see that their requests are met. She also plans to meet with various groups to find out what they'd like to see come out of Fredericton, and seek both provincial and federal funding in order to attack the unemployment situation in her riding.

NEPISIGUIT-CHALEUR

Frank Branch is the only one of the three local MLAs to reoffer in this election. He was Speaker of the House when the election was called.

After 21 years of representing the Nepisiguit-Chaleur riding, he'll be looking at making it an even quarter-century, and his goal is is simple.

"To enhance the standard of living for all the people in my riding," he said.

If elected, he vows to continue the struggle for better highways in the region, and promote tourism.

He also believes the best procedure to follow to achieve that goal is to vote the present administration back in for another four years.

"A good, stable and honest government," he said.

Janeville businessman Robert Hornibrook has the Progressive Conservative's reins in the riding. He believes the present administration has not handled its affairs properly, and would be detrimental to his riding if they're voted in once more.

"If we continue to allow this government to up the taxes...a lot of people won't be able to make ends meet," he said.

What he feels is the most important issue in this election is "to restore the dignity of a long-suffering people."

Laurie Daley of Salmon Beach will carry the CoR banner, and legislated bilingualism is at the heart of his campaign.

He firmly believes the cost of such legislation is beyond the province's means, and the cost of a lot of other government services would be reduced if English became the working language of the government.

"The main thing is the cost of it," said Mr. Daley, who works at the Stone-Consolidated Inc. pulp and paper mill.

The lack of jobs in her riding is the main concern of New Democratic Party hopeful Karen McCrea, and that's the first issue she'll address if elected.

"The jobs we're interested in are the real jobs, not the make-work projects," said Mrs. McCrea, a nurse at Chaleur Regional Hospital.

Her major concern, however, is to let the government know about the present situation in her riding, something she believes has been sorely lacking for many years.

"I'd like the people in my riding to be represented by a strong voice, and get the message across to McKenna that we'll have that strong voice."

NIGADOO-CHALEUR

Pierre Godin, who served as Nigadoo-Chaleur MLA for 13 years, has retired, and four candidates are in the running for the vacancy left behind.

Retired businessman Albert Doucet will carry the Liberal banner into this election, and he's relying heavily on his keen business sense to get him elected to the post he aspires to.

"I think (my constituents) want to see someone from the business community in government, to look after the riding's business properly," he said.

Among the issues he plans to tackle if elected include job creation, and ensure that the second phase of the Belledune Thermal Generating Station comes to pass.

Running as an independant in the riding is Ulric DeGrace, who lost out to Mr. Doucet in the race to represent the Grits at the polls.

Prompting from his supporters after the Liberal nominating convention elevated his interest in running even more, and he hopes to repay that support if elected.

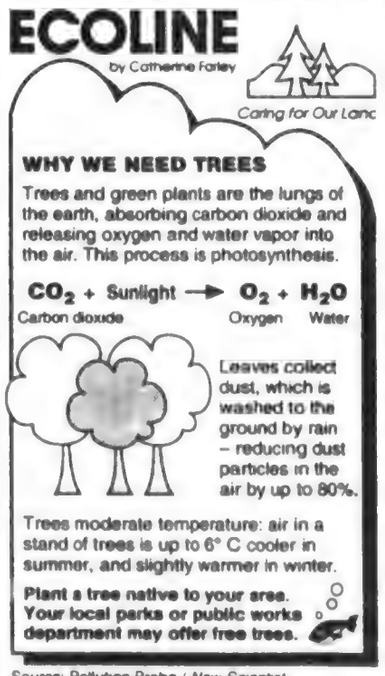
"I really want to be there (legislature), he said. "I'm deeply interested in working for the people of Nigadoo-Chaleur."

Mr. DeGrace is the manager of the Beresford Arena.

Holding the New Democratic Party reins in the riding is steelworker Raoul Charest, and he wants to focus his attention on the creation of jobs, increased tourism in the area, and fair taxation for everyone if elected.

He'd also like to find work for fellow Brunswick Mining and Smelting Corp. Ltd. employees laid off recently, as well as find gainful employment for students in the summer, "so they can at least make a little bit of money to pay for their education."

David Boudreau of Fredericton, a native of nearby Campbellton, is coming north to lead the Progressive Conservative party in the riding, and, while admitting he is not from the immediate area, he does feel he has a good idea what the riding's needs are.



"I may be from Campbellton, but I do have ties to the area, and I know the biggest (problem) is to have the same services as the south of the province," he said.

Among his major concerns are the state of the region's health care facilities, and the plight of the unemployed.

Mr. Boudreau is a businessman.

There is no CoR candidate for Nigadoo-Chaleur, a predominantly French riding.

See pages three and 10 for additional election coverage.

Coverage of the 1991 provincial election campaign

NIGADOO-CHALEUR

DeGrace says riding ignored

(Editor's Note: This week's articles on the riding of Nigadoo-Chaleur are the last in a series of profiles on area candidates in next Monday's provincial election. The Confederation of Regions Party is not fielding a candidate in Nigadoo-Chaleur.)

Beresford native Ulric Degrace is taking another stab at provincial politics, because he says the people of Nigadoo-Chaleur want him to.

DeGrace

"They really want me to run," Mr. DeGrace told The Northern Light last week.

"They feel I'm the one who should be in there."

Mr. DeGrace unsuccessfully opposed Albert Doucet, for the Liberal nomination in the upshore riding.

Now he intends to give it another try, this time as an independent.

Mr. DeGrace announced his intention to run as an independent Sept. 9, the last day for candidates to register for Monday's provincial election.

He said it was because of the support he received from the people of the riding, even after the June 23 nominating convention.

He said the same supporters who helped fuel his Liberal campaign are backing him as an independent, and, he added, "I still believe I can be elected."

His main concern is to give the riding the same opportunities enjoyed by other, higher profile regions. He feels the riding has been ignored in the past, and wants to turn the situation around.

If elected, he plans to work diligently toward ensuring adequate services in the riding, and providing jobs in the sectors where they are most needed.

He wants to see improvements to the much-maligned Route 180, commonly known as the Road to Resources, and most, importantly, to put northern New Brunswick on equal footing with the south.

This would include dealing with higher gas prices in the north, and ensuring that tax money, collected through such sources as government-regulated gambling machines, is properly spent to benefit both regions.

The exploitation of the environment and this area's natural resources concerns him, particularly in the areas of mining and the Bay Chaleur, which he has pointed out is one of the most polluted bays in the Maritimes.

Easier access to student loans is also on his agenda, as are further improvements to Chaleur Regional Hospital.

Mr. DeGrace has a full list of tourism-related items that he feels deserve attention. Among them are improvements to secondary roads, handicapped access in public places, further development of the Port of Belledune, and construction of a youth cultural centre.

He is equally concerned about the need for additional housing for seniors, and hopes the Radio Chaleur community radio station project gets off the ground.

A native of Beresford, Mr. DeGrace has been employed by the town's Parks and Recreation Department since 1975, acting as manager of the Beresford Arena.

Mr. DeGrace, 44, was among the committee members responsivble for the establishment of a golden age home in Beresford in the late 1970s, and has served on the Groundhog Carnival committee since its inception.

His community involvement also includes work for the local Department of Justice, helping to set up community work opportunities as an alternative to fines and jail terms.

CANDIDATES' FORUM

Four-lane bridge supported but not at taxpayers expense

Bathurst MLA candidates feel the city should get a four-lane village bridge — without a hike in taxes.

"This has been on the floor for nine years," Progressive Conservative candidate Claire Wilt said at Sunday's Forum '91, which allowed the four Bathurst candidates to respond to questions from the public and the media.

Mrs. Wilt feels it's about time for the city to get a new, four-lane village bridge. However, she doesn't feel taxpayers should have to shoulder the responsibility for the bridge through higher taxes.

She could not see the rationale behind higher taxes in Bathurst, considering Premier Frank McKenna provided his own Miramichi riding with a $50 million bridge.

"It's ridiculous," she said, adding, "It's been too long that we've had nothing."

Liberal candidate Marcelle Mersereau said transport problems are a concern to her party, and the construction of a four-lane village bridge would be a priority.

Colette Buttimer of the New Democratic Party said such a project would be a good one, particularly if the proposed civic centre is built. With increased traffic the centre would generate, the four lanes would be needed, said the NDP candidate.

"(The bridge) certainly needs opening up if there is to be economic growth," said Laurie Robichaud, representing the Confederation of Regions party.

"No doubt it should be replaced."

Candidates were also enthusiastic about a plan for a Chaleur Botanical Forest, initiated by a local businessman.

The proposed forest would group all or most of Canada's native trees together on a parcel of land.

Candidates felt strongly about the need to ensure such a project be developed for Bathurst, and not elsewhere.

"We should grab it fast, before someone else takes the idea," Mrs. Wilt said.

Mrs. Mersereau termed the plan "a great tourism project," although she added the plan would have to be studied in terms of what species of trees would be involved.

Mrs. Buttimer said she would consider the plan "a good investment for Bathurst," while Mr. Robichaud indicated he would lobby for the project under the right circumstances.

"If it's a project that would benefit the people of this area, and it would create economic growth, I would be all for it, and I would lobby for it with all my efforts."

The forum was held at Danny's Inn and Conference Centre, with about 75 people in the audience. The two-hour event was shown live over the local community television channel.

Please turn to page 10 for more coverage of the candidates' forum.

Early voters total 954

Advance polls for the Sept. 23 provincial election were held in local ridings Saturday and Monday.

A spokesman for the returning office said 741 voters cast their ballots in the riding of Bathurst, 127 in Nigadoo-Chaleur, and 86 in Nepisiguit-Chaleur.

Tourism among NDP priorities

It's time to elect a provincial government that will work for the interests of ordinary citizens.

That's the way Raoul Charest sees it.

Charest

Mr. Charest is the New Democratic Party candidate for the riding of Nigadoo-Chaleur in next Monday's provincial election. He was given the nod by acclamation during the NDP's nominating convention in Nigadoo in June.

An employee of Brunswick Mines, Mr. Charest, 47, is entering the political game for the first time, and feels he and his party should be given a chance to show what they can do.

"Up until Sept. 22, I'll see as many people as possible," said Mr. Charest, who feels the feedback he has been getting to his campaign thus far, mostly from door-to-door visits, has been very positive.

If elected, to represent the interests of Nigadoo-Chaleur in the Sept. 23 provincial election, Mr. Charest plans to work on developing what he sees as an impressive tourism potential in this area.

"There are all kinds of really nice beaches along the Nigadoo-Chaleur area that are not being used," he said.

He would focus on the need to begin spending New Brunswick's tax dollars wisely.

In addition, Mr. Charest feels a need also exists to create more ample and accessible opportunities for the youth of Nigadoo-Chaleur, as well as for fellow workers laid off from Brunswick Mining and Smelting; and to continue the fight for better quality health care.

He feels the province was going nowhere under the leadership of the late premier Richard Hatfield, and is still going nowhere under with the current government of Premier Frank McKenna.

In his opinion, it is time to hand over the reins to a government that will represent more than just the interests of large corporations.

Electing a government that ignores the common people is a trap he doesn't want to see the people of New Brunswick fall into again.

Mr. Charest doesn't believe Nigadoo-Chaleur in particular has been getting fair treatment from past and current governments, and feels the same will continue to be the case if the Liberals are put back in power for another four years.

Tory candidate says time is his biggest challenge in race

The clock is the major stumbling block for Nigadoo-Chaleur's late-coming Progressive Conservative candidate.

"Time is the biggest problem," said David Boudreau, a former North Shore resident now living in Fredericton.

He announced his intention to represent the party in the riding of Nigadoo-Chaleur Sept. 8, giving him only two weeks to campaign.

Mr. Boudreau, 30 and unmarried, lived in Campbellton until he was 21, and has family ties in the Beresford area dating back to his grandfather, Harry Boudreau.

"I know the area well," the Tory candidate said, adding he volunteered to carry the party banner in Nigadoo-Chaleur because no other potential candidate was found.

"The party had a hard time getting candidates in a couple of ridings, and one of them was Nigadoo-Chaleur."

In a telephone conversation from Fredericton, where he operates a business and is in charge of communications for Tory leader Dennis Cochrane's provincial campaign, Mr. Boudreau noted many of the issues facing Nigadoo-Chaleur are the same across the province.

The rise in tax rates is one such issue. Mr. Boudreau said he backs the provincial PC policy of holding the line on some taxes, while decreasing others, such as the gas tax.

Mr. Cochrane proposes to lower the rate on gasoline by more than 6 cents per litre.

Mr. Boudreau said he is not concerned about Tory Prime Minister Brian Mulroney's low standing in public opinion polls.

"From the provincial standpoint, our leader is Dennis Cochrane," he pointed out, adding, "We act on our own."

Particular problems affecting Nigadoo-Chaleur include the constant need to provide services that are on par with the rest of the province.

"We don't get the same quality of service as in the south," he said, singling out education and health services as two areas that need attention.

Legislation to protect the health and safety of workers is also a priority, he said, adding, "It shouldn't be up to the unions to go out and fight for it."

He used continuing concerns over health conditions at Brunswick Mining and Smelting's Belledune Smelter as an example.

Mr. Boudreau also feels the New Brunswick Electric Power Commission's Belledune Generating Station project in Belledune should give local workers priority in the hiring process.

Mr. Boudreau has worked on numerous campaign teams over the years, ultimately serving as Albert Girard's campaign manager in the 1984 federal election. Mr. Girard was elected as a PC MP but was defeated in the 1988 federal election.

Mr. Boudreau was the first president of Campbellton's PC Youth Association, and serves on the Board of Directors for Junior Achievers in Fredericton.

Grit hopeful has eye on development

Nigadoo-Chaleur Liberal candidate Albert Doucet wants to keep his eye on keeping the region's "door to the world" wide open.

In order to do that, he has put the development of new general cargo facilities at the Belledune wharf at the top of his priority list.

Doucet

"That itself should bring new industries to the area," Mr. Doucet said in an interview.

He is campaigning to represent the riding of Nigadoo-Chaleur in the New Brunswick legislature, a seat previously held by Liberal Pierre Godin. Mr. Godin did not reoffer in the current provincial election campaign. The election is next Monday.

"It's our door to the world."

The Liberal party of Nigadoo-Chaleur launched its campaign Sept. 3, before a gathering of more than 150 party faithful.

The campaign headquarters was officially opened by Edmond Blanchard, Minister of State for Mines, along with Mr. Doucet.

Also present were Restigouche MP Guy Arseneau, mayors of the area and other difnitaries.

In his message to the electorate, Mr. Doucet stressed his intentions to dedicate his efforts toward the job creation, and the maintenance of permanent employment through job training.

In addition to a focus on the Belledune wharf, the local entrepreneur plans to spend his energies on working toward the completion of the second phase of the the New Brunswick Electric Power Commission's Belledune Thermal Plant.

Making education in various trades more accessible to youth, continued lobbying for additional funds for Chaleur Regional Hospital, and capitalizing on the natural tourist attractions of the area are also important.

Mr. Doucet would also make improvements to social and transportation services.

One concern is the number of youths who rely on social services.

"Social services are not only there to hand out cheques," Mr. Doucet said.

"They should have the responsibility to get these people back on track."

Equally important are the expansion of services at the Chaleur Regional Airport, better roads, and focussing attention on preserving the mining industry, Mr. Doucet indicated.

He is taking his "full-steam" campaign door-to-door, and said things are going well.

Mr. Doucet, 48, is a resident of Beresford, and a father of two. He is a retired businessman.

Constitutional process falling short of expectations

Political Scene

By STEWART MacLEOD
Ottawa Bureau
Thomson News Service

It's just one of those things you sense, but there seems to be a heavy cloud of pessimism hovering over our everlasting efforts to reach a constitutional agreement.

Furthermore, the process itself is falling far short of expectations.

It wasn't supposed to be this way. After the demise of the Meech Lake accord last year, every political voice in Canada was singing from the same hymn book — that never again must constitutional reform be undertaken by an exclusive group of political leaders, meeting behind locked doors.

And while that may not be what's going on right now, it's close enough to invite public cynicism. Prime Minister Brian Mulroney's 18-member unity cabinet committee has been meeting in secret for months now in a desperate search for acceptable constitutional proposals.

The difference this time is that, when these proposals are finally made public later this month, they will become the object of committee studies, with public participation, across the country. Unlike the Meech accord, which came as an untouchable take-it-or-leave-it package, the new proposals will presumably be subject to alterations.

At least that's what we're told. But one suspects any proposal acceptable to all first ministers will be very difficult to revise. And those unacceptable to some first ministers will prove very difficult to approve.

So far, from all accounts, it hasn't been easy for the unity cabinet to agree on very much itself. We've heard of fierce arguments among members, usually involving Quebec's "distinct society" demands.

MESSY PROCESS

This alone has been enough to bring on pessimism. If 18 individuals from the same federal party can't agree on basic proposals, then what chance is there for 10 provinces, two territorial governments, and native Canadians to do so?

Now, even Mr. Mulroney is beginning to counsel us to keep our expectations down. "This is not a time to look for perfection," he said the other day.

"This is the time to devise compromises that respect people from British Columbia to Newfoundland and Labrador, because the bringing together of that kind of compromise is not a sign of weakness, but it's a sign of strength."

It hasn't been easy for him to achieve this compromise even in his own commitee. There have been several cases of ministers walking out in a huff.

There have also been several cases of deliberate leaks, no doubt as part of the power play within the committee room. We've heard about plans for a major shift of power from Ottawa to the provinces; then, when it came time for elaboration, we heard about other plans to shift certain responsibilities to Ottawa from the provinces.

Then there were the leaks about the "distinct society," and how Quebec's demands would be satisfied without the province actually gaining special powers. Then we also had reports that Radio-Canada, the French-language service of the CBC, would be handed over to Quebec.

Naturally, when such a rumor is spread, it creates its own expectations. No doubt, many Quebecers will be highly disappointed if Radio-Canada remains under federal jurisdiction.

NEW WRINKLE

The lastest leak to squirt out of the committee is that serious consideration is being given to a "social charter," which would become part of a new Constitution, just like the Charter of Rights and Freedoms.

The talked-about charter would make constitutional such social and economic rights as jobs, shelter and the like. But what practical effect it might have — apart from clogging the courts with new questions — is anyone's guess. Whether it ever gets off the drafting board is also a guess.

What this all suggests is that we're looking at far more than solving the problems that arose around the Meech accord. Considering the intensity of the ministerial disagreements, the variety of the subjects, the length of the meetings and, now, the pleas for compromise, it's obvious the project is a massive one.

It has clearly proven more difficult than expected for Mr. Mulroney and his constitutional affairs minister, Joe Clark. They had originally expected the unity committee to a least reach a consensus on basic proposals. Now, some ministers are going out of their way to distance themselves from the pending proposals, saying they are merely topics for discussion. Any group of us could produce that.

It doesn't augur well for the outcome. If Mr. Mulroney's own hand-picked team can't see eye-to-eye on what it takes to hold the country together, it's no wonder so many people around Ottawa are developing a bout of pessimism.

Candidates lack knowledge on mining issue

"It is ironic that a city whose economic base is largely dependent upon mining elects political representatives who don't understand that industry. And here we are ready to do it again."

Sept. 16

Dear Editor,

Re: The future of mining and the upcoming provincial election.

Question: What do the Liberal, Conservative, NDP and CoR parties all have in common?

Answer: None of them understand the mining industry and none of them have taken the time to study the issues.

On Sunday night the candidates (for the Bathurst riding) were asked a straightforward question at the candidates' forum: What specifically will your party do to attract investment into this region to help find the new mines so desperately needed to replace our depleting reserves?

The CoR and Conservative party candidates said they would work closely with industry to look at the problems (ie. they didn't know what the question meant). The NDP candidate had the honesty to say she didn't have any comment on the matter but she nevertheless claimed to be ready to fight for the "working class." And while the Liberal party candidate alluded to some understanding of the issues, she offered no initiatives.

As the people of Bathurst witness the inevitable cutbacks at Brunswick Mines, no one — not even the union representatives — asks the simple question which lies at the heart of the problem. Approximately 4,000 direct and indirect jobs in our region depend upon the survival of two mining operations. Unemployed mine workers should be asking the politicians why they have no where else to work. The answer is simply that there hasn't been a major mine discovery here since the 1950's.

NO INTEREST

Ask any geologist in Bathurst and they will tell you that it is not because there are no more mines to be found, it is primarily because few companies have any interest in even looking for mines in northern New Brunswick. Investors have the same enthusiasm for mineral exploration in New Brunswick as my four-year-old daughter has for peas.

The New Brunswick government has a very important role to play in mine discoveries. They have to compete with the other regions of Canada for exploration dollars. Of the $800 million spent by mining companies on exploration in Canada, only two per cent of that money is invested in New Brunswick. And if Noranda wasn't here, that figure would be one per cent.

New Brunswick has placed near dead last for those dollars for the past 10 years. It is time that the people of Bathurst started to take an interest in this industry rather than taking it for granted. The older members of our community remember what life was like before the mines and the younger members will learn first-hand what it was like unless we find new mines.

It is ironic that a city whose economic base is largely dependent upon mining elects political representatives who don't understand that industry. And here we are ready to do it again. Demand that your chosen representative learn the issues and start asking questions yourself.

All the parties say that they want more mineral processing carried out in New Brunswick. If they build a zinc reduction plant in Belledune who is going to use it? Where will they get the zinc to feed it if Noranda already has their own facility in Quebec?

Why does the province of Newfoundland invest an average of $500,000 per year on education in their mining sector and New Brunswick spends $120,000. Why does poor old Newfoundland spend twice as much as New Brunswick on developing their mining industry?

INCENTIVES

If we can't attract investors now, how will it help if the NDP increases mining taxes and royalties? The provinces finding new mines and providing real jobs recognize the risks involved in mining and provide financial incentives to attract business.

Think about what the economic returns would be to Bathurst if a new mine were developed. Isn't that something worth having your government participate in?

The politicians are hoping you will just worry about roads. The future of mining in our community will only be an issue if you make it so. Make politicians do something about insuring our long term future. And don't stop asking questions after the election. Experience shows that governments will gladly bury an issue once the people stop talking about it.

If the citizens of Bathurst showed as much concern over their economic future as they have over the issue of where to build a civic centre, there might be good jobs available to our children when they graduate. One local politician boasted that the port of Belledune was such a tremendous asset that the Queen Mary could dock there. Well what exactly would the passengers do when they got off the boat?

Hard lobbying needed

There are rumblings that two government offices in Bathurst will soon be moving at least in part to the Acadian Peninsula.

If this is true, city council and our next MLA should find out exactly what is going on. Our city may be the hub of the Northeast now, but it won't be for long if we continue to be complacent over government jobs going elsewhere. The memory of losing the District 41 School Board office to Beresford lingers, especially the "too little too late" fight put up by council and our MLA.

Other communities are lobbying hard for government services and industry in their areas, and we must do the same. The municipalities of the Acadian Peninsula are prospering and more power to them. However, we must look after getting — and keeping — our fair share of development and government services, just as these other communities are doing on their behalf.

If not, we will soon be left by the wayside, with no one to blame but ourselves.

Phantom Ship does not have to be seen to intrigue

Sept. 5

Dear Editor,

In response to Mr. Mulock's recent comments in regards to the promotion of Bathurst as "The Home of the Phantom Ship."

Many residents of Bathurst, surrounding area and tourists have seen what they believe to be the Phantom Ship; many others are intrigued by this phenomena. While the aura of the Phantom Ship is nebulous by nature and is not a readily seen tourist attraction, it is a legend which reflects our heritage and culture. Legands have long been a drawing card for tourists, for example the Loch Ness monster of Scotland.

Whether you see the infamous ship or not, it adds a flavor of mystery and possibility to a humid summer's evening on the Bay of Chaleur. Commendations to the Bathurst Tourism Department for giving tourists another reason to visit our city.

Dear Editor,

Re: your note following Aug. 28, 1991 publication (picture of three men on the way to Kuwait).

My sincere apologies for you being the recipient of an irate phone call, due to publication of unsubstantiated news. The three men in question (Boucher) met us at the Halifax International Airport while we were meeting a girlfriend from Alberta. I guess the joke was on us. You take your chances trying to do strangers a favor.

Again I'm sorry for the flack you received and any discomfort to your paper.

No snow clearing a problem

(Editor's Note: Copies of the following letter were sent to Premier Frank McKenna and Beresford Mayor Real Boudreau.)

Sept. 2

Dear Editor,

I am writing this letter on behalf of a number of concerned residents living along Jacques Cartier Promenade (Kent Lodge Beach) in the municipality of Beresford. We are seeking your assistance after several unsuccessful meetings with council and officials of the Town of Beresford.

Both the municipality of Beresford and the province are benefitting from the high property taxes being collected on over 100 property lots along this roadway. There are 41 properties with buildings constructed for use as either summer or principal residences. A portion of the roadway, which is 66 feet wide and gravelled, is part of the Bay Chaleur Subdivision which was developed by W.J. Kent Co. Ltd. and was approved by the Belledune Planning Commission in either 1972 or 1974.

The municipality of Beresford provides limited basic services such as road grading, garbage collection, fire and police protection, and some spreading of calcium. However, much to the dismay and hardship to the permanent residents, there is no provision for snow clearing. Each permanent resident shares the cost for snow removal and the municipality, in their generosity, gives each permanent resident a rebate of $100 to apply towards the cost of keeping the roadway open during the winter.

Last winter, the municipality paid $600, whereas the total cost was over $3,000. Needless to say, my own property tax assessment of $1,142 more than covered that paid by the municipality.

EXPECTED TO PAY

Two of the permanent residents are single senior citizens living on limited income, paying property and other provincial and federal taxes, and are still expected to pay their share of the cost of keeping the roadway open in the winter. In fact, one of these senior citizens had to do without well water from December to July of this year, as she could not afford to have repairs carried out after paying $540 property taxes, $600 for snow removal last winter, and $1,000 for snow removal the previous winter. Fortunately for her, the New Brunswick Housing Corporation became aware of her predicament and came to her assistance.

An article in a recent MacLean's magazine states, in part: "...government planners across Canada are trying to make it possible for elderly Canadians to stay out of institutions for as long as possible by keeping them in their own homes," and, "...the overall thrust of new provincial programs is to keep the elderly 'healthy and active' in their own homes and communities."

I would hope that this is the attitude of our own provincial planners and municipalities. Surely, in this day and age, no senior citizen or other tax-paying citizen should be burdened with the worry and cost of snow clearing of a roadway that is used by the public, regardless whether the roadway is private or public.

BEFORE 1974

This roadway was in existence well before 1974, and, according to your Minister of Transportation, is under the control and administration of the Town of Beresford pursuant to provincial Order-in-Council 74-386. However, for some reason, unclear to me and others, the Town of Beresford sees fit to provide all basic services with the exception of snow clearing.

One section of the Jacques Cartier Promenade, which meets up with Queen Elizabeth Drive, has adjacent properties owned by prominent business people, a well-known and respected politician, and a recent millionaire. This section of the road is chip-sealed, has street lighting, and is kept open by the municipality of Beresford during the winter. Regardless as to how this was accomplished — and I say more power to them — surely the residents living on the opposite end of Jacques Cartier Promenade are deserving of at least snow clearing.

I truely believe, Mr. Premier, that both you and the Mayor of Beresford do have concern for all tax-paying citizens, and especially the plight of senior citizens, and will use your good offices and authority to ensure this roadway is kept open in the winter at no additional cost to the tax-paying residents.

Critical of current government

Sept. 15

Dear Editor,

In a few days the people of this province will decide which party is going to be elected for the next four years.

Looking back in the past four years we saw a government which was in my opinion irresponsible in many ways.

First they raised the price on every license that you can by: hunting, fishing, driver's, car, trailers. Name it, they raised it.

Lease for a camp went up from $20 a year to two hundred, and they even tripled the price for a marriage license.

We are paying tax on tax. For example, paying provincial tax on the GST.

A special tax on gas, apparently to build better raods in the south and patch bigger potholes in the north.

As we drive across the province we see thousands of posters on hydro poles and buildings mostly from the Liberals. I hope they are on recyclable paper so they can pick them up after the election and recycle them: it would be handy to have them around the bathroom.

You might say I don't have much respect for our government but I feel that they don't have much respect for the people either.

We saw a government that was in my opinion totally against organized labor.

Not their business, he says

Sept. 11

Dear Editor,

A recent news item stated that "the mayor and council of Beresford had gone on record as lending moral support to the proposed civic centre in Bathurst." But it was also mentioned that "not in a monetary way."

It makes one wonder about the motives behind this statement. Sure, it sounds good to the proponents of the civic centre, but think again. Bathurst is 10 to 15 million dollars in the red now, and taxes are such that people are moving out of Bathurst and building on the outskirts and even in Beresford. Does the Beresford council want us to be deeper in debt so no one will want to build or establish a business in Bathurst because of the high tax charges?

You would think that our city council would take the Beresford council to task for this statement.

As I recall, it isn't but a few months ago that some taxpayers of Beresford were protesting and appealing to council and the assessment offices of the Province, because their taxes were too high. And rightly so: we're being taxes to death on all sides.

Now, as a citizen and taxpayer of the city of Bathurst, I believe that the mayor and council of Beresford would be well advised to mind their bloody business.

Grieving parents thankful for support

Sept. 16

Dear Editor,

It started as such a small little problem for such a sweet little eight-year-old, Cathy Roy. After treatment here in Bathurst she was released to rejoin her family, not knowing that the next day she would be fighting strongly for her life in the Montreal Hospital for Sick Children.

Cathy had contracted a virus which left doctors no choice but to perform an immediate liver transplant. After 12 hours of delicate surgery she was on her way to recovery. Her tiny body seemed to accept this until a couple of days later another emergency surgery had to be done, due to newfound difficulties of the new liver.

Cathy never fully regained consciousness again and during her last days she slipped into a deep coma. Her mother and father, Francine and Emery Roy, never left their little girl's side until they left her in the hands of God Sept. 7 at 7:55 a.m. She will be missed so very much by all of us.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy and family would like to extend their sincere appreciation to the family who donated the liver for Cathy, and to the doctors and staff of Montreal Hospital. Also, for all donations, especially from family, friends, co-workers at Brunswick Mines and citizens of the area. They have all helped so much in something so important.

Maybe through prayer and support, someday we can save all of God's little children.

Mr. and Mrs. Emery Roy

Closure of Big Deal would be a loss

Sept. 10

Dear Editor,

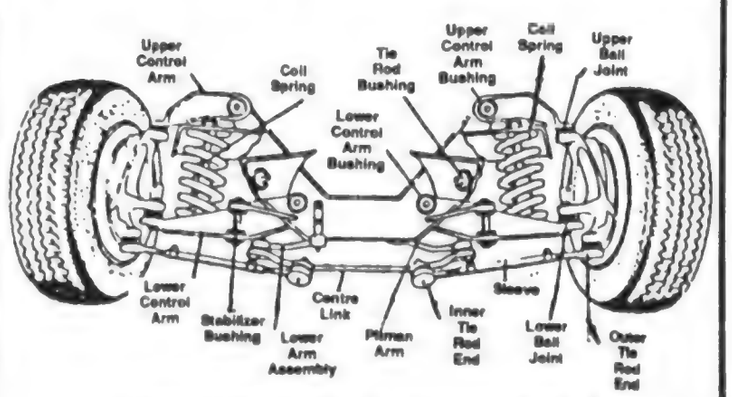
Each and every summer on returning to Bathurst, it is in a spirit of joyous anticipation mixed with a certain apprehension at the changes I may find.

In 1990 there was the shock and sadness at the closure of the W.J. Kent and Co. Ltd. store, that unique building and emporium dear to the hearts of all those familiar with the North Shore and for so many years the commercial heart of downtown Bathurst, due to structural damage incurred during public works on Main Street.

This year I learned with dismay of the possible enforced closure of the Big Deal, that Ali Baba's cave of gastronomic delight situated on King Avenue, owned and managed by Aurele Frenette and his faithful staff. Mr. Frenette himself was a familiar figure at Kent's for 23 years before setting up his own business 17 years ago.

This city is fast becoming cosmopolitan in population, and here at the Big Deal every ethnic cuisine is cared for, as well as providing the essential ingredients for our own regional cookery, be its ancestry Acadian, English, Scottish or Irish. We may continue to practice traditional recipes dear to mother's and grandmother's hearts, or embark on new ventures inspired by overseas travel. Aurele Frenette, with enormous imagination, will have provided the means to do so. Within this modest space, products from the humble to the most exotic will be found within arm's reach. If missing, rapidly ordered; check out time is minimal, service is excellent. Only the intoxicating display within makes for a lingering exit.

There has been much talk of mega-projects for the revitalization of the downtown area. What can be more vital than a commercial enterprise of this nature attracting as it does such a wide spectrum of the population, as well as being of essential value to downtown residents. What happens to those residents unable to drive to a big complex in what wind and in what weather? There is no need to venture further than the Big Deal to satisfy all daily requirements.



This area has immense assets — mineral wealth, forest products, the harvests of land, sea and river, natural beauty, a magnificent shoreline on harbor and on bay. Perhaps these assets have been taken for granted. So much has not been respected. Hard times have forced many businesses to close. This is not true of the Big Deal, which is in excellent shape, a necessity for its clients, a model of what a well-run private enterprise can be. Is this yet another asset to be wasted? This indeed a raw deal for the Big Deal, and no deal at all for downtown in particular, for Bathurst and the whole region it serves in general.

A Bathurst native is taking over the command of the Western New Brunswick Militia District this weekend.

Col. Norman R. Branch, CD takes over the command of the militia district from Col. Gordon L. Moffitt, CD in a ceremony Sunday afternoon in Saint John.

Col. Branch, who is 49-years-old, is the son of Donald Branch of South Bathurst. He was educated in Bathurst and completed his apprenticeship with the New Brunswick Electric Power Corporation in 1967.

He began his military career with the Second Battalion of the Royal New Brunswick Regiment as a private in 1959. He was commissioned to Second Lieutenant in 1968 and served in various infantry officer appointments with the 2nd Battalion, Royal New Brunswick Regiment, when on June 5, 1978 he was promoted to Lieutenant Colonel and served as their commanding officer until September 1981.

He graduated from the militia staff course at Canadian Land Forces and Staff College in Kingston, Ont. in 1983.

He served on the headquarters staff of Eastern New Brunswick Militia District from September 1981 to September 1984. He took an appointment as deputy commanding officer of 32 Service Battalion and reclassified from the Infantry Branch to the Logistics Branch. He served as Commanding Officer of 32 Service Battalion in Moncton from June 1986 to December 1988.

Col. Branch transferred to the headquarters of Western New Brunswick Militia District in December of 1988 and has served as the deputy commander to date.

He lives in Fredericton with his wife Patricia (nee Aucoin) and two daughters, Natalie and Nancy.

In civilian life, Col. Branch is the manager of Fleet Services for NB Power.

Tractor trailer runs into side of pulp mill

There were no injuries in a tractor trailer accident near the Stone Consolidated Inc. pulp and paper mill last week.

No charges will be laid in the Sept. 10 mishap, said Cpl. Peter Tremblay of the Bathurst City Police.

The accident occurred when a tractor trailer, driven by Romeo Desroches, 55, of Petit Rocher, was crossing the East Bathurst bridge.

Upon arriving at a line up of cars, the Cabano Transport driver applied his brakes and sent the truck into a jackknife. The truck then slammed into the side of the SCI plant, causing $15,000 damage to the building and $10,000 to the truck.

Observations on the campaign

Sitting Back

With GREG MULOCK
Personal opinion from the managing editor

Ah yes, the joy of a provincial election campaign. Politics is a many splendored thing, especially for the wary observer (I am not alone: witness comments in this week's Talk On The Walk feature).

To begin with, politics makes strange bedfellows. I refer to the Confederation of Regions Party and the Liberals, who are shacked up together in the old Carleton Restaurant building on King Avenue. Of course, the hues of Grit red and CoR yellow make for a nice fall touch, don't you think?

As for our Tory friends, Claire Wilt has had to do some fast-talking as a result of her standing on the picket line in front of the Nicolas-Denys building with striking federal workers. Something about the fact the reason the workers are on the line is because of the Progressive Conservative government in Ottawa...

Then there's PC's parachute candidate in Nigadoo-Chaleur, Fredericton's David Boudreau. Nigadoo-Chaleur is a so-called safe Liberal riding so I understand the difficulty in perhaps finding a sacrificial lamb, so to speak. However, one cannot help but wonder what the Upshore Tories have done for the past four years i.e. they have had ample time to groom a local candidate to carry the PC banner. (Mr. Boudreau does have company: the Bathurst CoR candidate is from St. Stephen, and local labor activist John Gagnon has put his name on the ballot for the NDP in Shippagan-les-Iles, where political heavyweights Aldea Landry and Jean Gauvin are squaring off.)

On another note, the Bay Breakfast proved to be a good gladhanding opportunity for the three local Liberal candidates (we need not name them; you know who they are). Two were sticking so close to their fearless leader, Frank McKenna, that a newspaper photographer actually had to ask them to get out of the way, so a photograph could be taken of the Premier helping out with the cooking — and even then they kept drifting back into camera range.

As for the third Liberal candidate, he made a point of positioning himself where he could best greet the voting public as they lined up for breakfast. Frankly speaking (whoops!), it is somewhat disheartening to see politicians use charity events as a means of garnering votes, although this could hardly be considered a new pastime on the campaign trail.

On a far more serious note, there are reports from those in the know that Bathurst is about to lose more of its provincial offices. We lost the District 41 School Board to Beresford last year, and now I'm hearing the Emergency Measures Office and even the Department of Municipal Affairs could be transferring at least partial responsibilities to the Acadian Peninsula. This is not good, since Bathurst is the hub of the Northeast and can ill afford to lose more of its local jobs.

I would hope this matter gets addressed instead of swept under the carpet with a lot of doublespeak until after the election.

Adding up the numbers from '66

Silver Points

By SONIA-SIMARD CORMIER
News from 25 years ago.

Sept. 22, 1966

What better time to look back, 25 years back, to student population than mid-September as city students settle in for yet another year of learning?

The numbers I uncovered while researching this column all showed increases over previous years. In reviewing them one should bear in mind that the schools, some of which are no longer in existence, have changed dramatically in the last quarter century and are now divided into unilingual (language and immersion classes excluded, of course) elementary, junior high and high schools.

In 1966, many local schools housed both French and English classes such as Holy Family School, Grades 1 to 9, where 526 students were enrolled, and Msgr. LeBlanc High which had 260 students. At the same time, Bathurst High School had 508 students while Superior School had 223.

The highest number, 894, was registered at Assumption Academy in East Bathurst and the lowest number was attributed to Bass River School where 43 pupils attended classes. All told, city schools had a total of 4,582 students with 207 teachers hired to provide them with an education.

The high numbers were said to result from the industrial growth in the Bathurst area causing many families to move to New Brunswick's youngest city.

The higher numbers in the student population had those involved in education devoting much time to studying and planning for the future and, in speaking to the Lions Club, Hon. H.H. Williamson, at the time Speaker of the New Brunswick Legislative Assembly and Gloucester MLA, talked of better facilities for Bathurst, as well as better programs designed to reduce the ever-increasing drop-out rate.

Certainly, many improvements have been and continue to be made as far as infrastructure is concerned but educators are still plagued with high drop-out rates, a Catch 22 situation, as the only real solution to drop-outs is increased education.

On the lighter, or maybe I should say heavier, side of the news, I wonder how many wrestling fans will remember going to see the Great Antonio, all 465 pounds of him, as he tackled Max Hobo (410 lbs.) and Cowboy Jones (295 lbs.) both at the same time.

As I recall, the Great Antonio had also demonstrated his strength to area residents when he pulled a bus operated by North Shore Transit, a much-missed bus service which operated in the area at the time.

City councillor wants South Bathurst potholes given priority by Works Dept.

By MICHAEL J. BOURGUIGNON
Northern Light Staff

City councillor Ken Frenette wants South Bathurst to get priority in the city's street patching program, but it probably won't happen.

"We have no particular favorite area or district," city engineer Maris Freimanis told Monday's regular public session.

He said the city starts patching streets in May, starting with those streets that are in the worst condition.

Mr. Frenette was upset because he feels South Bathurst is overlooked every year, with streets there generally not getting patched until late in the season.

He suggested that the city rotate its high priority areas so that South Bathurst, as well as some areas of East Bathurst, get their fair share of early patching.

But City Manager Bob Bouchard said the current system will continue to be used unless city council tells him to do otherwise.

Mr. Freimanis said 727 tons of asphalt has been laid this season, and funds have been budgeted for a further 400 tons. He said the patching will be done throughout the city, including the South and East ends, and will stop "only when the money runs out."

The city engineer was also called on by councillor Harvey Boucher to explain why a sidewalk that had originally been intended for the North side of Bridge Street has ended up on the South side.

He said the switch was made, after careful consideration, mainly because there are more homes on the South side, and construction costs are "considerably lower on the South side, and more sidewalk could be constructed with the funds available."

"To place a sidewalk on the North side would have involved the construction of a storm sewer, which was beyond the intent of this project," he said in a written report to council.

Mr. Boucher said he understood, but wanted to know how much money was involved. Mr. Freimanis said he was unsure, and would have to verify.

Mr. Freimanis addressed another concern brought forth by councillor Frenette, this one regarding consultants' fees incurred by water works in Hussey subdivision.

Mr. Frenette wanted to know why the city plans to reimburse the developer for the costs of "over-sizing" water lines in the subdivision.

The city engineer explained the developer was originally to install six-inch lines, but the city instead decided to have eight-inch lines installed from Dale Avenue to Basin Street.

He explained the extra two-inch width will make future expansion of the water line more feasible.

"The refund for over-sizing is a direct benefit to the city water distribution system, and therefore will be refunded," he said in his report to council.

The costs in question are in the $6,000 to $7,000 range.

Mr. Freimanis further assured council that the city will be able to recover the consultant's fees related to the work.

Whenever the city becomes involved in a development project such as a subdivision, it provides design and construction supervision, to ensure water distribution systems are installed to city standards. It is then the developer's responsibility to reimburse the city for whatever costs are incurred.

Mr. Freimanis had been unprepared to address the same matter when it was first brought up by Mr. Frenette at the Sept. 3 council meeting. It had been introduced at that time only at the start of the meeting, as an item to be added to the regular agenda.

TWO ITEMS

Mr. Frenette unsuccessfully tried to get two items added to Monday's public agenda.

In an interview with The Northern Light after the meeting, Mr. Frenette said he wanted to propose an amendment to a policy dealing with conferences attended by city officials.

Under the current policy, city council does not need to approve trips to international conferences, but Mr. Frenette feels they should.

City manager Bob Bouchard plans to attend an international management conference in Boston, Mass. this fall.

Mr. Frenette also wants to propose a new policy, whereby elected and appointed officials would have to get approval from council before attending training and development courses on city expense.

He cited Mayor Kevin Mann's attendance at a public relations course, which he said cost the city $1,610.

The items were tabled for discussion at the committee of the whole meeting, which followed the regular meeting and was not open to the public.

Items of legal or an otherwise sensitive nature are routinely set aside for such meetings, and Mr. Frenette's attempt to have them discussed at the public session sparked an eruption of emotions.

"Someone is playing games here," he charged, after arguing with the mayor for trying to rule him out of order.

Deputy Mayor Keith Loupelle interjected on a point of order, which drew further anger from Mr. Frenette.

"Where were you the last three weeks, sleeping?" he asked Mr. Loupelle who responded by telling the councillor he was "sick of your garbage."

Defence Dept. is reviewing how things went for them in Gulf War

By GIL HARDY
Ottawa Bureau
Thomson News Service

The Defence Department is nearing completion of a bottom-up review of Canada's military performance in the Gulf War to see what lessons can be gleaned for the future.

The process can be compared to a pyramid, with National Defence Headquarters at the top. Reports and analysis flow up a broad base of those who were in the field, and are discarded and refined as they pass through more senior levels, says Col. Larry O'Brien at Defence headquarters.

"We put the things together in an executive summary that lists the major lessons (from the war) and we pass it on to senior management," Col. O'Brien says.

Senior management is the chief of defence staff, the deputy minister and the minister. O'Brien won't talk about specific recommendations because the process is still under way.

But the gulf report card comes at a crucial time for the Armed Forces, which is in throes of a major policy review. The last review produced the ill-fated 1987 White Paper. Its recommendations for nuclear-powered submarines and other expensive equipment were scuttled by deficit-fighting budgets.

The latest attempt to define Canada's defence policy has generated persistent rumors of more cutbacks and base closings. But some defence analysts say that would be the wrong approach, in light of the Gulf War.

The Conservative government "appears to be more inclined" to use Canadian military power either abroad or at home, as it did last summer at Oka, says Alex Morrison, executive director of the independent Canadian Institute of Strategic Studies in Toronto. If that becomes entrenched policy, Ottawa would have to spend more, not less, on defence.

NASTY SHOCK

Morrison says the decision to deploy three Canadian naval vessels to the gulf was a nasty lesson for the government.

"I've been told that very, very high-level people in the prime minister's office were surprised, dismayed and disappointed at the time it took to get the ships ready for the gulf," he says. "But it appears they really haven't learned much from that, because now they are going to decrease the strength of the Armed Forces and close bases."

Roger Hill, senior research fellow with the federally funded Canadian Institute for International Peace and Security, sees the Gulf War as an example of "the maximalist approach" to defence policy. That approach would see "gearing up to participate in all kinds of far-flung military actions," he says.

But Hill's view is that government can't or won't pay for this kind of interventionist policy. Major purchases of new tanks, armored personnel carriers and transport aircraft would be necessary to fulfil the role.

Hill says the current $12-billion defence budget would have to increase by anywhere from 60 to 100 per cent to buy equipment, "and that's just whistling in the wind." Instead, Canada's role in any future "order enforcement" operation should be similar to what it did in the gulf.

That would mean the deployment of two or three naval vessels, one or two squadrons of CF-18 fighters and about 2,000 paratroopers, infantrymen or communication experts. But Hill says any policy decision needs the financial commitment to allow the Armed Forces to carry it out.

Tory candidate's support on picket line is rejected

Bathurst Progressive Conservative candidate Claire Wilt happily accepted an invitation to support striking Public Service Alliance of Canada members last week.

However, her efforts to join the PSAC picket line outside the Canada Employment and Immigration Centre on Harborview Boulevard were not appreciated.

"We explained as politely as possible that Conservatives were not welcome on the picket line," said a release from the union.

Federal public sector workers in Bathurst and elsewhere across Canada went on strike Sept. 9. They are protesting the federal PC government's plan to implement a wage freeze on public sector workers for this year, and increases of no more than three per cent in 1992 and 1993.

On Monday, the government introduced legislation in the House of Commons to force the striking employees to return to work.

Mrs. Wilt said she received a telephone call last week, from a friend who is a member of the PSAC.

She said her well-intentioned friend told her if she wanted to show support for the workers, she should join the picketing at the CEIC office.

When she did, on the morning of Sept. 11, she was told by union official Guy Dagenais that she was not welcome there, and was asked to leave.

The union said in the release they did not accept Mrs. Wilt's argument that a provincial Tory is not the same as a federal Tory. However, that's precisely how she feels about it.

"It's two different families," she told The Northern Light Friday.

"I'm running for the province under (provincial leader) Dennis Cochrane."

Mr. Cochrane believes in "eyeball-to-eyeball communication" with the people of the province, Mrs. Wilt said, adding that's what she was trying to accomplish on the picket line.

"I was there to encourage them," she said.

"I think they're going through some very hard moments, and I feel bad for them."

As far as the PSAC is concerned, a Tory is a Tory. However, that doesn't mean Mrs. Wilt won't be welcome to join the picket line in the future.

"We did invite her to return with a letter from Dennis Cochrane to (Prime Minister) Brian Mulroney, condemning the federal PCs," the release said.

"As soon as we read the letter, she'll be welcome to walk with us."

NOW THAT'S A PUMPKIN!

Jean-Noel Lagacé of Dunlop South, along with son Sébastien, are shown with the giant pumpkin they grew recently, measuring three feet in height, six feet in diameter, and weighing more than 100 pounds. This is the second largest pumpkin ever grown in Mr. Lagacé's garden. His largest pumpkin was cultivated two years ago and weighted a hefty 176 pounds. A school bus driver and part time gardener, Mr. lagacé enriches his garden using a mix of fish, chicken manure, leaves, and woodchips or sawdust. He also rotates vegetables regularly to different areas in the garden to break the cycle periods of insects. In keeping with tradition, the family will make pies with the pumpkin, and invite family and friends over for a feast.

Language issue hot topic at city candidates' forum

By MICHAEL J. BOURGUIGNON
Northern Light Staff

"We would ensure that in the schools, both languages are taught adequately, so that when (students) are graduated, they are bilingual."

Forum '91 produced no clear winner on the language issue, but Confederation of Regions candidate Laurie Robichaud scored some definite points.

Mr. Robichaud proved himself to be a credible opponent, even as he found himself again forced to defend his party from anti-French labelling.

The party's opposition to official bilingualism was a topic of often heated debate in Sunday's forum, especially considering this was the CoR party's first stab at a provincial election.

Mr. Robichaud asserted that should be elected MLA for Bathurst, he would treat all people fairly.

That sparked a rebuttal from New Democratic Party candidate Colette Buttimer, who asked, "But what are you going to do with the French people?"

"I will reverse that, and ask you what you're going to do with the English people," Mr. Robichaud shot back, prompting cheers from the live audience at Danny's Inn and Conference Centre Sunday evening.

When Mrs. Buttimer told the CoR candidate she has no problem with the language issue because she is bilingual, he firmly replied, "So am I."

However, Mr. Robichaud put that statement into question elsewher during the forum, when he had to ask that a word be translated into English before he could address a certain issue.

Liberal Marcelle Mersereau and Progressive Conservative Claire Wilt jumped on the language bandwagon, offering their thoughts on the issue.

Mrs. Mersereau noted a representative for Bathurst should be bilingual. Otherwise, "it's very difficult to understand the needs of both linguistic groups."

Mrs. Wilt went further, challenging Mr. Robichaud to change his stance.

"I feel you should be promoting bilingualism," she told Mr. Robichaud, who replied, "I promote bilingualism one-hundred per cent, but I don't promote legislated, government-ordered bilingualism."

"That's what I don't support, and I never will."

"If people can't separate the difference, then they have a problem to deal with."

CoR has frequently made this assertion, citing the high cost of maintaining official bilingualism in the province.

Mr. Robichaud said the party would promote education in both official languages, but would not make bilingualism essential to obtain employment.

"We would ensure that in the schools, both languages are taught adequately, so that when (students) are graduated, they are bilingual."

Mrs. Buttimer pressed on, accusing Mr. Robichaud of trying to "take us back to the 1930s."

"Mr. Robichaud, you don't have to worry; the French are not going to take over the English people," she said.

She then returned to an earlier point, asking why Mr. Robichaud had declined when she asked to see the CoR's onsitution.

HIDING

She accused him of "hiding something," to which the CoR candidate replied, "What do you want our constitution for? So you can copy it because you don't have one of your own?"

Mrs. Mersereau also came under fire on the language issue, but not from any of the candidates.

She was jeered by the crowd when she insisted the Bathurst campus of the New Brunswick Community College offers courses in both official languages.

Mr. Robichaud dimissed her statement as that of a "typical Liberal."

Mrs. Mersereau also stated that the local campus is designated as a francophone institution.

Other candidates generally agreed the lack of English courses at the college is a problem that needs to be addressed.

UNJUST

Mrs. Buttimer called the situation "unjust," while Mrs. Wilt proposed a necessary expansion of bilingual opportunities at the college. (Mrs. Wilt contacted The Northern Light Tuesday to say that since the debate, she has been "deluged by phone calls and contacted personally by several groups of ctizens in the city, with respect to the return of our trade school and community college from unilingual French only to a one hundred per cent bilingual status.")

Mr. Robichaud was later supported by his fellow candidates on the issue of advertising. The New Brunswick French-language daily L'Acadie Nouvelle recently refused to accept advertising from the Confederation of Regions party, a move Mrs. Wilt suggested should not have been made, Mrs. Buttimer termed "an injustice", and Mrs. Mersereau considered as lacking business sense.

However, Mrs. Mersereau dismissed it as a private decision made by a private enterprise.

"It's not a private enterprise when it's publicly funded," Mr. Robichaud replied.

"A publicly funded newspaper that is not providing all the information to their people is not doing the job they were put in there to do."

MLA hopefuls agree strong voice is needed for Bathurst in F'ton

A strong representative voice is needed to assure local concerns are heard in Fredericton.

That was the feeling expressed by the candidates seeking to represent Bathurst after the Sept. 23 provincial election, speaking at Sunday's Forum '91.

The forum, broadcasted live on Cable 2000's Channel 7, put candidates on the hot seat on a number of issues, including whether they would effectively speak up for the city's needs, or simply toe the party line.

"I will be in Fredericton to speak for Bathurst," Liberal candidate Marcelle Mersereau said, to a round of applause from the audience.

"I'm going to stand up for the working people," asserted NDP candidate Coletter Buttimer.

"I'm sure not going to agree with everything (the premier) says."

"I'll look after Bathurst's interests," said Claire Wilt, representing the Progressive Conservative party.

Mrs. Wilt, a Bathurst city councillor, said she told her fellow councillors and Mayor Kevin Mann to "prepare their shopping lists, because once I'm (in Fredericton), I'm going to dig."

"Our policy states we will answer to people first, our party second, and our leader last," responded Laurie Robichaud, candidate for the Conferederation of Regions party.

"We aren't sheep."

He noted the CoR party intends to introduce a "recall mechanism," whereby voters in the riding can simply recall an MLA who does not perform to their satisfaction.

One of the issues tackled by the candidates Sunday was that of the proposed regional civic centre, for which the city has begun to pursue funding at the provincial level.

Mrs. Wilt said she is in favor of a "realistic civic centre," although she feels the public is not in agreement with regards to the centre's proposed Douglas Avenue site.

Mr. Robichaud suggested it should be up to the public to decide.

"I'm not saying the site is the greatest, but it should be put to the people."

Mrs. Buttimer spoke favorably about the centre, saying Bathurst needs to offer professional services such as those the centre would provide.

Mrs. Mersereau noted she was present in Fredericton recently, when a Bathurst delegation made its presentation to the province in hopes of securing funding.

"What I want now is as many government dollars as possible to go into the civic centre, so taxpayers are not over-burdened," she said.

"I will fight for it."

KINDERGARTEN

The topic of kindergarten was also addressed.

Mrs. Wilt said she had spoken to provincial Tory leader Dennis Cochrane, who indicated to her that salaries for kindergarten teachers would be gradually increased.

Premier Frank McKenna introduced the public kindergarten program for the first time in New Brunswick this fall.

Mrs. Mersereau said she feels its introduction was overdue, and that it has gotten off to a good start. However, she noted it is still in its first stages, and would see improvements in the first five years under a Liberal government.

Mr. Robichaud saw less promise in the program, calling it a "farce," and citing the cost of the program. He suggested Premier McKenna would "be looking for more money out of your pockets to keep it going."

Mrs. Buttimer indicated she feels the kindergarten program is a positive one, but drew laughs from the audience when she turned to Mrs. Wilt and asked, "Claire, where is McKenna going to get the money (to fund the program)?"

"McKenna? I don't know," the Tory candidate answered, adding her leader is Dennis Cochrane, not Frank McKenna.

Grits have a history of winning local ridings

This region of the province has long been a Liberal stronghold, with Grit MLAs traditionally representing the Bathurst, Nepisiguit-Chaleur and Nigadoo-Chaleur ridings.

The Northern Light has ventured into its archives to research results of the past two provincial elections in all three ridings.

All 58 Liberals under leader Frank McKenna won their respective ridings in 1987, earning them the distinction of being only the second Canadian provincial party to ever sweep all seats in an election. The only other time it was accomplished was on Prince Edward Island in 1935, when Liberals were again voted in.

Incumbent Liberal Paul Kenny claimed 6,282 of the 7,972 votes cast in 1987 to easily win the Bathurst seat, outdistancing Progressive Conservative René Pratt, 1,125 votes; and New Democratic Party candidate Richard Doucet, 565. There were 10,442 eligible voters that year.

Nepisiguit-Chaleur incumbent Frank Branch was equally impressive in winning his seat, with 5,086 votes out of 6,438 cast. Tory Claude Albert finished a distant second with 1,029 votes, while in third was NDP candidate Harry Scott, with 323 votes. There were 7,529 eligible voters.

Nigadoo-Chaleur's Pierre Godin was also re-elected, taking 5,952 of the 8,012 votes cast. PC Nancy Arsenault came in second with 1,479 ballots in her favor, while NDP standard-bearer John Gagnon finished last with 581 votes. (Mr. Gagnon is a parachute candidate this year in the riding of Shippagan-les-Iles.)

The 1982 election proved a tight race.

Bathurst's Paul Kenny won his second term of office with 3,286 votes, but not far behind was PC Jim MacLaggan, a popular city councillor at the time, ouwith 2,735 votes; and NDP hopeful Kevin Mann, who is now mayor, with 2,325.

Frank Branch reclaimed his Nepisiguit-Chaleur seat with 3,510 votes compared to 1,502 for PC candidate Pat Battah.

Nigadoo-Chaleur incumbent Pierre Godin had 4,057 votes cast in his favor, while rounding out the remaining candidates were PC Dan Comeau, 2,661; NDP Real Boudreau, 994; and Parti Acadien candidate André Blanchard, 176.

Parks and Rec master plan will be looked at in detail, realistically by director

Parks, Recreation and Tourism director Marc Boudreau isn't about to rush into implementing his department's new strategy plan.

"I have to turn around and look at this realistically, in terms of our budget," Mr. Boudreau said Friday.

The Recreation Master Plan, prepared by the Moncton consulting firm Tourec, was accepted in principle by city council earlier this month.

That puts the ball in Mr. Boudreau's court. He will spend the next five to six weeks studying the recommendations of the consultant's 115-page report, after which he will present his findings to council for final approval.

The plan was initiated by Mr. Boudreau's department, which commissioned the Moncton firm to evaluate the recreation and parks system in Bathurst, and to prepare a strategic development plan for the next five years.

Mr. Boudreau noted some of the recommendations would take more than five years to implement, while some would take less.

One of the highlights of the plan is the implementation of an advisory board that would include members of the public with an interest in certain areas of recreation-related services.

That would mean a local minor-hockey organizer might offer input as to the city's needs in that area, for instance.

A youth advisory committee would also be looked at, while public consultation in general would be integral to the overall plan.

A linear park system, which would use walkways to link city parks, is something Mr. Boudreau feels should be looked at now, although it will require long-range planning, and input from the city's public works department.

Marc Boudreau

CONSOLIDATION

The report also recommends the consolidation of facility management, which means the Parks, Recreation and Tourism Department could be put in charge of managing some of the city's recreation facilities, such as the Bathurst Aquatic Centre.

One of the recommendations that concerned city councillors, when they voted to accept the document in principle, is the creation of new job positions within the department.

In addition to a general restructuring of staff, the report recommends hiring a coordinator to oversee activities for the handicapped, a facility and parks maintenance foreman, and a new full-time secretary.

Mr. Boudreau noted these positions reflect the needs of the department, which should logically expand in order to increase services to the public.

"There is a need for those positions, in time," he said, adding, "There's a lack of programs and services related those positions."

These and all other recommendations must be passed by a majority of council.

Mr. Boudreau said he doesn't know how councillors got the impression five new positions would be created, as was mentioned in the Sept. 2 council meeting.

In addition to the new positions, there would be a change in some job titles, "to better reflect the job the person does."

However, this does not entail the creation of new jobs.

TITLE RETAINED

The department will also retain the title of Parks, Recreation and Tourism, as opposed to Community Services, which has been used in the past.

Again, Mr. Boudreau said the name better reflects the services the department offers.

Other recommendations are of an operational nature, including a need for increasing outdoor services, such as walking and hiking trails.

Not all recommendations will necessarily be part of the overall plan, Mr. Boudreau cautioned.

"It's our mandate now to analyze (the report) and come up with a plan of action."

The findings of the report are based on a survey of the city's needs as seen by the population, including high school students; socio-demographic data obtained through Statistics Canada census reports; and reviews of existing Parks and Recreation services.

Mr. Boudreau noted there is nothing unusual about commissioning the preparation of a stragegy plan, which cost $26,000. Of that, $10,000 was contributed by the provincial government.

"It's a very standard type of process," he said, adding, "I would say every type of community has some sort of strategic plan; and hopefully, we'll come up with the best plan of attack to meet the needs of the people of Bathurst."

Answer on bus routes on Oct. 22

Parents living in Lone Pine Subdivision will soon know whether the District 42 school board will satisfy their request for new bus routes.

School trustees voted unanimously Tuesday to provide an answer at the Oct. 22 regular monthly board meeting, at which time they will have researched all the necessary information.

Currently, drivers only enter the South Teteagouche subdivision so that they can turn their buses around. That means some children may have to walk as far as 0.9 kilometres to the nearest bus stop.

Nancy Ellis, a spokesman for the concerned parents, noted in a presentation to the board that children must sometimes walk through wooded areas or through a crowded and busy parking lot to get to the bus stop.

She presented a proposal to the board that would cut that to a maximum distance of 0.4 kilometres.

The proposal calls for the two buses that service the subdivision to make three additional stops on its run, at strategic locations within the subdivision.

While a decision will be rendered Oct. 22, it won't necessarily be in favor of the Lone Pine residents.

Superintendent Emery Goguen said five similar requests have been made by other groups, and all will have to be considered at the same time.

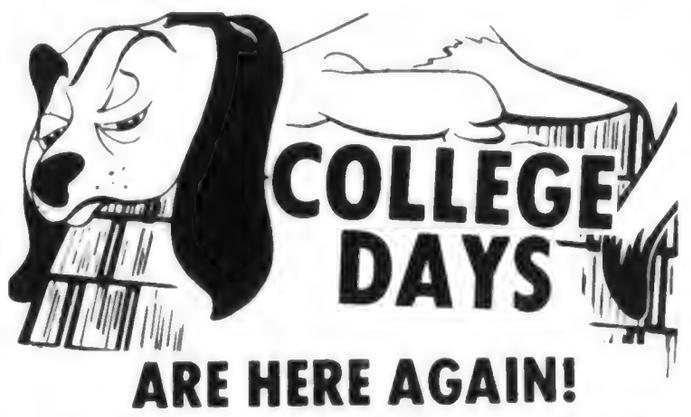
City teacher member of NBTA task force

A Bathurst woman is among those serving on the New Brunswick Teachers' Association's task force on Excellence in Education.

Kathy Grebenc recently attended an all-day session in Fredericton for the task force, which will study and summarize the current status of the province's education system, and recommend any changes which might bring improvement.

Ms. Grebenc is a vice-principal at J.G. Chalmers Junior High.

In a release, task force chairman Bob Fitzpatrick described Ms. Grebenc and the other educators on the task force as "the front line people in New Brunswick education."



"Teachers understand the system and what is needed to improve it better than anyone else, because they're out there every day, doing their best to make it work."

Mr. Fitzpatrick indicated the task force is not being initiated under pressure.

"We're not undertaking this project as an emergency measure, but simply because the time seems right for a review, and we have the expertise and the connections to do a thorough job."

The task force's terms of reference call for a complete review of the current literature and research on excellence in education.

FOR:

1. ECONOMICS GROWTH — The opening of the road to resources will achieve this. It will make our resources more readily available to all Canada and the U.S. and I support this and will lobby for this.

2. EDUCATION — That the Bathurst Community College be made more accessable to all, that all courses be offered in both languages that a French language course for adults similiar to Father John Fournier be made available.

3. FORESTRY — Less government regualtions to allow private woodlot owners greater accessability to a greater and freer market.

4. HEALTH — The provision of greater health care for all to include transportation of the elderly and to encourage more Doctors in the specializing fields to locate and remain in these area.

5. TRANSPORTATION — That the Bathurst airport be developed as it should have been and become the hub of the North for air travel.

VOTE
LAURIE ROBICHAUD
CoR CANDIDATE
FOR CITY OF BATHURST

EDUCATION — Our education system must be reorganized and improved because as it is now, children are graduating who can hardly read, write, do math, who know nothing about history, geography, politics, or thier own country, and not only that, but we have an education system that is practicing segregation. We have schools where children are separated by fences, where children are forbidden to speak to their friends in French or English. Is this the government's idea of creating harmony and unity? We believe it is doing just the opposite. We say let's get back to basics where all children go to school together, learn together, play together and grow together. Where, whether they are English in a French community or French in aa English community, the opportunities are the same, where the languages are taught equally from Grade 1 to Grade 12, and where on completion of Grade 12, we will then be producing a truly bilingual society where the children will have learned to respect each others differences and understand them, not just from the schooling process but from the growing together process. Let's do away with duallity and we'll all be better for it. The Berlin Wall came down, let's take our fences and barriers down.
HEALTH — In 1971, the transfer payments to N.B. from the Federal Government towards medicare was 60%, today it is 37% - a loss of 23% despite the increases in taxes levied on the people federally. We feel that a very strong protest must be made to the Federal Government, using as a basis for this, our very small tax base provincially. Our Health Services are being very dangerously depleted and a strong case must be presented by a very strong Provincial Government. We must put our people first as we in the C.O.R. party have always said.
TRANSPORTATION — It is very apparent that all areas of transportation must be looked at very seriously here:- highways, rail, air and sea.
HIGHWAYS — The road to resources would be a good place to start. Let's face it, if this road was to be developed to take all traffic, the benefots would be great. We believe it would make the northern part of the province more accessible, it would increase tourism and all would benefot, so we as a party will make this a real priority for Bathurst.
RAIL — A better system throughout the north would be a real asset, providing work and less maintenance on highways. The Federal Government must be made to realize the importance of this and that people come forst.
AIR — The local Bathurst airport must be upgraded to the point where it will be the hub of air travel. The airport at Charlo was developed as apolitical ploy and as an appeasement and really is not providing the kind of service needed.
SEA — The future development of the Bathurst Harbour to allow larger ships to enter would greatly increase the economic growth of Bathurst. It would allow the shipping of raw materials directly and cut down on costs, provide more employment and make Bathursta place more attractive to outside interests.
SOCIAL SERVICES — These services are appalling in this area. Imagine in this day of prospweity that little children are going hungry and half-clothed - 38000 provincially, Liberals figures 1990, 500 here in the city.

The complete system must be reviewed and changed. Single parents must be given enough to survive with. The elderly must be taken care of, and by eliminating the waste in government, doing away with legislated bilingualism and reducing the size of the government bureaucracy, this could be done without increasing taxes.

By using the monies made from lotteries and gambling machines, it could be done.

By having a government that puts people ahead of politics, with the C.O.R. party it will be done.

THE OFFICIAL SOFT DRINK of Coca-Cola CLASSIC OF SUMMER

Atlantic ball title to Belledune

The Belledune Mooseheads captured the Atlantic Intermediate B Baseball Championship in fine style this weekend in Charlottetown, P.E.I.

The local team finished the double-knockout affair with a perfect 4-0 won-lost record, and received standout performances from a number of its players in bringing the title home to Belledune.

An ironic part of the win revolved around team member Wayne Guitard. He is the son of Raymond Guitard, a member of the only other team from Belledune to win a provincial Intermediate B championship, back in 1970.

Attending the event, besides Belledune, were the Summerside Merchant Jays, representing P.E.I.; McCann Royals, attending on behalf of Nova Scotia; and host Charlottetown Regal Oilers.

The Mooseheads started the weekend off in fine style Saturday with a 3-1 decision over Nova Scotia. Jean-Yves Legacy pitched the complete game and allowed only four hits.

The odd part about this game is that Belledune had only two hits, one of which was a three-run home run by Jimmy Guitard, accounting for all of Belledune's runs. Paul Daley was the only other Mooseheads player to register a hit, with a single to his credit.

Later that day, the Mooseheads received 6⅓ solid innings from Jimmy Guitard, and Mike Brophy finished the game in relief, en route to a 4-3 decision over Summerside.

Jimmy Guitard again accounted for all runs scored by his team, this time thanks to a grand slam shot midway through the game. Roger Guitard also had a strong outing, with two doubles and a single to his credit.

On Sunday, Belledune faced off against Charlottetown, both bearing 2-0 won-lost records.

The Mooseheads drew first blood in what amounted to a best-of-three final with a 6-3 win in their first meeting, thanks again to the pitching prowess of Jean-Yves Legacy.

Ron Lavigne stroked a two-run homer to power the way to victory.

The final game was played later that day. The Mooseheads, leading 11-1 after five innings, were handed the game and championship thanks to the mercy rule. The rule states that a team leading by 10 runs or more after five complete innings is given the win.

The winning pitcher in this game was Mike Brophy, who went the distance after relieving Jimmy Guitard in the second inning.

Top hitters were Dave Lavigne, with a solo homer, and Roger Guitard, with a double.

Jean-Yves Legacy was named top pitcher of the tournament, allowing only four runs in two complete games.

Marc Arseneau is the head coach of the team, with other titles held by Tom Moore, manager; Paul Devereaux, trainer; Mike Furlotte, coach; and Claude Moore, statistician.

INCOMING!

A fun softball game was played Sept. 12 at the Place des Jeunes softball field, pitting members of the Upper Dawson Tenants' Association against a team comprised of New Brunswick Housing staff. Ping pong club opens soon

Here's an item which should be of great interest to a lot of closet table tennis players.

Ecole Secondaire Nepisiguit's physical education department, in cooperation with the New Brunswick Table Tennis Association, has created the Chaleur Table Tennis Association, and play begins Tuesday, Sept. 24.

The club is open to anyone 12 and older, and playing nights are Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings from 6:30 p.m. to 9 p.m. at the ESN gym. Players are urged to use the rear entrance.

A table tennis pallet is all anyone needs to join, with membership fees determined at a later date and depending on how many people join.

The goal of the club is to develop local skills, and give the more advanced players an opportunity to test theirs.

If demand warrants it, organizers will create a regional organization linking the Chaleur and Acadian Peninsula associations, giving players even more competition. The link would be sponsored by the provincial Tourism, Recreation and Heritage Department.

Maurice Robichaud of Bathurst, in charge of player development as vice-president of the NBTTA, and Basile Chiasson of Bathurst--among the best players in New Brunswick--will act as coaches for the club, with assistance from Leon Theriault and Pierre Laforest.

The club has 12 top-quality tables at its disposal.

AMONG THE BEST

Tina Chamberlain, 15 year-old daughter of Jerry and Claudette Chamberlain of Bathurst, recently finished second in Canada in a solo dance competition. The DeGrace Diamond Dance Studio member claimed the finish in the David Hoctor Dance Caravan competition, held in Toronto in early August. Tina was among 36 girls from the club to attend the event, which included lessons and competitions, and even a dance scholarship, which went to fellow club member Monique Larocque of Allardville. Tina has been dancing since the age of three.

Short Fat Guys Run meeting tonight

Contrary to popular belief, the Short Fat Guys One Mile Down Hill Run is not reserved solely for short fat guys who can only run one mile down hill.

The event is open to everyone--no exceptions--and the more, the merrier.

The first organizational meeting for the annual run is set for tonight Wednesday at the Labatt's offices at 1154 St. Peter Ave., beginning at 7 p.m.

The run is held annually in Bathurst and other cities and towns in New Brunswick, with all proceeds turned over to the New Brunswick Children's Wish Foundation. The foundation grants wishes to terminally ill children living within the province.

Money for the foundation is collected by participants through pledges.

If you would like to help organize this year's run in any way, please show up at the meeting or call Denis Langlais at 548-4255.

Mike Tyson may be in for a rough night on Nov. 8

On The Ropes
By "Wild" BILL HUDON

The former Heavyweight champion of the world from Catskill, N.Y., (Iron) Mike Tyson, is very busy these days--but not in the ring.

All his workouts are in the courthouse.

I will spell it out for you: Tyson may have some problems with current world Heavyweight champion Evander Holyfield Nov. 8.

Can somebody out there tell me if Tyson is training for this upcoming fight? Most of the guys I've been speaking with pick Tyson to dethrone the champ, but they could be wrong. Holyfield will be ready for Tyson.

Now, let's put it the other way around. Is Tyson ready for Holyfield? Most women would probably like to see Tyson get his head knocked off, and maybe Holyfield will do just that for them.

Like I said above, Nov. 8 could be a bad night for Big Bad Mike, because Holyfield will be 100 per cent ready for this fight.

Just last weekend a few guys asked me who I pick to win on Nov. 8. At the moment, I have no clue. I will put it this way: if Tyson is prepared, in good shape, and ready for this fight, I would have to pick Tyson to win. But now it's a whole new ball game. Tyson may have to spend more time in the courtroom than in the gym.

I could be wrong, but I say that Holyfield will be the toughest opponent Tyson will face for a long time. Holyfield will give Tyson a lot of trouble because Tyson has a lot of problems on his mind. I will stick my neck out a little and say that if Tyson can't win this one, it could be the end of his boxing career.

Last weekend on the Tube some of you out there must have seen one of the 'little giants' in the world of boxing. He weighs in at only 110 pounds and he is Canada's Scotty (Bull Dog) Olson. He stopped Jose Gomez from Mexico in the first round in Reno, Nevada last weekend.

Olson's record is now 17-0 won-lost. He is also rated number 10 in the world of Flyweights.

Who was the tallest Heavyweight champion ever? That distinction goes to Jess Willard, who stood 6'6¼" tall. There were some taller boxers, but they were not champions.

PASSING PARADE

(Wild) Bill Hudon lost a six-round decision to Don Spragg in Bathurst on Aug. 14, 1953.

On Aug. 12, 1954, Don Spragg stopped Moncton's Al Roach in the third round.

Fran Mallais, who's boxing career started in Bathurst, now has more than 76 amateur fights and is on his way to Saskatchewan to box in the Senior National Championships. Fran may be only a Lightweight, but he fights like a Middleweight. Fran is very strong for his size, and he has his mind set on turning pro.

Like I said before, Fran has enough medals to decorate the biggest Christmas tree in the world.

By the way, the nationals begin today Wednesday and run through the weekend.

"Wild" Bill Hudon is a member of the Canadian Boxing Hall of Fame and the Bathurst Sports Hall of Fame.

Kings lack local players

There were 28 bodies at the first Gloucester County Kings AAA Midget hockey team practise Friday in St. Isidore, but there was something definitely lacking.

Players from the Bathurst area.

"We were a little disappointed there were no kids out from Bathurst," said Scott Poupart, head coach with the New Brunswick AAA Midget Hockey League entry.

He noted that a lot of talented players in the area are opting for the high school teams rather than the AAA Midget route.

"There were a few bright lights out there though," he said, noting he feels he'll have another strong team this year.

After the one-hour practise Friday, the youths were put in a game situation Sunday against the West Kent Eastern Brick Athletics, and the long summer and lack of practise time proved costly to the youngsters' hockey skills.

The Kings lost the game 9-6, with local goal-scoring duties handled by Denis St. Laurent, two goals; Daniel Pitre, Corey Larose, Joel Levesque, and Serge Basque.

Information on the time and place of the next practise will be announced this week on local radio stations.

MONTHLY MEAL WINNERS

Joan Williamson and Della Robichaud both of Bathurst; and Michel Gallant of Beresford were the June, July and August winners respectively of $50 vouchers each for meals at Keddy's Lighthouse Restaurant offered by Keddy's and Rainbow Dry Cleaners. From left: Ron Gates, owner Rainbow Dry Cleaners; Mrs. Williamson, Mr. Gallant, and Murielle Daigle, diningroom and lounge manager at Keddy's. Missing is Mrs. Robichaud. The next draw will be held Sept. 30.

Final Terry Fox Run tally won't be known for awhile

More than $6,500 was raised Sunday in the 11th Annual Terry Fox Run, but the total will certainly go well beyond that when the final tallies are in.

The $6,500 was raised by five of the nine local communities taking part in the annual event, with the four remaining communities yet to report their pledge totals.

The five municipalities reporting also noted that pledges can continue to be collected until Oct. 14, so their totals are likely to rise substantially before then.

The tiny municipality of Belledune was the most successful, with $2,148.29 received through its 75 participants. Organizers had set a goal of $2,200.

Major contributors in Belledune's drive to help the Canadian Cancer Society included the 1st Belledune Girl Guide Unit and its leaders, who collected $171; the Smelting Division of Brunswick Mining and Smelting Corp. Ltd., $300; and Belledune Village Council, $50.

There were 90 people taking in the Bathurst run, helping to raise $1,764.55 for the worthy cause.

Last year the Bathurst run raised approximately $1,500 in the race portion, but the grand total surpassed the $4,000 mark in total due to other contributors within the city.

"We'll probably reach $5,000 this year," said Donna Landry, outdoor recreation specialist with Bathurst's Tourism, Recreation and Heritage Department.

Top runners in the Bathurst event were Steven Vienneau, who ran the seven-kilometre course in a time of 29 minutes flat; and Michel Jean, who finished in 29:25.

Michel Boudreau was tops among bikers entered with a time of 17:50, while the runner-up position was taken up by Cindi MacIntosh, in a time of 19 minutes.

There were 140 participants taking in the Petit Rocher version of the Terry Fox Run this year, raising an estimated $1,200 in the process. Last year there were about 120 participants, who raised about $1,250.

The first run ever held in Pointe Verte has to be considered a success, with 60 runners taking part and raising $210.

There were 94 participants taking in the Beresford run, with $1,200 raised and counting.

Besides the official run Sunday, there were almost 600 students from Carrefour Etudiant and l'Abecedaire doing their bit to help out. The students performed their runs the week before, during their regular physical education classes.

Dave Boudreau, 19, a former cancer patient, was honored by organizers as their choice for membership in the Terry Fox Foundation.

Municipalities yet to be heard from include New Bandon, South Tetagouche, St. Isidore and St. Sauveur.

LIKE FATHER, LIKE SON

Gilbert Vienneau (right) of Rough Waters succesfully completed his fourth 80-Kilometre rollerblading adventure Sunday, in conjunction with the 11th annual Terry Fox Run. Vienneau, 59, began his journey in Sheila at 8 a.m. Sunday morning, and arrived in East Bathurst at 3:32 p.m. that same afternoon. Vienneau is shown in photo with his son Steven, who was the winner of the Bathurst run which finished prior to his father's arrival.

TOP ARCHERS IN TARGET COMPETITION

The Third Annual 3-D Animal Shoot archery tournament was held Sunday at the Bathurst Sports Chalet, with 30 local archers taking part. The winners were, front from left, Donald Mallet of Robertville, top score and first in the Bowhunter class; Carole Anne Hall of Bathurst, tops in the Peewee class; and Jean-Claude Boudreau of Bathurst, third in the Bowhunter class. Back from left are Gerard Lagacé of Pointe Verte, second in the Unlimited class; Yvon Laplante of Petit Rocher, first in the Unlimited class; and Fernand Boivin of Petit Rocher, third in the Unlimited class. Missing from photo is Gino Haché of Tremblay, second in the Bowhunter class.

MAN OF THE HOUR

The Man of the Hour banquet was part of the Seventh Annual Danny's/Pepsi Classic golf tournament. The former president of the Bathurst Golf Association was roasted and toasted by friends Ross Aube, Frank McDermott, Craig Whalen and Darryl Black. A 50/50 draw was also held during the course of the evening, with $306 won by Gerald Pettigrew, and the same amount turned over to the Chaleur Regional Hospital Foundation to aid in its purchase of a Cat Scan unit.

Top hitter for B.J. Furs were Bobby Theriault, with a home run and a single, and Randy Noel, with a triple and a single. Roger Chamberlain led Penguin Club with a double and a single.

Penguin Club took the series lead with a 13-3 win Sept. 12, with Danny Daigle on the mound for the win and Robert Frenette taking the loss.

Roger Daigle poked three singles in the winning effort, while the top hitters for the losing side were Bobby Theriault, with two doubles and a single, and Andy Chan, with two singles.

Penguin Club took a commanding 3-1 series lead with a 7-5 win Sunday night. Danny Daigle registered his third win of the series, while Robert Frenette took his third loss.

Roger Chamberlain and Louis Couture each had a double and a single for Penguin Club and B.J. Furs respectively.

Parkwood softball final tied

The Parkwood Schooner-Pizza Delight Softball League final between the Wild Goose Guzzlers and Brasserie O'St. Pierre was tied at one game apiece as of Sunday.

The defending champion Guzzlers earned the berth in the final by defeating Techno 90 9-3 in the deciding game of their best-of-three semi-final Sept. 9, with Glen Morrison earning the mound victory and Christian Doiron tagged with the loss.

Jarvis Chiasson was the leading hitter for the winning side with a home run and a single, while for O'St. Pierre it was Jean-Marc Finn with a pair of singles.

The Guzzlers began the best-of-seven final with Brasserie O'St. Pierre on the proper footing, with a 14-9 decision Sept. 10 behind Glen Morrison's pitching arm. Pat Murphy took the loss.

Raymond Hicks stroked four singles to lead the Goose to victory, with Jamie Melanson hitting a home run for the losing side.

Brasserie O'St. Pierre evened things up with a 13-10 win Sept. 11, with Paul Aucoin earning the win and Glen Morrison tagged with the loss.

Dave MacDonald poked a home run and a single to lead the winning effort, while Dan Ouellette led the Guzzlers with the same offensive output.

Games three and four were played Monday and Tuesday, with results unavailable at press time.

Local racers among best

The final point standings are in for McKay's Speedway in Douglastown, and local stock car racers Kirk Jardine and Peter Chisholm are both near the top.

Jardine finished the season in sixth place, with 268 points, only two ahead of Chisholm, who finished the season holding down seventh spot in the 29-car field.

Winning the points championship this year was the Miramichi's Raymond McCray, with 303 points.

The local drivers will be paid an undisclosed amount of cash per point during the closing banquet, slated for Douglastown later this year.

Jardine's sponsors this season included Good Brothers Ltd., Doucet's Landscaping, Bathurst Alternator and Starter, Duke's Body Shop, Don's Esso, Guignard Signs, City Glass, and Midas Muffler and Brake Shop.

Sponsoring Chisholm were Bathurst Mechanics Plus, Stothart Toyota, A.D. Trucking, Maritime Diamond Drilling, ATS Convenience, and Bathurst Heavy Equipment Repair.

Mazerolle rolls a record 189 high single

Bowling Update

By EDWARD CHAMBERLAIN

The Alpine Lite Men's Money League got underway last Wednesday night at Capitol Lanes, and what a start it was for Camille Mazerolle.

He rolled a 189 in the first string to set a new league record, and then added strings of 121 and 104 to finish with a 414 triple.

Due to reasons beyond our control, the City of Bathurst T.V. Candelpin Challenge usually carried on Cable 2000 Inc. will only take place after the Christmas holidays at Capital Lanes. A meeting will be held in the near future to discuss the development, with all bowlers welcomed to attend.

The first Monthly Men's Money Tournament will take place at Capitol Lanes on Sept. 29 beginning at 10 a.m. Forty bowlers will be accepted on a first come, first serve basis.

Five leagues got underway at Chaleur Family Lanes last week, and there's still room left in the youth category. If interested, call Louis at 546-6030.

The Ladies' Money League got underway Monday night. The league is set to meet on the first Monday of every month thereafter. To register, call Edward at 548-4455. Teams will be made up by way of averages.

he next Mixed Money Tournament is scheduled for Oct. 6 at Chaleur Lanes, beginning at 10 a.m. To register, call Edward at 548-4455.

Playing golf is a true test of patience

Out Of Bounds

By JIM COUTURE
Northern Light Sports

There is one sport that I've never written about in this column, and here--this week--I'm finally going to do something about that.

The game is golf, and the reason I've never written about it is simple: patience, or lack of it on my part.

If you ask anyone close to me what my biggest downfall is, they'll probably identify a lack of patience. There will undoubtedly be other, more humiliating things said if you ask them a loaded question like that, but let's concentrate on my lack of patience, shall we? Thank you.

Golf is a game that requires plenty of patience, a cool head, and a good eye--the last of which is a necessity for anyone with a nasty slice like I've got. I think pine trees eat golf balls.

I had a chance to hone my slice this weekend at the Pokemouche Golf Club, with my brother and a couple of his buddies along for the thrill.

I'll try to draw a mental picture for you of that round of golf.

We'll begin on the tee, where my ever-present slice forces me to stand at a 45 degree angle on the tee. Despite the adjustment, I still hit the ball in the woods in the other direction.

Oh well, on to my iron game, or lack thereof. I hit maybe 40 percent of those shots, amnd most of the time I leave amazingly well-proprtioned divots in my wake. I do that extremely well.

A three-putt usually wraps things up rather nicely, and it's on to the next hole.

I do, however, hit the ball rather far, but it seldom lands in the middle of the fairway. I did manage to put one nice one in the fairway Saturday, a monster line drive the guys estimated to be about 250 yards (bless their poor eyesight). Follow that up with a shot into the woods on my approach (two-shot penalty is what they told me), a few swipes at the sand, and a four-putt, and there you have it: a score I can be embarrassed about.

I finished with a 117 over 18 holes.

New traffic signs near bridge spark protest in Jacquet River

Newly-erected traffic signs on Firlotte Road in Jacquet River sparked a small demonstration Saturday.

About half a dozen residents, some carrying placards, were at the bridge on Firlotte Road throughout the day, protesting a decison by the village council to erect traffic signs at both ends of the overhead bridge.

The signs read Stop: Proceed Cautiously, Do Not Blow Horn.

The single-lane bridge passes over a rail line, and is the only exit from the beach area in the village. The bridge rises and then descends, thereby obscuring the view of oncoming traffic and pedestrians.

A spokesman for the demonstrators, Genevieve Degrechie, said that in the past, drivers blew their horns before crossing the span, to warn those on the other end to yield. She and the other demonstrators do not believe the signs will be adequate enough warning to oncoming traffic, without vehicle horns being blown.

"I don't see why blowing the horn during the day time is a problem," said Mrs. Degrechie, adding "It's for safety, the intention is not to disturb anyone."

A spokesman for the Jacquet River RCMP said a complaint filed by a resident prompted the village council to erect the traffic signs, which prohibit drivers from blowing their horns at the bridge.

The village's noise bylaw authorizes RCMP to charge a driver for blowing his or her car horn if a complaint is received.

However, the protestors are concerned that without horns being blown at the bridge, an accident could occur.

"When I was taking my drivers education course, I was told by the instructor that we were to cross a blind bridge; he said to go slow, keep to your right and blow your horn." said Mrs. Degrechie.

Jacquet River mayor Francis Firlotte told The Northern Light a delegation of concerned citizens met with the village council during council's Sept. 9 meeting, to discuss the sign issue.

He said Saturday he would be sending a reply to the citizens who staged the demonstration.

One of the demonstrators, Marcella Levesque, told The Northern Light she and her fellow concerned citizens were not about to give up their fight.

Upgrading of Daly Point is supported

Bathurst City Council reacted favorably, at Monday's regular public session, to a request for assistance from the Daly Point Reserve Management Committee.

Councillors voted in favor of studying a proposal from the committee that would include a $30,000 contribution from the city. Council will consider the matter in its upcoming budget exercise, sometime in the next few weeks.

The Daly Point Reserve, located off Carron Drive in East Bathurst, was initiated in 1989, mostly through funding provided by Brunswick Mining and Smelting.

The Daly Point Management Committee is presently seeking funds under the provincial Environmental Trust Fund to complete the reserve. In a written request to council, the committee asked that the city consider a cost-sharing agreement to build an outdoor amphitheatre, develop an education kit, build an interpretive building, and share in the annual operation costs of the reserve.

The committee said many future developments at the park have potential to be funded through the ETF.

However, a contribution from the city may improve the committee's chances of having its application approved, as BM&S, DNRE and the city of Bathurst would be seen as joint sponsors.

"We would like the city of Bathurst to allot $30,000 of the the 1992 budget toward (these) developments," the request said.

The comittee also asked that the city promote the Daly Point Reserve, and consider assigning a permanent tour guide to the reserve.

The request was accompanied by a written report listing the committee's five-year management plan.

Councillor Ross Aube asked that the city begin by finding out the current status of the committee's request to the ETF, while Deputy Mayor Kieth Loupelle suggested comparing the proposal to whatever similar projects may exist in other communities.

HEALTH A VITAL GIFT

The new Chaleur General Hospital opened officially on February 2, 1972, But the institution obtained its regional status only in 1984. The name of the hospital was then changed from Chaleur General Hospital, to Chaleur Regional Hospital, to reflect the regional status of the institution.

There are seven Health Regions in New Brunswick, three of them in northern New Brunwick, one in the Miramichi region and three in southern New Brunswick. Chaleur Regional Hospital serves region VI, which includes the city of Bathurst, the Chaleur Region, from Pointe Verte to Allardville, and the Acadian Peninsula.

The region served by Chaleur Regional Hospital includes three hospitals, in Caraquet, Lameque and the newly completed hospital in Tracadie. The population served by Chaleur Regional Hospital is approximately 93,000.

In addition to offering primary services such as Physiotherapy, General Medicine, Dietetics, and Pharmacy, a regional hospital also provides more specialized services, or secondary services. In some cases, a regional health care institution such as Chaleur Regional Hospital offers tertiary services or ultraspecialized services. The population served for tertiary services is over 100,000 people. The Ear Nose and Throat specialists and the Neonatologist, for example, can serve the population of all northern New Brunswick.

Since it became a regional health care center in 1984, things have really picked up for Chaleur Regional Hospital. New programs and services have been put in place and a lot of construction work inside and outside the building have been done. Major renovations had to be done for the new outpatient clinics which became available in recent years. In the Spring of 1985, the new Psychiatric Unit serving all region VI opened its doors for its first patients.

Dr. Reshat Memiche, Claudette Godin and Marjorie Aubé in the Gastroenterology lab. (Patient doesn't want to be identified). We have the most modern and up to date equipment in the Atlantic Provinces.

In the past few years, a new Neonatology unit and High risk pregnancy, Gastroenterology and Oncology units opened. A new Nursing Administration wing opened last summer, and Ct Scan and Nuclear Medicine services will be available to patients in the Spring of 1992. With the addition of these new services, Chaleur Regional Hospital will be able to fulfill even more its regional role. A Ct Scan will also help attract new specialists in the region.

Recruitment of new specialists in fields like Nuclear Medicine, Dermatology, Orthopedics, Internal Medicine, Plastic Surgery, Neurology, Hematology, Physiatry, Rhumatology, Geriatrics, Cardiology, General Surgery, Psychiatry, Urology, ENT, Pediatrics and Oncology are included in the long term strategic plan for Chaleur Regional Hospital, for the next five to ten years. The hospital also wants to establish a burn unit. Chaleur Regional Hospital plans to develop palliative care services, hemodialysis, cardiac pacing, and a step down coronary unit. The institution also wants to extend programs or the hours of certain programs already in place, such as Physiotherapy, Speech Pathology, Psychology, Outpatient Clinics, Audiology and Pharmacy. The hospital could also develop a Pain Clinic and a Pediatric Intensive Care Unit.

Last year, Mr. Raymond Frenette, Minister of Health, stated at the Legislative Assembly that Chaleur Regional Hospital would become the tertiary center for the northern part of the province. This means that Chaleur Regional Hospital would be providing tertiary services to the population of regions 4 (Edmundston), 5 (Campbellton), and 6.

A large portion of inpatients at Chaleur Regional Hospital come from the City of Bathurst and the surrounding area. However, over 35 percent of hospitalized patients come from the Acadian Peninsula, and more than 40 percent of the day surgeries are performed on patients from the Acadian Peninsula. A large number of patients in outpatient clinics come from the Acadian Peninsula. And with the arrival of new specialists, these numbers will continue to increase.

The population served by Chaleur Regional Hospital is French in majority. With a 100% French population in the Acadian Peninsula and 70 percent in the Chaleur Region and City of Bathurst, the population served by the hospital is approximately 80 percent French speaking and 20 percent English speaking.

Chaleur Regional Hospital already fulfills its regional mandate in many areas. The Laboratory is a regional facility providing services to the three hospitals of the Acadian Peninsula. Computer services are offered by CRH to hospitals in the Peninsula. The regional biomedical engineering also provides services to other hospitals in regions VI and V. The Psychiatric Unit of Chaleur Regional Hospital receives clients from the entire region. The dieticians at Chaleur Regional Hospital advise the Peninsula Hospitals. The Pharmacy also provides a regional service.

Since the hospital does not have all the required specialists, it cannot fulfill completely its mandate as a regional institution, for the time being. The main goal for the hospital, at this time, is to reinforce its position with the specialties presently in place. The hospital must also continue its commitment and efforts to recruit new specialists n order to be able to offer all the specialized and ultraspecialized services a regional institution must provide.

On a long term basis, the goal of Chaleur Regional Hospital is to be able to treat patients of the region near their home, without having to travel to the south of the province or outside the province to receive specialized care.

But this goal cannot be accomplished in one year or even five years. In the next ten years, Chaleur Regional Hospital will continue its development in order to offer the specialized services to the population of region VI.

The regional role of Chaleur Regional Hospital does not come into conflict with the other hospitals of the region. Each hospital within the region has its specific role to play in the health care field. Chaleur Regional Hospital must provide a leadership role to the region by providing specialized services to its population.

Councillor, police chief give opposing views

Things are not as bad as city councillor Ken Frenette would have them to be.

At least that's the impression Bathurst City Police chief Lloyd Armstrong gave at Monday's regular public meeting. Councillor Frenette had asked the chief to explain what his department plans to do about excessive speeding on the South end of King Avenue.

He told council that residents of that area are concerned about pulp trucks, which he said do not seem to obey the posted speed limit, even though an elementary school is located nearby.

He challenged Chief Armstrong to start enforcing the speed limit.

"If they have to give out tickets, never mind the warnings; get the ticket book out," he said.

However, Chief Armstrong hasn't seen any evidence that such a problem exists.

"For the most part, the radar doesn't indicate very much speeding on King Avenue," he told Mr. Frenette, adding radar is used to check speeding "throughout the city, at different locations and at different times, including King Avenue."

Mr. Frenette showed his dissatisfaction when Deputy Mayor Keith Loupelle took his turn and asked the chief to explain the enforcement of the 30 kilometre-per-hour school zone.

"This is my problem in South Bathurst," he yelled to the Deputy Mayor, who quickly responded, "You don't own Bathurst," before Mayor Kevin Mann broke up the exchange by repeatedly calling for order.

Chief Armstrong told council reduced speed limits in school zones are enforced only when school is in session, but said he will look into the concern and report back to council.

Mr. Frenette criticized the chief for not having enough information on hand, saying he should have known the item was on the agenda, and should have been prepared for it.

He was equally unimpressed with the answers given on the issue of parking on the East side of King Avenue near the Bathurst High School.

He said he was concerned that high school teachers use parking spaces on King Avenue that are designated for two-hour parking only.

He wanted to know why the two-hour parking limit was not enforced, adding, "It's maybe enforced one or two days, then it's back to the old ways."

Chief Armstrong explained the matter to Mr. Frenette for what he called "the fourth or fifth time."

"For some reason, I'm not getting through to him," the chief told council, prompting Mr. Frenette to shout back, "I'm not getting through to him! That's the problem."

Chief Armstrong said the two-hour limit applies to any two hours of the day, peak traffic times included.

He also noted the limit applies to any two hours of the day, which means as long as a vehicle is moved even slightly within two hours, it can remain parked in that area.

He said he has spoken to Bathurst High School officials about the problem, but added, "As long as they move, there is nothing we can do."

Mayor Kevin Mann ordered the meeting to proceed to the next item on the agenda. When he did this, Mr. Frenette turned to the mayor and said, "The chief is here tonight; you can get on your high horse."

They visited the seaside village Seacoats which was the home of the Archibald family prior to coming to Canada in the 1830s. Last but not least they visited Pit Lockery which was the family village of her father's family, the MacLaggans.

Hummingbirds are gone for the winter

From my Window
A bird watcher's observations
By MARY GAUTHIER

I have two hopper-type feeders that I have attempted to pigeon-proof. I stapled two-inch wire screening around the feeder area; the smaller birds can flit in and out and the pigeons can still feed, but only at the edges where they can poke their heads in.

A few nights ago I was pleased to see a purple finch, a white-throated sparrow, a chickadee and a pine siskin feeding inside the wired area.

Juncos, dark gray above and white underneath, sparrow size, are back. They are scratching under the hedges and trees looking for seeds and bugs. My hummingbirds are gone; I'll be taking my feeders down today.

The blue jays are busy storing food for the winter. I've heard so many varied calls from them such as a squeaky clothesline, clucking sounds, cat-like meows...I wonder what they are saying?

Thanks from the Arthritis Society to the City Farmers' Market and all those who bought birdfeeders and gave donations. Watch for us around Christmas when we hope to sell bird books.

There will be a plant life identification walk at the Daly Point Reserve Sunday at 1 p.m. Dress according to the weather and bring your binoculars. (The Canada Geese are back! I've seen between 40 and 50 in the Daly Point marsh.)

Richelieu Radiothon set

The eighth annual Radiothon Richelieu was officially announced at a press conference Saturday.

About 70 club members from what is known as the Nicolas Denys region for Richelieu were present at the Bathurst Sports Chalet for the press conference.

The radiothon will be held at the Carrefour De La Mer in Caraquet Nov. 2 and 3. The purpose of the event is to raise funds to support various youth programs.

"We will help out any organization that involves youths," said Jacques Ouellet of Bathurst. Mr. Oullet is the district governor for Richelieu.

The radiothon will involve seven of the eight clubs in the region, from Petit Rocher to Tracadie. The Bathurst club is the only non-participant because it concentrates its fundraising efforts on its weekly television bingo.

Mr. Ouellet told The Northern Light the radiothon will be aired live for 30 continuous hours on radio station CJVA of Caraquet. The program will begin on Saturday Nov. 2 at 12 noon and continue through 6 p.m. Sunday.

A target goal for this year has not yet been set. However, in 1990 the event raised about $85,000. The club put back about 90 per cent of those monies into the community, the remaining 10 per cent going to cover expenses.

Each club will be collecting funds for their own region.

"Each club inter-relates with each other, which makes a better coordinated project," Mr.Ouellet said.

The radiothon will be divided into entertainment, interviews, Chinese auctions, and fundraising updates.

The public may make pledges through the Carrefour De La Mer hall or to the club's council in community. Members will also be conducting a door-to-door collection for a few days.

The event is being chaired by Raymond Arsenault of Caraquet.

ART STUDENT

Jason Audet, a 1991 graduate of Bathurst High school, was presented with the Art Award at graduation exercises in June, along with a cheque for $100. Jason was also awarded a J. Harper Kent scholarship, valued at $1,000, at the same ceremony. He is now attending the Nova Scotia College of Graphic Art and Design in Halifax, where he is enrolled in the the five-year program for a degree in fine arts and education. Jason is the son of Carole and George Audet of King Avenue.

Gloucester Gourmet

This week's gourmet is The Northern Light's own Art Talk columnist, Jean-Frances.

Jean-Frances is a professional artist who especially enjoys drawing in India ink, and painting with water colors.

She has a background in nursing, while continuing to pursue her artistic interests, which include her involvement with the Nepisiguit-Chaleur Arts and Culture Association.

Her creativity stretches easily from canvas to kitchen, where she enjoys trying out new recipes passed along by friends. The following is one she picked up while visiting the boyhood home of her husband, Richard Mann, with whom she was one daughter, Josephine.

RASPBERRY SCOFF

4 cups raspberries

1 cup vinegar

Soak raspberries in vinegar for four days, then strain. Measure the juice, and add an equal amount of sugar. Bring juice and sugar to a boil, then cook on the stove for five to 20 minutes.

Bottle, then store in a cool place. Makes an excellent and versatile sauce--perfect for ice cream!

Note: This recipe can be measured in quarts instead of cups, as long as there are four parts raspberries to one part vinegar.

Every month, a draw will be held, with one of our Gloucester Gourmets for that month winning a cake from Jamieson's Save-Easy in the Place Bathurst Mall. To enter, simply submit a recipe along with your name and telephone number and The Northern Light will make arrangements to get you into the Gloucester Gourmet column for your chance to win! Our winner for the month of August is Tina White.

The difference between the flu and influenza

Think Prevention!

A column on preventive health, written by members of the Dept. of Public Health.

September has arrived once again and with the upcoming fall and winter season many people will be experiencing the flu or influenza.

A distinction should be made between influenza and the common cold. Influenza is more severe than a cold and has a likelihood of causing complications such as pneumonia which can be fatal, particularly in elderly persons.

Influenza is caused by a virus for which antibiotics are not useful. Symptoms include fever, aches and pains, runny nose, cough and tiredness which last from five to seven days. if symptoms persist or get worse, you should see your doctor.

When you have the flu, you should rest in bed, drink plenty of fluids and only take medications that are recommended by your doctor.

The best way to protect oneself from the influenza virus is to avoid contact with people who have the flu. Also, if you are aged 65 years or older, or if you suffer from a chronic disease such as diabetes, heart disease, cancer, lung diseases such as emphysema or asthma, being vaccinated every year against influenza is highly recommended.

A flu shot is also recommended for people residing in chronic care facilities, nursing homes as well as children suffering from chronic diseases such as cystic fibrosis or cancer. If your immune system is depressed or deficient, you should also consider getting vaccinated. Health care personnel capable of transmitting influenza to these high risk persons should also be vaccinated.

Vaccination is highly effective (between 70 to 90 per cent) and prevents complications or minimizes symptoms of the flu. Side effects are infrequent and not severe. If you think you should receive a flu shot you should contact your family physician.

For further information on the flu or any other public health concern you may have, feel free to contact me Dr. Annette Séguin, District Medical Health Officer, at 547-2062.

Strikes involve complex issues

Your Business

By DIANNE MALEY
Business Analyst
Thomson News Service

I woke up with a headache and an 8:30 a.m. appointment across town. I turned on the radio. Workers in Toronto had decided to strike the second-busiest transit system in North America.

Strikes seem to be the order of the day in Canada. Writing about them is difficult because the issues involved are so complex. Besides, issues differ from one strike to another.

Take the strike in the federal civil service, for example. Most civil servants have the right to strike. Yet the federal government can order tham back to work if it chooses. Is the right to strike a hollow one?

When I picked up my newspaper, I read that business is demanding that government do something. Business leaders say businesses already suffering from recession cannot tolerate any more disruptions. These intolerant business people make me nervous. Who's running this country, anyway? I am uncomfortable about business telling government to order people back to work.

TWO SIDES

There are two sides to the strike. Grain for export is not moving because federal inspectors are striking. This is serious and potentially damaging to the economy. Perhaps the grain inspectors should go back to work.

Then there is the issue of resentment. Resentment toward striking civil servants centres on their supposedly secure jobs and good pay. Why shouldn't they settle for no pay-raise this year, when so many people are out of work? The resentful forget that many of these people are relatively low-paid clerical workers who are struggling to get by.

Suppose the public service union wins and workers are given a raise? The government has already said if this happens it will lay people off. In the public service at least, collective bargaining would seem to be another hollow right.

Whatever the case, we certainly don't need more unemployed Canadians. The problem will not be easily solved, unless the government backs off from its intractable stance.

The on-again, off-again postal strike is another source of aggravation to business and the public. Postal workers want job security for themselves and for part-time workers. Sounds reasonable enough. As for the Toronto Commission workers, they want to stop the TTC from hiring new part-timers. They think the jobs should be full-time instead.

STRIFE HEALTHY

Are workers going against the tide? Perhaps. But I think somebody should. Maintaining a reasonable balance of power is in everyone's interest. Still, people who strike only for higher wages may have to endure hostile public opinion. The reality is, wages are falling in Canada and will continue to do so some time. Taxes, meanwhile, are rising.

People know that public service wages come from tax dollars. So to keep tax increases in check, they want to limit wage increases. It's as simple as that.

To legislate the public service back to work would be a mistake. Resentful workers are not productive ones. The government could raise wages and lay people off, as it said it would. Yet another round of layoffs would rekindle fear in the hearts of Canadians and possibly send the economy into another tailspin. Ottawa could let the strike drag on, hoping more and more people will cross the picket lines. Or it could sit down at the bargaining table and strike a new collective agreement.

Education is the key to future of mining industry

Education is the key to ensuring a profitable future for the mining industry.

That's the attitude taken by the Canadian Institute of Mining, Metallurgy and Petroleum (CIM). The 22nd annual mini-convention of the New Brunswick branch was held in Bathurst Sept. 6.

The theme of the convention, which consisted of technical sessions and a golf tournament, was What's In The Future For The Mining Industry Of New Brunswick.

The keynote speaker was Bob Stairs of Bathurst, president of the New Brunswick Prospectors and Developers Association.

In his speech, delivered Sept. 6 at Danny's Inn and Conference Centre, Mr. Stairs indicated the future of the province's mining industry will be a difficult one, "but still promising."

Part of the problem is the lack of education focused on mining.

"The universities are dropping geological courses, and that's very dangerous for our industry," Mr. Stairs said in an interview.

The province's mining industry is an innovative one, he said, but, "without the youth, we're in dire straits."

OPEN PIT

Recently, the industry has seen the introduction of on-site milling of outside materials at Heath Steele Mines near Newcastle, a first for New Brunswick. It has also discovered the value of open-pit mining, which Mr. Stairs said is the least expensive method the industry has at its disposal.

"(It) allowed the re-opening of Heath Steele Mines," he said.

Mineral discoveries continue to occur, and the peat moss industry is making strides as well, Mr. Stairs added.

In addition, "mining means high wages; it's very secure."

Amid all this, the industry continues to suffer a poor image, and lack of education is to blame.

The CIM is taking the matter into its own hands by focusing on the need for education.

National president Bill Stanley, originally from Bathurst but now based in Vancouver, B.C., is chairman of the Careers Task Force, which hopes to attract new blood to the industry.

It is doing this by attempting to reverse the public perception that the mining industry is still in "the dark ages."

"We're trying to show that it's a high-tech industry," Mr. Stanley told The Northern Light.

EDUCATION

The goal of the task force is to help educate the public, the government, and school teachers who Mr. Stanley feels should do more to instill enthusiasm in their students.

"Four out of five Grade 8 students would rather not take another science course," he said.

"There's no enthusiasm, and in Canada we've allowed that to slip by."

"Today, Canada needs 100 mining engineers per year; we're graduating 64."

He noted the problem is not unique to Canada; the mining industry in the United Kingdom, Australia and South Africa has similar concerns.

Merely piquing a student's interest is not enough, however.

"Summer jobs are important," Mr. Stanley said.

"Once we get a student interested, we want to make sure he or she gets a summer job."

The Careers Task Force was formed a year ago, with the involvement of various associations and educational institutions.

Mr. Sanley noted Minister of State for Mines Edmond Blanchard endorsed the program in a brief opening address at the CIM.

A final report on the work the Task Force has done is expected later this month, Mr. Stanley said, adding, "We still have a long way to go, but I'm confident."

Reg Arseneau Fund hits $6,000 mark

About $6,000 has been raised so far for the Reginald Arseneau Fund, and plenty of activities are planned to raise more.

Mr. Arseneau is a victim of retinitis pigmentosa, an eye affliction that took away his sight 13 years ago.

On Nov. 4, he will become the first Canadian to undergo experimental microsurgery treatment that has been in use at the Siara Garcia clinic in Cuba for the past several years.

"He could get back up to seventy per cent of his sight," said Joe Comeau, publicist for the trust fund established to help pay the costs the treatment will incur.

The objective is to raise $20,000, close to $6,000 of which has already been collected. The campaign is being sponsored by the National Bank, and Air Nova.

Among the events to be held in conjunction with the campaign is a walkathon, from Petit Rocher to Beresford, Sept. 29.

The procession is slated to leave the Petit Rocher municipal building at 1 p.m. Registration will take place between noon and 12:30 p.m.

Mr. Comeau noted pledge sheets are available at the municipal buildings in Beresford, Nigadoo, Petit Rocher and Pointe Verte.

Participants will be given chances to win a trip for two to Montreal, courtesy of Air Nova.

Also, Mr. Comeau said Serge Savard, general manager of the Montreal Canadiens hockey team, has offered two tickets to attend a Canadiens game.

Other upcoming activities include special collections at the Petit Rocher Catholic church, and a letter-writing campaign to area businesses, clubs and organizations.

Donations can be made through the Petit Rocher Credit Union, account No. 10696, or by mailing funds to the Reginald Arseneau Fund, P.O. Box 504, Petit Rocher, N.B., E0B 2E0.

JANEVILLE BYPASS NEARS COMPLETION

The Bathurst-Janeville bypass is expected to be completed in about two weeks, according to a Department of Transportation spokesman. The 19 kilometre stretch runs between St.Mary's Avenue in East Bathurst and the Downshore community of Janeville, just before the Canobie Road turn. Hospital fundraising team named

The 13-member team of the Chaleur Regional Hospital Foundation's $2-million financial campaign is now in place.

"These individuals are well-known and well-respected throughout the region, are committed to the campaign, and each has an impressive record of volunteer and community service," campaign chairnan Roger Clinch said in a release.

Over the next month, the members will be recruiting more volunteers to help them begin canvassing.

The goal of the campaign is to raise $2-million, to be put toward the purchase of new hospital equipment, including the C.T. Scanner (CAT Scan) unit. The CAT Scan is designed to allow doctors to view the inside of the body, through sophisticated x-rays, without having to perform surgery.

The money must be raised under a provincial agreement, whereby hospitals must defray 10 per cent of the purchasing price of new equipment. The government pays the remainder of the cost.

The committee members have already been active for several months, recruiting more than 150 volunteers from the hospital staff, physicians, board members, and auxiliary personnel.

The committee consists of 10 divisions.

The Community division is co-chaired by Beresford mayor Real Boudreau, and former Lameque mayor Jean-Charles Chiasson. Their team, which includes representatives from Belledune to Lameque, is in charge of seeking funds from within the community.

Sandra Girard, a director with the Northern New Brunswick Real Estate Board, has her Clubs and Organizations team in place, and they have begun to canvass throughout the region.

Local businessman Bob DeGrace will lead the committee responsible for local and provincial businesses, while Al Buzas' National Corporations committee will pursue funding from the national corporations, including financial institutions. Mr. Buzas is a local businessman and a director of the Bathurst Chamber of Commerce.

Local businessman Jack DeHaitre is chairman of the committee for the Kick-Off and Special Events. He has been involved in organizing Hospitality Days festivities, and most recently, the Bay Breakfast, which raised more than $35,000 for the Chaleur Regional Hospital Foundation.

Bathurst High School principal Jack McKay is chairman of the Personal Gifts division; while chartered accountant Darrell Weare is the treasurer who monitors the campaign income and expenses.

Leopold Poirier is public relations director for Chaleur Regional Hospital, and serves the same function with the campaign.

Darren rejoins McColm

Blind diabetic Ken McColm has just taken a few days off his Incredible Journey, long enough to fetch his faithful companion, Darren.

Ken's pilot dog was also his walking companion when the cross-Canada trek to raise money for diabetes research began in St. John's, Nfld., last March. Ken, 30, is blind because of the disease.

However, Darren was left behind with Ken's parents in New Richmond, Que. the weekend of May 17, because the dog was having trouble keeping pace with Ken.

The journey took a brief pause Friday to allow Ken to return home and put Darren back on the fundraising trail, said a release from the Ontario Division of the Canadian Diabetes Association.

Today Wednesday, a press conference is scheduled at the Sick Kids' Hospital in Toronto, to welcome Darren back to the Incredible Journey, and to celebrate Ken's six months on the road.

By early last week, Ken had reached Orillia, Ont., where local dignitaries treated him to a breakfast reception.

Tomorrow Thursday, his tentative schedule has him in Bracebridge, followed by Parry Sound next Monday, and on to Sudbury by Sept. 29.

The Incredible Journey has raised more than $100,000 for diabetes research in Ontario alone, the release said.

National plowing event Sept. 25

The final plans are being worked out for the 38th Canadian Plowing Match and the 40th New Brunswick Provincial Plowing Match, slated for Bathurst Sept. 25 to 28.

"It's pretty much falling into place," said Murray Reid of Apohaqui, N.B.

Mr. Reid is the manager of the New Brunswick Plowmen's Association.

Competitions will be held on the Eddy Group land directly across from Ecole Secondaire Nepisiguit on St. Anne Street, and at the Eudiste Fathers field on Middle River Road.

The event is expected to attract plowmen from British Columbia, Alberta, Ontario, Quebec, Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick.

Mr. Reid said there are 18 plowmen eligible to take part: two senior competitors and one junior competitor from each of the six provinces.

Each competitor must plow one to three plots of land measuring 20 metres by 100 metres.

A Queen of the Furrow competition will also be held for any women interested in entering.

The competitions are being hosted by the New Brunswick Plowmen's Association, and are being held for the first time in Bathurst in close to 20 years.

Suzy Boguss ups the stakes and stacks the deck on Aces

Suzy Bogguss--Aces

Aces is an appropriate title for Suzy Bogguss' third album. The singer turns over a winning hand of 10 powerful, personal songs, all performed in crystalline, warmly assured voice that marks her as one of country music's most promising new artist.

By presenting a stacked deck of fresh and provocative material, the singer seeems more prepared than ever to up the stakes of her career and rake in the recognition that so many have suggested she deserves. When looking for songs, Suzy looks for material which will hit people emotionally, songs which reflects her own background or what's happening with her life. She won't do anything which seems contrived.

The direction of her third album came with the first two songs she decided upon: "Aces" written by Cheryl Wheeler and "Let Goodbye Hurt Like It Should" by new writer Ellen Crandell. Both songs find women courageously confronting their mates and wanting to force a change. In the title song, the women is fighting to save a relationship with honesty instead of surrender. In the latter, the woman musters the guts to say it's time for it to end.

VIVID SPIRIT

Although Bogguss focuses on serious songs, this doesn't mean an album filled with somber ballads and reflective lyrics. "Outbound Plane," the opening cut, lunches the album with a blast of rollicking, soaring energy. Written by Nanci Griffith and Tom Russell, it's about a woman deciding her relationship has broke down. Bogguss fires off the words with vivid spirit. Another longtime favorite included on the album is "Someday Soon," a melodic country-folk song written by Ian Tyson that Bogguss first heard performed by Judy Collins. It's about a young woman whose life grows more adventurous after she hooks up with a rodeo cowboy.

The striking, uptempo "Yellow River Road" is a co-writing collaboration between Bogguss and her husband, songwriter Doug Crider. The soulful, rhythmically forceful "Save Yourself," written by Beth Nielson Chapman, portrays a woman telling her troubled man to find strength within himself

From her debut album Somewhere Between in 1989, through her second, Moment Of Truth last year and now Aces, Suzy Bogguss has been genuine, there's nothing bogus about this country singer.

Until next week, keep whistling.

VIDEO REVIEW

Sleeping With The Enemy

In Hollywood there is what is known as a concept movie. That's when the powers that be take an idea, add a star with box office power, and build a movie from there — as opposed to having an actual story to work with.

Sleeping With The Enemy has that same empty quality, even though the film is based on a book. Julia Roberts (Pretty Woman) is an abused wife who fakes her own death and starts a new life. Hubby eventually figures a things out and is soon hot on her trail.

This could have been a suspenseful drama, taut with tension. It also might have been a stinging indictment of domestic violence, but Sleeping With The Enemy is neither. Instead, it is a star vehicle for Roberts, a showcase for her considerable charm.

The movie has little else to offer for discriminating tastes. The relationship between Roberts' character and her husband is not fleshed out; in fact the story overall rings hollow and often lacks credibility (there are just too many coincidences). Initially, the story looks like its going to ignite, especially during a stormy night scene involving a boat at sea. Things quickly fall apart however, and the remainder of Sleeping With The Enemy is disappointing at best.

Home Alone

Hard to believe, but Home Alone has become one of the biggest movies of all time. Hard to believe because it is such a simple tale: a small boy (Macaulay Culkin, from Jacob's Ladder) is inadvertently left behind at home when his family goes on an overseas Christmas holiday. Fending for himself, he learns responsibility and in the process fights off two bumbling burglars.

Perhaps that simplicity accounts for the movie's widespread appeal. Whatever the case, Home Alone is a good family picture and is also genuinely funny, especially the last 20 minutes or so when the two thieves finally gain entry to the house. The action rivals a prime Road Runner cartoon, and the humor is helped by fine performances from Daniel Stern (City Slickers) and Joe Pesci (Goodfellas) as the burglars.

Many Cooks don't spoil the broth

Rock Lines
By GREG MULOCK
Managing Editor

Too Many Cooks--Food Fight

Contrary to what some anglos might believe, the Quebec music scene has more to offer than Mitsou. April Wine, Corey Hart, and Men Without Hats all emerged from La Belle Province, which has now spawned Too Many Cooks.

Comprised of singer Richard D'Anjou and guitarist-keyboardist Dan Georgesco, Too Many Cooks are receiving airplay locally and on MuchMusic with "Refuse To Die," a defiant rocker that is among the high points on Food Fight (Some area music fans recently saw Too Many Cooks perform in Halifax with Rod Stewart.)

Food Fight is the duo's first release on a major label, and is the proverbally promising debut. Too Many Cooks and producer Neil O'Connor have achieved a "live" feel in the studio which helps energize the material.

The overall sound is commercial pop rock but don't expect predictable Bryan Adams-type fare: Too Many Cooks know how to rock with an unpredictable edge that is reflected in the diversity of the songs. "Rita" is a wonderfully catchy pop number, while "Jesus" pumps out a soulful hard rock beat and "Mad" is a punky romp.

Too Many Cooks like to flaunt a sense of funk on tracks like "Kiss My Love," but come up short when they do in comparison to the rest of Food Fight. It's not because they don't know how to work a funk groove (they do), but rather, that's when they sound like numerous other acts trying to make it on the charts.

Overall though, there's no rock and roll broth spoiled here.

City wins appeal in negligence case

A claim against the city of Bathurst, by a family whose home burned down, has been dismissed by the Court of Appeal.

A Court of Queen's Bench decision had awarded $55,000 to Lawrence and Esther Hachey, following a ruling that an emergency dispatcher had been negligent in responding to an emergency call placed by the couple's daughter.

The city appealed that decision, and the claim was dismissed in a Sept. 13 ruling from the Court of Appeal, a copy of which was obtained by The Northern Light.

The Hachey family had sought damages from the city, as a result of an incident that occurred May 1, 1989.

A grease fire had started in the kitchen of the Hachey home while Mrs. Hachey was cooking.

Mrs. Hachey sent her 17-year-old daughter, Debbie, to a telephone in a neighbouring church to call the Bathurst Fire Department. Having dialled 911, she spoke to Jacynthe Duguay, supervisor for 911 emergency services for the Bathurst area.

The address of the Hachey home is 2111 Sunset Dr., on what is also known locally as the North Teteagouche Road, the court ruling noted.

The home, which was completely lost in the fire, was approximately one kilometre within the city boundaries and a three minute drive from the Bathurst Fire Department station on Vanier Boulevard.

It was obvious to Ms. Duguay from the beginning of the conversation that Debbie was distraught and confused, the ruling stated.

Debbie described her home as being located on the North Teteagouche Road past the hospital and two bridges, next to a church; she also identified the color of the house.

When Ms. Duguay asked for an address, Debbie gave a rural route number. Because Ms. Duguay was uncertain about the location of the house, she asked Debbie twice whether it was inside or outside the city limits.

Both times Debbie replied that the house was outside the city limits.

Although Debbie did not recall being asked by Ms. Duguay whether the house was within the city limits, Mr. Justice Alex Deschenes accepted Ms. Duguay's evidence. Another dispatcher, Alain Levesque, confirmed Ms. Duguay's evidence on this point.

According to the ruling, "the Court of Appeal found Jackie Duguay acted prudently in asking the question as to whether or not the Hachey home was inside or outside the city limits a second time. The court found the questions were clear and simple. It also found that Ms. Duguay did not have to make additional inquiries.

"It therefore found that Ms. Duguay did not breach her duty of care toward Mr. and Mrs. Hachey and there was no negligence on her part."

In addition to dismissing the claim, the Court of Appeal awarded court costs to the city, in the amount of $1,250, should the city request it from the Hachey family.

MAKING A POINT

Nepisiguit-Chaleur MLA Frank Branch (right) was joined by supporters at his King Avenue headquarters Monday, as he awaited the results of the vote. Mr. Branch was re-elected after 21 years as MLA, with a vote of 3,752. Bulletin boards and television sets placed in the headquarters kept him abreast of incoming results. See page three for additional election coverage. (Northern Light Photo)

Mersereau becomes city's first female MLA

By JIM COUTURE
Northern Light Staff

City councillor Marcelle Mersereau has become the first woman elected to represent Bathurst in the provincial Legislature.

A crowd of more than 100 party faithful were at Mrs. Mersereau's Bathurst Curling Club election night headquarters, to show their support for the city's new MLA.

Most thought another city councillor, Claire Wilt, would provide the biggest challenge, but the Progressive Conservative candidate finished third in the Bathurst riding. Mrs. Mersereau won with 3,831 votes, followed by Confederation of Regions candidate Laurie Robichaud, 1,091; Mrs. Wilt, 975; and New Democratic Party hopeful Colette Buttimer, 788.

In an interview following the official announcement, and in between congratulatory hugs from her supporters, Mrs. Mersereau outlined her priorities.

"My priority is to get to work. The campaigning was a lot of fun, but now it's time to go to Fredericton, see where everything is, and start working," she said.

She attributed her victory to a vast group of hard-working supporters, and a wave of her hand signified that almost everyone at the headquarters that night had played a vital role in her winning campaign.

"There's no way you can do that by yourself," she said.

She plans on setting up a riding office in the city, and will complement it with a good network of people to enhance her accessibility.

"I want a good, strong home base," she said.

Mr. Robichaud felt that his strong showing has reinforced beliefs that the Confederation of Regions policies are needed in this city.

"It shows times are changing in Bathurst, and in a few years we should see a drastic change," he said. "There is definitely a need for our policies in Bathurst."

Mr. Robichaud, a St. Stephen resident, was brought in to take the party reins in this community because of its difficulty in fielding a candidate. The CoR party is against legislated bilingualism, and is viewed by some as anti-French.

LOST NOTHING

When asked how he felt about losing the race, the New Brunswick CoR Association president replied that he believed his party lost nothing.

"I don't see it as a loss. We came here with nothing. No money, no office...nothing," he said.

Although this marked his first try at a provincial seat, he will no doubt try again.

"The experience I gained was unbelievable. I'm ready for the next one."

Mrs. Wilt blamed her loss on the city's long history of voting Liberal.

"I guess the city just wants red, and just lives red," she said, although she emphasized she enjoyed the campaign tremendously.

She also found the experience enlightening in a few ways.

"The experience gave me a chance to find out what problems are faced by the people of Bathurst, and, as a councillor, there's a lot of things I'm going to bring up," she said.

Although Mrs. Wilt said she would start her campaign earlier the next time around — and she is adamant about giving provincial politics another try in four years time — she felt this was one of the quietest elections ever.

"The people didn't go out and vote. I feel half of the population of Bathurst doesn't care."

Provincially, Mrs. Wilt believes the Tories' relatively poor showing, in which they saw only three candidates elected, can be blamed on one party in particular.

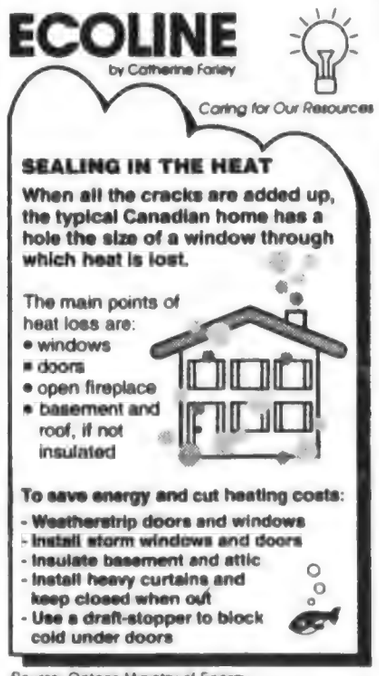
"I really felt (the Tories) were going to get more votes, but what happened was that CoR took a lot of votes away," she said.

However, she is rather proud that her campaign, as well as those of her opponents was kept clean, and she'd like to thank her family, friends and campaign staff for their support.

MORE DOOR TO DOOR

Mrs. Buttimer felt she should have begun her campaign earlier as well, as possibly do more door-to-door campaigning.

This marked her first taste of provincial politics, and it may not be her last.



"I really liked the experience. I'll probably do it again," she said.

She told of a few surprises in the vote.

"The votes were all split up between the PCs, NDP and CoR, and I was really surprised CoR got so many," she said.

Of 10,271 eligible voters, 7,184 cast their ballots in the Bathurst riding. That represents a 70.9 per cent voter turnout, compared to 76 per cent in 1987, when 7,973 of 10,442 eligible voters went to the polls.

There was an actual total of 8,015 ballots cast in Bathurst in the last provincial election, but some were spoiled.

Frank Branch makes it a quarter-century

By MICHAEL J. BOURGUIGNON
Northern Light Staff

Monday's provincial election handed the torch for Nepisiguit-Chaleur once again to Frank Branch.

"I've always enjoyed a great rapport with the people of the constituency," Mr. Branch said at his King Avenue headquarters, after receiving the results of Monday's provincial election.

Mr. Branch has represented the Nepisiguit-Chaleur riding for 21 years, and 3,752 voters decided Monday to help him make it an even quarter-century.

"I will continue to press concerns forward with every bit of vigor that I can muster," he said, adding he will concentrate on job creation and road improvements.

He believes in Premier Frank McKenna's record of job creation in New Brunswick, and would like to see that some of those jobs end up in this region.

"There are various interests in (Nepisiguit-Chaleur) and I want to see them go forward," he said.

Mr. Branch would not elaborate as to what projects he would pursue, saying he didn't want to "single them out before consulting my colleagues."

He did say that the election made him realize the importance of the language issue to local voters.

"I certainly learned a lesson with regard to this language business," he said, adding he would like to see a settlement to the question of availability of English courses at the Bathurst campus of the New Brunswick Community College.

He also did not want to speculate as to his chances of being appointed to another term as Speaker of the New Brunswick Legislature, or to a cabinet position.

"It's up to Mr. McKenna," he said. "He decides these things."

Second place went to New Democratic Party candidate Karen McCrea, who garnered 1,183 votes.

"I'm very pleased, but not as pleased as I would have been (had we won)," Mrs. McCrea told The Northern Light.

She referred to her placing as "a fantastic upswing," for the party, and is now "looking forward to the next time around."

"You'll definitely see my face and hear my voice again."

Her keen interest in the NDP will keep her working for the party, she said, although she would not commit to running in the next provincial election.

"Time will tell," adding her decision would depend on what other candidates might present themselves.

TIME AND FUNDING

Mrs. McCrea wishes she could have spent more time on her campaign, but her job as a nurse at Chaleur Regional Hospital prevented her from doing that.

She would also like to have had more funding for the party.

Still, she described her mood Monday evening as "all fired up and very excited. We came in a very good second."

There was much "shouting, screaming and whooping," among the local party faithful over provincial NDP leader Elizabeth Weir's win in the riding of Saint John South.

Less enthusiastic was Confederation of Regions candidate Laurie Daley, who finished third with 748 votes.

"I thought I would do better," he said, adding, "It's something that really puzzles me."

He was nevertheless enthusiastic about CoR's performance elsewhere. In Bathurst, party president Laurie Robichaud finished second behind Liberal candidate Marcelle Mersereau — even though he was a parachute candidate from St. Stephen. Elsewhere in the province, eight CoR MLAs were elected, propelling the CoR to official opposition status.

"For (a party) coming in here with no money or experience, I'm very pleased," he said.

He is optimistic the party's stance against legislated bilingualism, introduced by the Liberal government of Premier Frank McKenna, will not hinder CoR's effectiveness as the opposition.

"I think they (CoR and Liberals) are going to settle down to business once they get in the House."

As for himself, Mr. Daley plans to maintain his association with the party. He is unsure if we will run again.

Progressive Conservative candidate Bob Hornibrook appeared tired and emotional as he entered the PC Party headquarters on King Avenue following his defeat.

Mr. Hornibrook finished in last place, with 616 votes. It was his first attempt at politics.

Earlier in the evening, while at the returning office at the Golden Age Club in Allardville, Mr. Hornibrook offered his analysis of the Nepisiguit-Chaleur election.

"I had it figured...Principles and honesty are last in the minds of the electorate," he said.

Mr. Hornibrook said his own philosophy of life is taken from the Biblical book of Genesis: "I am above and not below; I am in front and not behind."

Commenting further, he added, "I'm happy with the results; we'll all pay for it equally. We've given them the mandate, and we're prepared to pay."

He said he would "most definitely" consider running again, although he feels "the PCs can't do anything without intensive fine-tuning."

No jobs lost by 'move' of govt. offices

The Department of Municipal Affairs has no plans to move its operations out of Bathurst — at least not exactly.

"It's not really a move," Local Government Administration director Michel Gauvin said in an interview from his Fredericton office.

For the past few years, the workload at the Bathurst offices has been far greater than in other provincial locations. The Department of Municipal Affairs has therefore decided to open a new office in the Acadian Peninsula.

Mr. Gauvin said the Bathurst office currently serves 64 local service districts, 21 taxing authorities and 20 municipalities in Gloucester county — more than twice the average number handled by similar offices elsewhere.

"We had one large region, and we're just dividing it in too," he explained.

The office will be staffed by new employees hired through standard job competition practices, which means contrary to local rumors, no Bathurst jobs will be lost, Mr. Gauvin said.

The plan affects both the offices of Local Government Administration, and the Emergency Measures Office, as the Municipal Services Representatives also acts as EMO coordinator.

The Department of Municipal Affairs is currently shopping for office space around the Acadian Peninsula. No exact location has yet been pinpointed, nor has any timeframe been identified.

"We haven't progressed that far," Mr. Gauvin said, adding, "I'm hopeful (the office) will be opened by year-end."

A HUG FOR THE VICTOR IN NIGADOO-CHALUER

Albert Doucet (right) got a hug from his campaign manager, Paul Losier, after hearing the news that he had been elected MLA for Nigadoo-Chaleur. Mr. Doucet took the victory with 4,412 votes, well ahead of second-place NDP candidate Raoul Charest, who managed 1,540. See story page three.

District 41 School Board continues fight for extra bus

If Education Minister Shirley Dyson won't come to District 41, the French board of school trustees will go to her.

That was the message delivered during Tuesday's regular monthly meeting of the Board in Beresford. The issue of concern is the need for another school bus and driver, to help alleviate the stress to its busing schedule caused by the implementation of the public kindergarten program.

The school board's request has been turned down twice since April, but the trustees firmly believe the items are of the utmost urgency if students — especially the ones in kindergarten — are to be picked up at what trustees consider a decent hour of the morning.

The school board is requesting a driver and an 84-passenger bus. That, coupled with a transfer of another school bus from another route, would enable the district to keep virtually the same busing network as in previous years, despite the addition of the close to 300 kindergarten students.

"It'll enable us to provide a more efficient service," said district superintendent Romeo Cormier.

Some students now have to picked up as early as 7:30 a.m. in some areas of the district. While it's only 10 to 20 minutes earlier than the next earliest pickup, the trustees believe it is much too early, especially for the five-year-old kindergarten students.

"I think if the minister can't come, we should go to her," said chairman Claudette Duclos.

To compensate, the Education Department has offered to add an extra 100 kilometres to the district's busing route.

A preliminary report of the student population in the district was tabled during the meeting, with an increase of 260 students from September, 1990 to September 1991. However, that increase is directly related to the implementation of the kindergarten program, which accounted for 291 new students in the system.

Doucet wants riding to get fair share

With his hands securely on the reins of power in Nigadoo-Chaleur, newly-elected Liberal MLA Albert Doucet is ready to devote his time to the people of the region.

"My main priority is the development of the region, (in cooperation) with the people," Mr. Doucet told The Northern Light Monday, shortly after realizing he had the 1991 provincial election wrapped up for his riding.

About 20 of those people had been standing vigil at the Liberal headquarters in Nigadoo Monday evening, monitoring the results coming in from the various polling stations.

By the time he walked in, around 9 p.m., Mr. Doucet was already solidly ahead of New Democratic Party hopeful Raoul Charest, independent candidate Ulric DeGrace, and David Boudreau, the Progressive Conservative party's parachute candidate from Fredericton.

The final count had 4,732 for Mr. Doucet, 1,696 for Mr. Charest, 714 for Mr. DeGrace and 466 for Mr. Boudreau.

As he sets off for Fredericton, Mr. Doucet will begin to focus on the need to develop entrepreneurial opportunities for the people of his riding, making sure that Nigadoo-Chaleur gets its share of government business grants.

He will also keep close watch on the construction of the New Brunswick Electric Power Commission's thermal plant in Belledune, working to ensure that it is completed.

More importantly, he wants to see the coal-burning plant built by local hands.

NDP candidate Raoul Charest was pleased with his second-place standing, considering the lack of funding and organization the party had in Nigadoo-Chaleur.

"We're starting from scratch," he said, adding the party would have made a better showing if it had not also been for long-engrained voter habits.

"Within a couple of days, we're going to get an association going; and we will prove to the people of Nigadoo-Chaleur that there is something else," he said.

With the party machine firmly in place, Mr. Charest would consider running on the NDP ticket again.

Ulric DeGrace, one of only two candidates who ran independently in this year's election, was also pleased with Monday's results.

"I'm very satisfied," he told The Northern Light, adding he has learned enough from the experience to make him want to run again.

"As an independent, I think it went very well. I'll definitely be back next time around."

Despite placing third, Mr. DeGrace feels the results show support exists for independent candidates such as himself.

He noted this has been his first attempt at provincial politics, and his campaign lasted only two weeks.

However, in that time he was given the impression the Liberal and Progressive Conservative parties are not as strong with the voters as they once were.

"People are not satisfied with the recognized parties," he said.

He is not yet certain whether he will run again as an independent, but he does know he will put more time into campaigning.

"Two weeks wasn't enough."

Mr. Boudreau could not be reached for comment following the election results.

Easy win for Rayburn in Restigouche-East

An RCMP investigation did not hinder Liberal incumbent Rayburn Doucett when voters went to the polls Monday in Restigouche-East.

The 21-year veteran of the New Brunswick legislature won an easy re-election to represent the riding, with a total of 3,023 votes.

Mr. Doucett is currently under investigation by the RCMP, for business dealings while he served as chairman of the New Brunswick Electric Power Commission.

His nearest opponent was NDP candidate Walter Gauthier, who finished with 1,241 votes in second place. Splitting the remaining votes were Confederation of Regions candidate Norman Shea (383) and Progressive Conservative Richard Lapointe (295).

Mr. Doucett credited his campaign team for the victory, thanking constituents for a letter-writing campaign to newspapers that proved his popularity has not waned.

Hostility between Tories, PSAC won't end

Political Scene
By STEWART MacLEOD
Ottawa Bureau
Thomson News Service

With a return to the bargaining table, the logjam may have been broken between the government and the Public Service Alliance, but it would take an irresponsible optimist to predict an early end to hostilities.

See, we're not simply dealing with a working agreement here. We're actually into high-stake politics. And long before Treasury Board President Gilles Loiselle and Alliance President Daryl Bean agreed to resume talks, the atmosphere had reached poisonous levels.

While the Alliance may not qualify for any public relations awards for hte way it has been handling things, the government is turning out to be an even greater bungler when it comes to winning broad public support.

It's not every day that the Public Service Staff Relations Board accuses the federal government of bargaining in bad faith — a conclusion that caused Mr. Loiselle to be "a little surprised." If he was indeed surprised, he was about the only person in Ottawa to feel that way.

But what else was the board to conclude when the government had attached such remarkable preconditions to the negotiations — that the union agree there be absolutely no wage increase this year for its 155,000 members?

It's one thing to agree to this after exhaustive talks, it's quite another to make it a precondition. It certainly doesn't meet the criteria of the Public Service Staff Relations Act, which says government and union should "meet and commence to bargain in good faith, and make every reasonable effort to conclude a collective agreement."

CAN'T LOSE

Until the staff relations board came along with its criticism of the government's approach, there was little worry around hte cabinet table the public's reaction to the strike. The public service is not the most loved institution in the country, and taking the "fat cats" down a peg has always been a safe political sport.

And now that the Reform party is rolling through the West, with promises of trimming the bureaucracy to the bone, the Tories feel they have no choice but to follow a similar course. For many Conservative MPs, it's seen as a question of survival.

Since there are also sound economic arguments for cutting government spending and reducing the deficit, there were few perceived risks in bringing in a new policy of zero increases for public servants. In fact, it seemed so risk-free the government didn't even bother preparing basic groundwork.

Had it given passing thought to the public relations aspect, there would have been a minimum effort to create the impression of fairness.

Those raises of up to six per cent for management, and heads of Crown corporations, would surely not have preceded an announcement of a zero-per-cent increase for lower-paid workers.

Nor would the MPs have allowed themselves a 3.7-per-cent cost-of-living increase this year, not to mention that new $6,000 housing allowance.

Those things are simply not done before declaring that 155,000 public servants, whose average salary is just under $30,000, won't be getting any increase whatever this year.

STANDING FIRM

With the popularity of the Mulroney government at embarrassingly low levels — seven per cent on the Prairies at last report — and such strong support for reduced government spending, the Tory caucus had no trouble supporting back-to-work legislation, introducing it the moment Parliament resumed.

But some discomfort began developing shortly afterwards, particularly when the strike began affecting wheat shipments. There was also the publicity about the existing salaries of Alliance members. The perception of "fat-cat bureaucrats" was no longer so clear. The only stories politicians were reading in Ottawa — where the public service dominates daily life — wre about striking single mothers who couldn't afford day care. Then, the staff relations board handed down that accusation about bargaining in bad faith.

It was clearly time for damage-control. And so, with input from a variety of people, the two sides agreed to sit down and talk again. The preconditions, if any, seemed blurred by semantics. And the good faith, if any, remained to be seen.

But with the government apparently standing firm on a zero-percent increase this year, and the union leadership fighting for survival, we would be in for one bitter and protracted battle.

As if the relationship between government and its employees wasn't already strained enough...

Looking good

Another Liberal win in Bathurst is considered less than surprising by most political pundits, after decades of Liberal representation.

A Liberal win in the city is a foregone conclusion, more often than not, but Liberal candidate Marcelle Mersereau left nothing to chance. She went into the campaign fresh from fighting two candidates for the Liberal nomination, candidates that were backed by long-time party supporters and the party executive. (This victory made even sweeter for Mrs. Mersereau, since she collected more votes than her combined opposition).

On the campaign trail, the local Liberal Machine was conspicuously absent from her camp. Undaunted, Mrs. Mersereau campaigned vigorously, putting her signs everywhere and meeting with voters in every corner of the riding.

With this kind of determination and energy, Mrs. Mersereau will hopefully be a strong voice for Bathurst in the New Brunswick legislature. And, with her solid background in administration, odds are she will be up for a cabinet position in the wake of Aldea Landry's defeat in Shippagan-Les-Illes.

As for the other Bathurst candidates — Laurie Robichaud, Claire Wilt, and Colette Buttimer — they are not losers. Rather, they are partners in the democratic process.

Bastions held

The ridings of Nigadoo-Chaleur and Nepisiguit-Chaleur remained Liberal bastions in Monday's provincial election safely in the hands of newcomer Albert Doucet and incumbent Frank Branch respectively.

Mr. Doucet has plenty of political savvy from his years of working with the Liberal Party. This asset, combined with his considerable expertise in business, could see him considered for a senior position in Premier Frank McKenna's new cabinet. He's someone who knows how the game is played, and who knows how to get the job done — traits which will serve the people of his riding to good advantage.

As for incumbent Branch, his win was clearly expected. His is a Grit stronghold and there was little opposition—he was up against three inexperienced political foes. Whether the veteran politician remains Speaker of the House is not yet known, but it is believed that after 21 years, this will be his last term of office. If so, Mr. Branch should have his nose to the grindstone to leave his constituents a positive legacy of his years in power.

Store will be a loss for city seniors

Sept. 8

Dear Editor,

There is a problem in the heart of Bathurst which may develop into a problem for many of its citizens. Many of the citizens living in the area are seriously concerned about the development of the situation, and are wondering how they are going to be affected by this same development.

The situation is caused by the recent decision of an oil company, to end the use of their property, corner of King and St. George, by the Big Deal Food Store. The operator, Mr. Aurelle Frenette, has been given notice to vacate the premises without delay.

Now, Mr. Frenette has been operating this business for seventeen years: he founded it, and set up his food business in what used to be the workshop part of a gasoline service station. At first, the oil company supplied him with gasoline, and maintained a single pump and underground tank for him to sell their product.

When the tank and pump developed need of repair, the pump was removed and the sale of gasoline ceased. This was over eight years ago. Mr. Frenette continued the operation of his food outlet, which became ever more popular.

In this same time, there were several closures of similar food outlets in the downtown area. Dominion Stores changed its name and then closed; Kent's grocery department closed, being replaced by a furniture outlet — and now the building has been torn down and removed; White's business on Main Street, too, has closed, replaced by an ice cream parlor. Farther along King Avenue, Pitre's Grocery is no more.

The inhabitants of the city Downtown then, are left with only the Big Deal to supply them with foodstuffs — vegetables,, fruit, meat, fish, milk, and many other necessities. Those with cars (or close relatives with cars) have little problem — they can drive to any of the malls and enjoy a variety of groceries.

"But alas for the seniors, living in the many apartments of the downtown area; many of these people cannot afford a car, and even the hiring of a taxi strains their resources...What are they to do, if the Big Deal goes the way of Kent's?"

But alas for the seniors, living in the many apartments of the downtown area; many of these people cannot afford a car, and even the hiring of a taxi strains their resources. They must walk to the store, and return with a heavy bag weighing them down. What are they to do, if the Big Deal goes the way of Kent's?

Here is a case of a powerful, wealthy, company simply trying to rid itself of something which, apparently, it now finds to be a nuisance. Whatever its motives, it is in a position of power — it owns the property, and it wants to be free to dispose of it or use it as suits itself. It appears to be unaware of the hardship it is threatening; it has, so far, not indicated what it plans to do with it. And there appears that there is little it can do with it, given the present building, zoning, and town-planning bylaws.

Surely the city, as a whole, should take an interest in seeing that this business is not stamped out. The city council should investigate, and see that its citizens are protected.

More public support needed for Bathurst Civic Centre

Sept. 10

Dear Editor,

I am writing this letter to solicit the support of the people of the Bathurst region for the proposed Bathurst Civic Centre.

It appears we have finally reached agreement on the location for the project, and now it is time to put all the discussions over location behind us and get on with the task of arranging financing and actual construction.

Anyone who has spent time in "the old barn" on Union Street is sure to agree that a new centre is a necessity, if the Bathurst region is to grow and be the hub of Northeastern New Brunswick.

As an individual who has spent many hours in the old building over the past years, I must admit the old arena holds many fond memories for myself as well as numerous other individuals who have made use of the facility over its long lifetime. However, we cannot continue to grow as a region by simply remembering how it use to be; we must put forth the effort required to ensure that the Bathurst region has the facilities in place to meet the challenges the future will no doubt present.

One has only to take a short trip to our neighbouring city to the north (Campbellton) to see what can be realized by a community when the citizens get involved and make the effort required to obtain what they believe is a necessity for the future of their city.

In closing, I hope people of the region realize that a new civic centre will help improve the quality of life in the region, and I solicit your support for the project.

Tales of "unspeakable spud" and the vice-regal train

The Moving Finger Writes
Events from the archives of The Northern Light

70 YEARS AGO
September 1921

The potato crop is once more attracting attention and many farmers and others interested in the production of the "unspeakable spud" are inquiring after prices.

In this regard we are informed by Mayor J.B. Hachey that he is shipping potatoes now that the price ranges from $1.75 to $2 a barrel. Other shippers are also showing signs of activity and as the reports on the crops are favorable it is expected that the returns will be satisfactory.

60 YEARS AGO
September 1931

Splendid weather, large and enthusiastic crowds of citizens and exceptionally efficient arrangements greeted His Excellency, the Earl of Bessborough, Governor-General of Canada, as he made his first official visit here.

The vice-regal train rolled into the station promptly at 10 o'clock and when His Excellency alighted he was received by Mayor Connolly and the members of the Town Council with Sheriff Poirier and Hon. P.J. Veniot, M.P., as the representatives of the County.

An Aluminum Victory Campaign, such as has been in a number of other centres with most satisfactory results, will be held in Bathurst under the auspices of the Bathurst Red Cross.

The aim of the campaign is to raise as many useful aluminum utensils as possible and the material will be used in the furthering of Canada's war effort.

With aluminum considered one of the most valuable of metals in time of war, it is hoped every housewife will find it possible in some way, large or small, to promote a very important movement.

40 YEARS AGO

The application of Richard Godin for a public motor bus license to operate out of the Town of Bathurst was approved at a sitting of the New Brunswick Motor Carrier Board.

The approved route of the line will be from Bathurst on the main Campbellton-Bathurst highway, branching off at the Cross Roads (West Bathurst), going west to Dunlop Settlement, thence North to Robertville, thence east to Ste. Louise, thence to Ste Rosette, through Tremblay Settlement, thence through LaPlante and thence to Alcida, all in the Parish of Beresford, County of Gloucester and back over the same route to the Town of Bathurst.

30 YEARS AGO

The Bank of Nova Scotia has opened its first branch in Bathurst. It is located in temporary premises on King Avenue.

Appointed to manage the new branch is Allan E. Pilson.

Though in temporary premises for the time being, the new branch offers a complete range of business and personal banking services. Later the branch will move into a permanent location in the addition to the Gloucester Hotel.

20 YEARS AGO
September 1971

By the end of the month only two of the 19 bungalows originally built by Consolidated-Bathurst's forerunner near the local paper plant half a century ago will remain.

Nine have been removed to date, including seven during the past week, and an additional five will disappear before October is out.

Apparently the idea behind the whole thing in the first place was to make way for a multi-million dollar company expansion program, but no announcement in this regard is so far forthcoming.

10 YEARS AGO
September 1981

Construction on the new $45,600 municipal building in the village of Beresford is expected to be finished by the first of the year.

The new building which began in the early spring should see the outside finished by the end of October. At that time, paving of the lot will be done.

This municipal building will house the Beresford Fire Brigade with much improved facilities including a clubhouse for the firemen. Also included in the building will be a youth's recreation centre, village council offices, the mayor's office and municipal services' offices. Plans are also being made to house a new regional library in the basement of the new building by next fall.

National plowing event start today

It's full steam ahead for the 38th Canadian Plowing Championship, in Bathurst this week for the first time in close to 20 years.

The national competition, along with the 40th New Brunswick Provincial Plowing Match, are being held here today Wednesday until Saturday.

Plowing prowess will be demonstrated at the Eddy Group land directly across from Ecole Secondaire Nepisiguit on St. Anne Street, and at the Eudiste Fathers field on Middle River Road.

Plowers from British Columbia, Alberta, Ontario, Quebec, Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick have been invited to attend.

The competitions, hosted by the New Brunswick Plowmen's Association, will see the presentation of the Queen of the Furrow award, in which female plowers prove their plowing abilities in hopes of earning this year's coveted title.

The event marks a milestone for the city of Bathurst, as close to two decades have passed since it last hosted the competitions.

A Soil Conservation Field Day will be held in conjunction with the competitions, tomorrow Thursday.

The field day was initiated as a complementary event to broaden the scope of the plowing matches through other soil conservation tillage demonstrations, a release said.

The program is also to help increase soil conservation awareness.

Related activities will include conservation talks, a commercial implement display, field clinics for plow adjustments, and field demonstrations of conservation and minimum tillage equipment.

The Soil Conservation Field Day is being presented by the Canada/New Brunswick Soil Conservation Agreement in cooperation with the New Brunswick Soil and Crop Improvement Association and the land resources branch of the Department of Agriculture.

Inventor will test survival capsule launching system in Stonehaven

An Anse Bleu man should be a step closer to getting one of his inventions mass manufactured come Sunday.

Vincent Theriault will test the launching system for his survival capsule in Stonehaven from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m., and hopes to catch the eye of Canadian Coast Guard officials with the demonstration.

"This time I'm showing my launching system for offshore oil rigs," he said, during a telephone interview Tuesday.

His testing grounds will be located behind the C.L. Hornbrook and Sons meat shop in Stonehaven, and involves a 114-foot cliff leading to the water below.

He plans on running a 1,200-foot cable from the cliff — passing through the capsule — to the water, where it will be anchored about 300 feet from shore. He will then conduct three tests, with the first consisting of sending only the capsule down, the second with him in it, and the third with a group of people inside.

Called l'Esperanto, the fiberglass capsule is shaped like an egg and can be designed to accomodate five to 25 people at any one time. The prototype he'll be testing on Sunday holds 10 people, and is 11 feet long and five feet wide.

Mr. Theriault has numerous other inventions to his credit, but he believes this one to be his best to date.

The idea came to him following the 1982 Ocean Ranger oil rig disaster off the coast of Newfoundland, in which no one survived.

The capsule is designed especially for use on offshore oil rigs, which are anchored to the sea bottom in 12 places. Each of the 12 anchors are connected to the rig with more than 7,000 feet of steel cables and chains, to which the capsule would be attached.

The oil rig anchor cables are at a slight angle to the water, exactly like the scenario Mr. Theriault has planned for the Stonehaven cliffs this weekend.

Mr. Theriault said that whenever people have to be evacuated from a rig during a storm, the liferafts presently being used do not get them away from the rig, and the liferafts are then susceptible to being crushed by the falling rig, or thrown about by rough seas.

He said that his capsule gets the survivors away from the rig, and, once they hit the end of the cable, are then able to secure it to the capsule and anchor the craft safely to the sea floor.

Coast Guard officials paid Mr. Theriault a visit a few weeks ago and were said to be very impressed with his prototype. Following his demonstration, he hopes to get their permission to try it out on a real rig.

"I know it's the answer to the problem," he said confidently.

Museum Association to meet here starting Thurs.

The annual meeting of the Association Museums of New Brunswick will meet in Bathurst this week for the first time ever.

The group was invited by the Silver Jubilee Committee and is being hosted by the Bathurst Heritage Trust Commission, said a release.

The meeting opens Thursday afternoon with registration from 4 p.m. to 7 p.m. at the Atlantic Host.

A wine and cheese party at the historic home of Noreen Connolly will officially start the event with awards and special guests. The party is courtesy of Brunswick Mining and Smelting and during the evening, Miss Connolly will be presented with a heritage plaque denoting the orginal owner of her home, John Meahan, a shipbuilder back in 1840.

Later the same evening, a private auction at the historic St. George's Anglican Church Hall will see antiquities sold and a light lunch served. At this time, Rev. Claude Miller will be presented with a Heritage Plaque in recognition of more than 150 years of history and heritage of Bathurst and area.

The convention continues Friday from 9 a.m to 5 p.m. at the Atlantic Host, with guest lecturer Roxanne Fairweather. The theme of the conference is Cultural Trusteeship and topics of discussion will include volunteerism and what it means to the community; boards: how they operate, roles and responsibilities and types; recruiting for boards and methods of performance appraisals. The public is invited to attend with registration costing $45.

On Friday evening, the groups moves to Danny's Colonial House for the annual meeting of the AMNB, the presentation of awards and a banquet. Father Charles Picot will offer grace before the banquet and noted historian Father Charles Mersereau will be guest speaker, presenting a general history of Bathurst.

The banquet may be attended by non-members, if tickets are purchased at the registration Thursday afternoon (cost is $25).

The Bathurst Heritage Commission has organized special events for Saturday, to keep the registrants in Bathurst for an extra day. There will be a tour of a tour of Brunswick Mines at 7:30 a.m. with Lee Branch; a tour of the Daly Point Reserve at 8 a.m. with Ron and Mary Gauthier; a tour of the War Museum at 9 a.m., and a tour of Bathurst.

Retail consultant here next week as speaker

A noted retail consultant will be in Bathurst next week, for the Seventh Annual Business Improvement Areas of New Brunswick general meeting.

Do you remember 1966 as the Year of the Jets?

Silver Points
By SONIA-SIMARD CORMIER
News from 25 years ago.

Sept. 29, 1966

Local sports fans may well remember 1966 as the year the Jets brought the New Brunswick Intermediate "A" Baseball Championship to Bathurst.

Scoring five runs in the first three innings, the Bathurst Jets hung on to their edge throughout the game beating the Douglastown Combines 5-4. Winning pitcher was Phil Jensen, helped by Johnny Doucet in the third inning who in turn was relieved by Lulu Ouellette in the fifth.

Other team notables were Jeannot David, Joe Hachey and Ken Frenette.

If it was a good year for baseball, it was an even better year for business as demonstrated by a major expansion completed at Steeves Motors, Miramichi Ave. (now Brunswick Pontiac).

A new four-car showroom, new sales facilities and administrative offices were included in the renovations which also saw the installation of new modern equipment as well as improvements and paving of the grounds surrounding the building.

The investment was said to be "prompted by faith in the future of the Bathurst area" and judging by the new buildings, businesses and expansions we've witnessed since that time, I guess it's safe to say they weren't alone in their optimism.

Still, while businesses were moving towards the future, city streets were looking much like a scene from the television show Bonanza as the pistol-brandishing Libby's Rangers rode through our fair community. As the story goes, "they was hold up at Kent's Supermarket promotin' them there Libby's products." Well now; cowboys and beans, I can accept but these western dudes were even promoting canned spaghetti. Now that's not your usual campfire grub!

Keeping record straight on Short Fat Run

Sitting Back
With GREG WULOCK
Personal opinion from the managing editor

There is enough election talk elsewhere in this edition so I'll stay clear of politics. Besides, politics is often just an attempt by various parties to hornswoggle the general public.

Which is what I understand CKBC is trying to do again in relation to the Short Fat Guys One Mile Downhill Run. The annual charity event will be held in Bathurst Oct. 5, and in a commendable effort to drum up interest, the local AM station is again challenging a team from The Northern Light.

That is all well and good, as public support is needed to make the Short Fat Guys run a success (the event raised more than $5,500 here last year). However, the radio station's feeble attempt at portraying we here at the paper as less than manly is akin to questioning Dan Marino's prowess on the football field.

Furthermore, Peter Assaff and his cohorts have mighty short memories when it comes to recalling the outcome of last year's race. To put it in simple terms even they would understand, they lost — despite mainlining steroids, despite the handicaps given our team (I was wearing workboots; my two co-runners, Mike Bourguignon and Ken Comeau, consider it exercise when the TV remote control goes on the blink and they have to change channels manually).

The broadcast boys (who even tied themselves together to prevent anyone from getting lost along the route) finished so far behind The Northern Light, that we had to leave the comfort of The Wild Goose to come out and get our pictures taken with them.

Anyway, more on this next week.

NAME CHANGE

A regular feature of The Northern Light for years has been The Gloucester Gourmet column. As of this week, the Gourmet is no more.

In its place we present In The Kitchen. Local people will still be spotlighted with their favorite recipes, but we think the new heading better reflects the column's change of focus in recent months. At one time, it seemed anyone in the cooking column had to be well-known locally for culinary skills, and or had to be a woman. While not always the case, there was that perception about the column.

As everyone knows, all kinds of people cook, from the young executive who likes to whip up a tasty salad between business appointments, to the secretary who enjoys making a sumptuous lasagna on a cool fall evening, to the hard hat who has a special recipe for beef stew.

We hope the name In The Kitchen better reflects the broad range of local people we want to their secrets for cooking favorite foods.

MEDIA RECOGNIZED FOR SUPPORT OF RUN

Plaques of appreciation were presented last week to Radio Atlantic CKBC and The Northern Light newspaper, in recognition of support given the annual Short Fat Guys One Mile Downhill Run. The charity event benefits the Children's Wish Foundation, an organization which grants wishes to terminally ill children. Shown from left are Bob Sullivan, chairman of this year's Short Fat Guy run in Bathurst; Greg Mulock, managing editor of The Northern Light; Peter Assaff of CKBC; and Gerald (Doodles) Drysdale, honorary chairman of this year's run. Local man works with needy overseas

By MICHAEL J. BOURGUIGNON
Northern Light Staff

For the past six years, former Bathurst resident Claude Dimitroff has been making a difference in the lives of many.

The 35-year-old son of Nick and Therese Dimitroff of Bathurst has devoted those years to an organization called ATD Fourth World.

ATD (Aid to all Distresses) was founded in 1957 by Father Joseph Wresinski of France. Devoted to improving the condition of extremely poor families, Father Wresinski set up a shantytown close to Paris, where he worked with the 250 families who setled there.

Himself a product of poverty, Father Wresinski's first step was to replace a soup kitchen with a kindergarten and library.

"For him, knowledge is an important aspect of fighting poverty," Mr. Dimitroff said in a Sept. 19 interview, while vacationing in Bathurst for two weeks.

Very quickly, the movement attracted volunteers from all over the world. Today, it involves volunteers in 23 industrial and dveloping countries.

Mr. Dimitroff is one of those volunteers.

Most recently, he has been working in Brittany, seeking out poor families to whom he distributes books.

"Our number one aim is really the scholastic success of the poorest children," Mr. Dimitroff said.

"We often go out with books and get children to love books, because it's one of the ways to get out of poverty."

Another approach that has been taken is to assist in the operation of family pre-schools in homes, where parents can play an active role in preparing their children for the rigors of school.

Mr. Dimitroff got involved because he himself has seen poverty close up.

When he left Bathurst 10 years ago, he moved to a less-than-affluent neighborhood in Quebec city. When ATD Fourth World held an information meeting in Montreal, his experience in that neighborhood prompted him to take it in.

ATD Fourth World allows volunteers to work in their own country, but Mr. Dimitroff decided to go abroad.

"You see misery more easily in other countries than in your own, because it's so much more flagrant."

"I couldn't really close my eyes to that."

RESEARCH

The organization has created a research institute devoted to the study of extreme poverty; and in June, opened what it calls a Fourth World University in Brussels. The university place the very poor and homeless alongside the more affluent, to promote the exchange of ideas.

"They share certain topics, and people who have had difficulties can then help other people," Mr. Dimitroff said, adding the exercise also serves to extinguish the feeling of isolation poverty often brings with it.

An ongoing attempt to allow the poor to offer input into social changes has led the organization to contact leaders of state, church and world organizations.

Before his death in 1988, Father Wresinski completed a report on means of fighting poverty. The Wresinski Report is currently being studied by world leaders, Mr. Dimitroff said.

Anyone wishing to get further information on the organization and its works can do so by writing to ATD Fourth World, 430 East St. Paul, Montreal, Quebec, H2Y 1H4; or by calling 514-845-1231.

"You see misery more easily in other countries than in your own, because it's so much more flagrant.
I couldn't really close my eyes to that."

Offering support to the poor has been the basis of Claude Dimitroff's overseas work with Aid to all Distresses (ATD) Fourth World. A former Bathurst resident, Mr. Dimitroff was here last week, visiting family and friends. He spoke to The Northern Light about his contribution to improving the lives of the impoverished.

Technical training offered

Well utilized duplicating equipment is used to produce much of the educational material used in schools in Belize, in Central America. But parts and service are difficult to obtain. In 1990, a Canadian organization, CODE, provided the funding for a duplicator repair workshop. Participants from all over the country learned how to disassemble, repair, clean and reassemble the machines, which provide desperately needed learning materials.

HEALTH A VITAL GIFT

LAUNDRY AND HOUSEKEEPING

When a person is admitted to the hospital he or she rarely feels euphoric about this hospital stay. But a hospital stay can be less traumatic when you know that a lot of people work behind the scene to make your stay a little more comfortable.

That is the role of the Housekeeping and Laundry Departments of Chaleur Regional Hospital.

The Housekeeping staff consider that they play an important role in the recovery of a patient. In a nutshell, their role is to ensure that the patient's environment is free of germs. They also have a role to play in the patient's safety, to make sure that patients don't injure themselves in their room, for example.

The Housekeeping Department includes 57 employees, with a manager and two assistants. This department works around the clock, year long. They have the general responsibility to keep the hospital clean.

But contrary to popular belief, Housekeeping is more complex than one could think. When Housekeeping staff cleans the floors, they don't just clean it. With a surface of 316, 500 square feet, it means a lot of work. The floors have to be disinfected every day with a germicide product, and a special procedure must be followed to ensure that the hospital is germ free.

This means that some areas of the hospital must have special attention. The Housekeeping staff must ensure that the Operating Rooms, the Laboratory, the Nursery, the Delivery Room, are germ free so the patient can be treated in a safe manner. The Housekeeping Department must ensure that the hospital has no risks or hazards for the patient, staff and visitors.

The Housekeeping department must also clean and disinfect the furniture and equipment in patients' rooms. For example, in 1990-91, over 12,000 discharged units (beds and rooms where patients have been discharged) were cleaned. It takes from 20 to 45 minutes to clean a room, depending if it is a private room or a ward. There must be coordination between the Patient Reception Department, Nursing and Housekeeping to be sure that a room is clean when a new patient is admitted. In the past year over 1,000 bassinette cleanings were done as well as 956 isolette cleanings. A total of 969 birthing room cleanings and desinfections were done during the year. The same thing must be done in Day Surgery after every operation. All the furniture in a patient's room must be cleaned when a patient is discharged or transferred to another unit.

In the Operating Room, cleaning is done between each operation. This means the furniture, the lights, the ceiling, the walls, and the floors. In the Nursery, Housekeeping staff clean the basinettes, and they also desinfect the entire environment after each delivery.

The Housekeeping department is also responsible for the annual spring cleaning for the hospital.

The department has to make sure that all material is stored adequately in order to prevent fire hazards.

Housekeeping is also responsible for garbage collection. In a hospital, different types of waste have to be identified in special colored bags. The garbage is brought by a contractor to the regional Landfill in Red Pine Station. The collection of regular or dangerous waste is done three times a day. Regular garbage would be found in garbage cans, for example, while dangerous waste includes blood, organic matter, contaminated syringes, etc.

There is no special prerequisite to work in the Housekeeping Department, as the staff hired for this department receives on-the-job training. They have to know about the universal precautions and of WHMIS program on hazardous waste. The staff must know how to protect the patients and how to protect themselves. They attend Continuing Education sessions when new procedures are put into effect.

Winter is a very busy period for Housekeeping. The Housekeeping employees are responsible for cleaning of the main entrances of the hospital. During the Winter season, with salt, snow and dirt, the stairs and the entrances must be cleaned more often.

The Housekeeping staff consider that they have a very important role to play. It is important for the patients, because a clean environment is part of the healing process. And the patients' safety is also very important. The Housekeeping staff have a direct contact with the patients, because sometimes they are the ones who stay longer in a patient room.

The major changes in the past 20 years are the qualifications required for the staff, and the new isolation method versus the universal precautions.

Maurice Chiasson, Housekeeping, Cleaning a room as part of the Grand Menage.

Diane Boudreau, Housekeeping, cleaning a treatment room.

The hospital must provide a clean environment for its patients, staff and visitors. It also has to provide clean linen for the hosptialized patients and uniforms for staff when their contract specifies that the institution must provide the uniforms, smocks and labcoats for the staff and physicians. In all, this means that the Laundry of Chaleur Regional Hospital washes 1 million 250 thousand pounds of linen every year.

In order to do so, the laundry has two washing machines with a 450 pounds capacity, one with a 135 pounds capacity and one with a 85 pounds capacity. Last February, the hospital had to purchase a new flat ironer to press and fold bedsheets.

There are always 40 to 50 carts in rotation. Carts are brought on the floors with clean linen, and carts with dirty linen are brought down to be washed in the laundry. Staff from the laundry go on the units to deliver the clean linen and bring down the dirty one. This procedure is done three or four times a day. Soiled linen and clothes are collected in the entire hospital, then brought to the laundry to be sorted, then washed.

The staff who sort the linen use the universal protection measures, with isolation gowns, masks, gloves and goggles in order to avoid contamination. Clothes and linen are always manipulated in the same manner, as there is no way for the staff to know if the linen and clothes are contaminated or not.

In order to be sure that all germs are killed during washing, special disinfectants, much more powerful than what you can find for household use, are used. The washing machines wash at a higher degree of temperature, varying from 90 to 170 degrees Farenheit.

In the past few years, the volume of linen processed by the laundry has increased. The patients' stay at the hospital is shorter, and linen must be changed and washed every time a patient leaves the hospital. The number of hospital employees has also increased in the past few years, and this means more work for the department. The addition of new services will also have an impact on the laundry department.

The increase in volume does not mean that new staff would have to be hired, however new equipment would be needed. The equipment in this field changes constantly and the job can be done easily and faster.

Two dressmakers work in the laundry, and there are two sewing machines. These two persons can do repairs, sew or make up a special piece of linen for a specific department.

The Laundry in a hospital is very important. If there was no clean linen, the hospital would certainly have to decrease its activity. If the linen is clean and soft, it can have a positive effect on patients' morale. And this is part of patient care.

BERESFORD FIRE ON SITE OF POLICE DIGGING

The BNPP regional police force are investigating a fire that occurred in Beresford early Saturday morning, on a property that had been the site of a recent police dig. A garage burned to the ground on the abandoned property, located next to Cable 2000 on Rue Principale. In June, BNPP and RCMP officers dug up a portion of the property, looking for the body of a young girl who had been missing for years. Although an investigation into Saturday's fire is underway, BNPP Chief Ed Huzulak said Monday it is not being given priority.

PSAC is back to work — for now

Local Public Service Alliance of Canada members were welcomed back to work last week, but union officials here feel the public sector strike is far from over.

"Our reaction was, 'Don't get too excited; we're not done yet,'" local strike coordinator Julien Pitre said Monday, referring to the enthusiastic response members received from management, when picket lines broke up Sept. 18 at 11 a.m.

"They had a big welcome committee; they were shaking hands and hugging," he said, adding, "We will hug when we have an agreement."

The PSAC, which represents public sector workers, began a national strike Sept. 9, to protest the federal government's plans to implement a wage freeze this year. The feds also want to restrict increases to no more than three per cent in 1992 and 1993.

The union agreed to remove picket lines in exchange for a decision by Ottawa to withdraw back-to-work legislation it tabled in the Commons Sept. 16.

But if the government does not show some flexibility in negotiations, workers may walk back out.

Mr. Pitre said there is no animosity now that the workers are back, although a conflict arose over management's plans to schedule weekend overtime hours.

Employees routinely work overtime, but not during a strike, Mr. Pitre said.

Union officials met with those who wanted to work the overtime, to explain that doing so would not help the union's position.

Meanwhile, workers have "a lot of catching up to do," and as a result, production has been slowed down in certain departments.

Because priority has been given to planning of re-training courses for the unemployed — a project for which government must spend $1.5 million by years end — such things as applications for unemployment insurance have been delayed.

"Some clients who saw counsellors six to eight weeks ago are still waiting (for benefits)," Mr. Pitre said.

KIDS CARE WEEK

Safety regulations are not enough

Children's toys and products are closely regulated, but often, it's not enough

It is estimated that a quarter of a million Canadian children are treated every year in the nation's hospitals, for injuries incurred in the home. Of those, about 1,000 cases are fatal.

"Even with all the regulations, we find children are still getting injured in the home," said Udo Mehner, a representative for Consumer and Corporate Affairs Canada in Moncton. Mr. Mehner was in Bathurst last week to publicize Kids Care Week, which is now underway.

Kids Care Week is a national event, set aside to sensitize the public about child safety issues. An annual affair, it is an initiative of Consumer and Corporate Affairs Canada.

The focus this year is on household safety, an issue of ongoing concern.

Mr. Mehner noted many families commonly store household chemicals within easy reach of children.

That is one of the issues he and members of the Bathurst Department of Health and Community Services touched on at information displays set up at a local shopping mall last Friday and Saturday.

Part of the display involved the presentation of Consumer and Corporate Affairs Canada's new information video, titled Home Safety With Radar.

"Even with all the regulations, we find children are still getting injured in the home."

If features life-size puppet versions of Kids Care's canine mascot Radar, and his space alien friends Binkley and Doinkle.

The purpose of the video is primarily to illustrate precautions to guard against home-related injuries among children.

In Bathurst last year, the Department of Health and Community Services observed the week by participating in the national Kids Care Safety Hunt. The Hunt saw the public drop off cribs, accordion-style baby gates, and walkers that do not meet current safety standards. The department also held a car-seat check, to verify the safety standards.

"This year, our focus isn't quite as specific as that," Mr. Mehner said.

Instead, the Home Safety With Radar video is being made available to branches of the Department of Health. Schools, daycare centres and hospitals are invited to take advantage of it.

"The way it's presented for children, it's captivating and gets the message through," said local public health nurse Monique LeBlanc, who, along with local nutritionist Louise Colette-Bois, took part in last weekend's information displays.

Mrs. Colette-Bois focused her display on food-related safety, Ms. LeBlanc said.

A display in conjunction with Kids Care Week was set up last weekend at the Bathurst Mall. Shown here are Udo Mehner of Moncton, products safety officer for Consumer and Corporate Affairs Canada; and Veronique Darveau, seven-year-old the daughter of Jean and Ghislaine Darveau of Beresford.

Arseneau's operation a first for Canadian

Blind person Reginald Arseneau of Petit Rocher is looking forward to becoming the first Canadian to undergo a new treatment that could help him regain his sight.

"If it's successful, it will be proof that the treatment is effective," Mr. Arseneau said at a Sept. 18 press conference in Nigadoo.

Mr. Arseneau lost his sight 13 years ago to retinitis pigmentosa, a disease that was first discovered during World War Two, and today may potentially affect 1 in 80 Canadians.

"One in eighty carries the gene (that causes retinitis pigmentosa), and if two people who have the gene have a baby, the bay can be infected," he said.

The purpose of the press conference was to officially acknowledge Air Nova and the National Bank, the two major sponsors of the Reginald Arseneau Fund. In attendance were representatives of both organizations, fund chairman Joe Comeau, Mr. Arseneau and his wife, Marie-Ange, and Mr. Arseneau's pilot dog, Lobo.

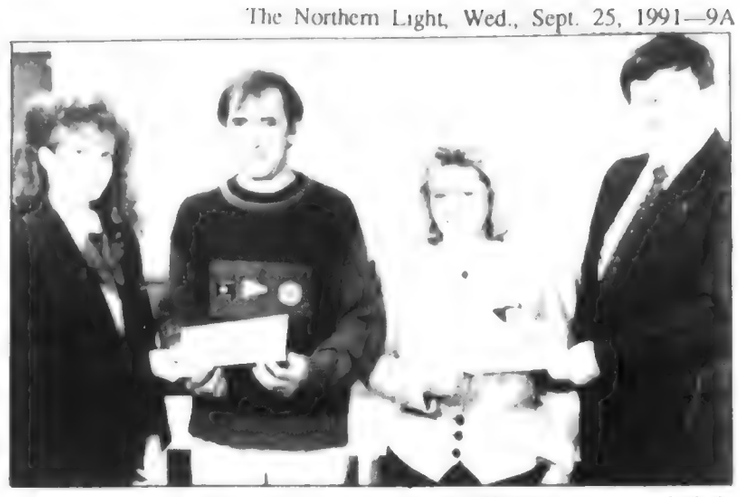
The fund has already raised about $5,000 to help defray the costs of the treatment, which will be administered in November at the Siera Garcia Clinic in Havana, Cuba.

Although the treatment is new, it is past the experimental phase, Mr. Arseneau noted. He said it has effectively stopped the progression of the disease in all of the 2,000 patients who have so far been treated.

"And the majority of them got back up to 80 per cent of their vision," Mr. Arseneau said, adding he will be satisfied if doctors can successfully stabilize the disease.

Naturally, he would be doubly pleased if he can regain even a portion of his sight.

He will know the answer soon enough.



"On November fifth, I should be on the operating table."

He said he is remaining both optimistic and realistic, but he hopes for success — not only for himself, but for the Siera Garcia Clinic that is developing the treatment.

He said doctors at the clinic have been trying to publicize the treatment in hopes of gaining development support from medical and government bodies.

Mr. Arseneau may very well become the first Canadian to successfully regain his sight with the treatment. The prospect doesn't scare him a bit.

"My wife and I discussed it. We said we're going to take the chance, we're going to go for it."

Sponsors of the Reginald Arseneau Fund officially announced their contribution to fundraising efforts at a Sept. 19 press conference. The fund was set up to defray the cost of treatment in Cuba Mr. Arseneau will undergo for retinitis pigmentosa, a disease that has left him blind. Prizes in relation to fundraising activties include a trip for two to Montreal from Air Nova, and $500 from the National Bank. Air Nova will also provide airfare for the couple as far as Montreal, when Mr. Arseneau heads to Cuba for the treatment in November. From left are Air Nova customer service agent Josée Desrosiers; Mr. Arseneau; his wife Marie-Ange; and Chanel Michaud, regional director of the National Bank.

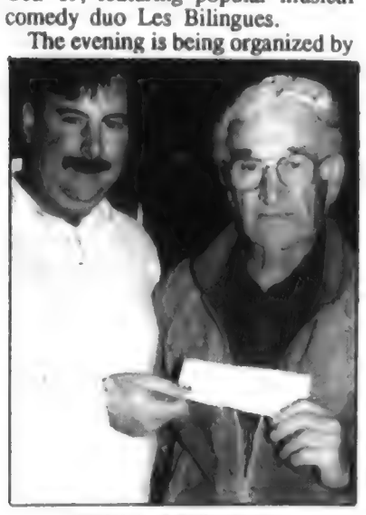
Goal of $15,000 is set

Organizers of the Reginald Arseneau fund hope to raise $15,000 through various upcoming activities.

The money will help pay for treatment that will be administered at the Siera Garcia Clinic in Havana, Cuba. The operation could help him regain a portion of his sight.

In order to raise the money, fund organizers have planned a dance and amateur night at the Beresford Sportek, Oct. 5.



Local musicians Roger Frenette and Roger Lanteigne will be among the guests.

The Robertville Recreation Centre will host an evening of entertainment Oct. 19, featuring popular musical comedy duo Les Bilingues.

The evening is being organized by Reginald Boudreau of Robertville, and the Robertville Leisure Committee.

The Petit Rocher Catholic Church will also take a special collection for the fund, while all area branches of the National Bank are accepting donations through account No. 10696.

Those who wish to donate may also do so by mailing funds to the Reginald Arseneau Fund, P.O. Box 504, Petit Rocher, N.B., E0B 2E0.

BAY MONIES

The Knights of Columbus Bathurst Council 1935 recently received $154 for the Chaleur Regional Foundation's Bay Breakfast '91, from the United Steel Workers of America Local 7085 at Brunswick Smelting in Belledune. The monies were the result of Local 7085's efforts to match the $154 raised during coffee breaks by smelter staff. Subsequently, a total of $308 was raised for the Bay Breakfast fund, and Local 7085 and staff are challenging those working at Brunswick Mines to match that amount. Shown here are Normand Savoie (left), representing Local 7085 and the staff who participated in the fundraising activity; and Willie Battah, Council 1935 financial secretary.

Consolidating pharmaceutical info

By BARB SWEET
Washington Bureau
Thomson News Service

A home intravenous treatment program could one day come to a pharmacy near you.

This is just one of the concepts the executive director of the 11,000-member Canadian Pharmaceutical Association (CPA) is taking home from an international conference held in Washington this week.

During a break in the meeting, involving pharmacy representatives from 90 nations, Leroy Fevang, who is based in Ottawa, said the United States and some other countries have a home intravenous program where the community pharmacist provides the service on a 24-hour basis.

He cited the case of a cancer patient in need of such sophisticated treatment: if the program were provided in Canada, the pharmacy service would not only allow patients to go home, but would also take pressure off the health care system by cutting down on costly hospital-stay bills.

Developing certain pharmaceutical standards in Canada, Fevang suggested, could help ease the movement of patients from hospitals back to the community, providing a savings to the health delivery system.

The program is just one area where "we could work with our American colleagues" to develop some joint standards, said Fevang, who has been CPA director for the past 14 years.

The home treatment concept might not find its way into Canada right away, but the idea is one of several Fevang has tucked away for consideration following the five-day International Pharmaceutical Federation World Congress.

INTERESTED

None of the countries attending the conference have yet developed a working model on a one-stop data system, for example, Fevang noted, but all are interested in improving their information systems.

Canada has one of the best, "if not the best", information systems in the world, he said, pointing to the blue book of drugs made available to every hospital, physician and pharmacy. It is also collecting the information on a computer search system.

Other ountries are working just as hard to consolidate pharmaceutical information, a process that has attracted Fevang's interest. Among the projects in the works are attempts to integrate the data base — to put the total dispensary, electronic ordering and patient drug information on one computer system. At the touch of a button, the health sector would have the complete picture. Currently, all three areas of information are on seperate data bases.

"I don't think it's available in any country, anywhere yet. We will go back and look at it — (to see) how far it is in Canada," Fevang said. Cost and practicality will have to be considered.

The global conference, which was attended by about 3,000 representatives, allowed each country to see what is going on in other nations — and see where there is opportunity for improvement back home. Fevang said he discovered several public education programs that have already been developed and implemented and could fit in with Canada's system.

He drew a case in point from the host country.

The United States still maintains a dual drug classification system, while most other countries have three classifications.

The U.S. relies on just two classes: prescription and over-the-counter (non-prescription-pharmacy).

In Canada, there is a third classification, pharmacy-only — an in-between class where certain drugs are available without a prescription, but must me obtained from the pharmacist. This allows control over their distribution, but also gives access to the public.

One U.S. Group, the National Consumers League, is concerned the public here has too much access to certain drugs that could be placed in this transition category.

Six out of 10 medications are purchased as over-the-counter drugs in the U.S. In the next three to four years, the Food and Drug Administration will consider switching 48 more prescription drugs to over-the-counter status.

Kovats returns to boxing

"My aim is to build the club up again, even if it takes two or three years."

There are openings for boxers at the Bathurst Amateur Boxing Club, but only those bent on training--and training hard--need apply.

Luckily for those up-and-coming young pugilists, gone are the ways of old in determining if a boxer had "the stuff" champions are made of, the days when a solid beating the first few nights out to the gym was the yardstick in determining a boxer's desire.

"If they came back, they usually turned out to be good boxers," said Nick Kovats, who has returned to coach the club after a seven-year hiatus.

Although he admits the aforementioned practise is no longer acceptable in today's society, he does believe it helped determine which young men were serious about the sport, and which ones were not.

The 58 year-old Bathurst man said in a recent interview that if 10 per cent of all those coming out to the gym stay with the sport, he is happy. However, his three-pronged system for producing top-notch boxers, which he calls his "training, training and more training" system, usually results in a lower yield.

That system has proven successful for Kovats, who helped bring the city its share of boxing champions while at the club's helm from 1968 to 1984.

A list of the Bathurst boxers who've blossomed under his tutelage reads like the who's who in Bathurst's rich boxing history. Names like Fran Mallais, Mark Kelly, Pat O'Neil, Danny Cormier, the Chiasson brothers (Cletus, Gilbert and Billy), the Claveau siblings (Richard, Harley and Rosaire), Robert Duclos, Timmy Good, etc.

As head coach of the 1983 New Brunswick Canada Winter Games boxing team, Kovats saw three of his students win medals, as well as the two other New Brunswickers along for the trip.

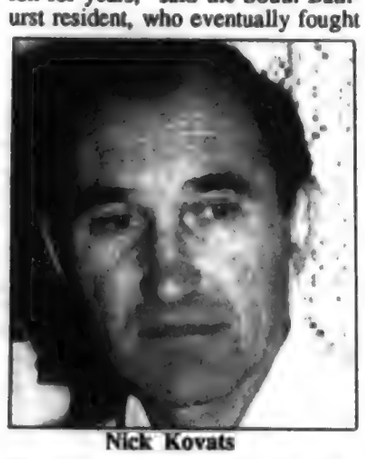
Fran Mallais, presently a member of Canada's national B team, earned gold at the Games, along with Mark Kelly. Winning a bronze medal was Richard Claveau.

"What was nice was we took five boys from New Brunswick, and they all came back with medals," Kovats said.

Later that year, Mallais and Kelly were taken on a Scandinavian tour with many other of Canada's elite, including current European Heavyweight champion Lennox Lewis.

The local pair then followed that up with a venture to the world championships that year, where Kelly earned himself a bronze medal.

A NATURAL



There are too many credits accumulated by Kovats' students to name here, however, one only has to look at Kovats' boxing career to figure out where he learned the tricks of the trade he's passed onto his students.

A native of Hungary, Kovats took up the sport in Sept., 1951, and little more than six months later was his country's Light-middleweight champion at the tender age of 18.

To trace his coaching roots, you'd have to go back to that time, when the club coach would put him in charge of the younger boxers, thereby picking up valuable techniques which would benefit others so much in the distant future.

He finished third in the Senior ranks after making the move up in 1953, losing his semi-final match to two-time Olympic champion, and eventual three-time champ, Laszlo Papp.

"He was the only boxer in Communist Hungary to be allowed to turn pro, and he was the European champion for years," said the South Bathurst resident, who eventually fought

Nick Kovats

98 amateur fights in his first four years.

In 1957 he landed in Moncton, where the first guy he sparred with was the Fighting Fisherman himself, Yvon Durelle. Durelle was in the process of training for his legendary Dec., 1958 bout with Archie Moore, for the Light-heavyweight championship of the world.

Kovats fought about 25 pro bouts while in this province, two of those in Bathurst, and retired from the ring in 1960 as the New Brunswick Light-middleweight champion. He also held the Maritime championship for about six months, losing it to world-ranked Blair Richardson of Cape Breton.

STARTING OVER

Brought on in 1984, when the club restructured and a difference of opinion marked the beginning of seven years away from the sport, his hiatus ended this past spring when he was reinstated by the New Brunswick Amateur Boxing Association.

He's now ready to finish his Level 3 coaching certification, and get back to work producing top calibre pugilists.

"My aim is to build the club up again, even if it takes two or three years," he said.

His first goal is to get as many active boxers as possible into the club, located behind city hall, and, along with trainers Bill Hudon and Fred Caissie, "show them better boxing skills."

Kovats insists that his boxers stick to a regular training schedule. His fighters have to be prepared to train--at the very least--three times a week, and be on time.

"That's the main thing. If I have training at 7 p.m., I want them there at 7 p.m.," Kovats said.

"But if he's a student, or he's working, that comes first."

He believes it takes from one to two years to bring out a fighter's talents, and they have to have a minimum of three to five fights a year to keep in fighting trim.

As of last week, there were 12 members in the Bathurst Amateur Boxing Club, training Mondays, Wednesdays and Thursdays from 7 to 9 p.m.

However, referring to the 90 per cent drop-out rate, he wants a lot more than a dozen in his stable.

"I want more boxers for the selection, because in a few weeks a lot of them will drop out."

Kovats has achieved a lot in the world of boxing, as have many of his pupils, but there is one goal yet to be attained, and he's dead set at achieving it.

"My goal is to get at least one kid in the Olympic Games," he said.

The Bathurst Amateur Boxing Club is open for another season, with Nick Kovats returning as head coach after a seven-year absence. Jeff Comeau, one of the first local athletes taking advantage of the club's facilities behind city hall this season, is shown working the heavy bag with the help of trainer (Wild) Bill Hudon.

BHS Phantoms still strong

The Bathurst High School Phantom girls AAA volleyball team has hit the long road that will hopefully take them to another provincial title.

The girls' team, coached by Don McKay and winners of the New Brunswick Interscolastic Athletic Association AAA volleyball title the last three years, has participated in two tournaments in as many weeks, winning one and making it to the semni-finals in the other.

This past weekend, the AAA girls' team participated in a 15-team invitational tournament in Kensington, P.E.I., where they bowed out in the semis.

The Phantoms finished first in their division by defeating Montague, P.E.I. (15-2 and 15-0), Clement Cormier of Bouctouche (15-2 and 15-0), Kinkora, P.E.I. (15-1 and 15-4), Westisle, P.E.I. (15-0 and 15-12), and Souris, P.E.I. (15-5 and 15-7).

BHS defeated Riverview 15-8 and 15-4 in the quarter-final, but lost its first match of the season in the semis, when it fell to Miramichi Valley High of Newcastle by scores of 17-15 and 15-11.

The weekend before last saw both the AAA and AA teams taking part in the Northern Conference Compulsory Tournament in Dalhousie.

While the AA team did not win a game, it improved throughout the day and came close on a couple of occasions.

The AAA team went undefeated in six matches to capture top honors.

The Phantoms defeated Roland Pepin High of Campbellton (15-3 and 15-5), La Rencontre of Neguac (15-9 and 15-4), W.A. Losier of Tracadie (15-1 and 15-7), Aux Quatres Vents of Dalhousie in the quarter-final (15-5 and 15-2), Ecole Secondaire Nepisiguit in the semi-final(15-0 and 15-4), and a very tired Miramichi Valley High squad in the final (15-6 and 15-2).

Members of the AAA team this year are Grade 12 players Vicki Cann, Kristine Hachey, Kim Lavigne, Terry Lavigne, Barb Murphy, Sara Ouellette, and Jennifer Sweet, and Grade 11 players Kate Arseneau, Angie Ball, Charleen Bourque, Andrea Burgoyne, and Sophie Thibeault.

Grade 11 members of the AA squad are Nancy Brown, Shauna Butler, Monique Colton, Leslie Hills, Lori Myers, and Lisa Young, while Grade 10 members include Vicki Brophy, Velma Cann, Natasha Carroll, Jamin Chamberlain, Tary Daley, Mary Jo Doucet, Lexie Farrell, Erica Fisher, Audra Knowles, and Natasha Roy.

Bad luck plagues Gastineau

On The Ropes

By "Wild" BILL HUDON

The North Shore is home of some of the greatest athlete's in the history of New Brunswick sport, most notably in hockey, curling, baseball and golfing.

But in boxing we had Norbert (Kid) Landry of Dalhousie, who fought in the mid-40's and early 50's. Landry was no stranger in Bathurst, fighting here a few times.

Landry fought to a draw in Bathurst on June 18, 1950 against highly-rated Eloi Durelle from Baie St. Anne, brother of Yvon Durelle. Landry also fought Billy Snowball of Chatham three times, twice in Bathurst.

Perhaps the toughest of those fights with Snowball was in Bathurst on Oct. 29, 1948, when he beat him in an eight-rounder. The second bout with Snowball was also fought in Bathurst, on Nov. 28, 1948, and it was called a draw. The third fight with Snowball was fought in Dalhousie on June 10, 1949, were they fought to a draw for the second time.

Landry passed away a few years back in his hometown. He had a record of 24 fights, and in 1948 he was the Lightweight champion of the North Shore.

GASTINEAU

Former football star Mark Gastineau better work hard at his new boxing career. A judge has awarded his ex-wife, Lize Gastineau, almost everything the couple owned.

To add insult to injury, a gentleman is suing the former New York Jets player for $8 million. Gene Galvin claims that Gastineau punched him at an Island Park, N.Y. restaurant.

I will stick my neck out a little and say that Mark had some problems in football, and today he has a few problems in boxing.

I could be wrong, but I say that Gastineau's boxing career could be short. However, let's put it this way: if they pick his opponents -which they will--he could very well have a good career.

Just last weekend, as I was checking my scrapbook, I came across an old picture of the Bathurst Amateur Boxing Club back in 1969, with most of the young guys hailing from East Bathurst. They included George Couture and his brother, Gerard, Byron MacLean, Robert Nowlan, and Danny Gallagher, just to name a few. Gallagher is the son of a great friend of mine, Oscar Gallagher.

"Wild" Bill Hudon is a member of the Canadian Boxing Hall of Fame and the Bathurst Sports Hall of Fame.

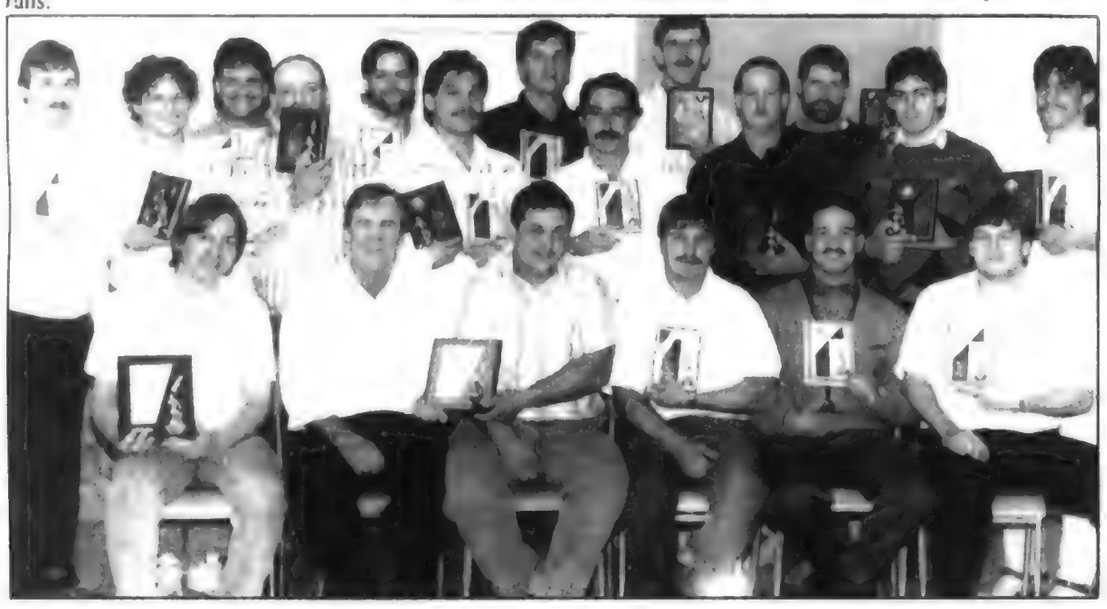
Guzzlers again Parkwood ball champs

The Wild Goose Guzzlers are the Parkwood Schooner-Pizza Delight Softball League champs for the second year in a row.

The Guzzlers finished off Brasserie O'St. Pierre Sunday to claim the title four games to one in the best-of-seven final.

After being tied 1-1, the Guzzlers took the lead they'd never relinquish on Sept. 16, winning 12-11. Glen Morrison was on the mound for the victory, with Paul Aucoin tagged with the loss.

Dan Ouellette stroked a home run and a single to pace the winner's attack, while Dave MacDonald led the losing side with a pair of home runs.



The Goose took a 3-1 series lead Sept. 17 with a 12-5 victory, thanks again to Glen Morrison's pitching arm. Pitcher Paul Aucoin was again on the losing end of things.

Dan Ouellette stroked a home run to power the way to the win, with Craig Crawford nailing a triple to lead Brasserie.

The clincher was played Sunday evening at Centennial Park field in Parkwood Heights, a 16-6 decision for the Guzzlers. Glen Morrison earned his third straight pitching victory in the contest, with Paul Aucoin going down to his third straight defeat.

Chris Burns led the winners offensively with a home run and a single, the same offence provided for Brasserie through Jackie Roy.

The season-ending banquet and awards night for the Parkwood loop is slated for this coming Saturday at the North Teteagouche Recreation Centre.

GOING DOWN

A 25-foot fishing boat, Atlas I, was recently sunk in the Atlas Park lake, to provide more adventure for local scuba diving enthusiasts. Sand was loaded into the vessel, which was then towed out to the centre of the lake, where more sand was dumped in until the vessel sank to the bottom. The Atlas Park Society, which runs the scuba diving, sport fishing and recreation facility, provided the boat, which is shown being submerged by member divers.

Countdown on for "Fat Guys Run"

Local businessman and all-around fun guy Gerald (Doodles) Drysdale is the honorary chairman for the Fourth Annual Short Fat Guys One Mile Downhill Run.

Slated for Oct. 5 beginning at 10 a.m., the event, which raised $5,598.75 last year, is organized to raise funds for the Children's Wish Foundation, a non-profit organization dedicated to granting requests from terminally-ill children.

There were almost 60 runners taking part last year. Organizers are hoping for more this year, although a monetery goal has not been set, according to chairman Bob Sullivan.

The route will remain the same as last year, starting on top of the Village Hill and ending at the Wild Goose Beverage Room. A hot dog stand will be at its normal place halfway down the hill, in case runners get hungry straining for the finish line.

Runners may pick up pledge sheets at the Wild Goose, Radio Atlantic CKBC, Doodles' Convenience Store, Cassidy's Beverages, the Labatt's office on St. Peter Avenue, and The Northern Light.

Honored with plaques recently for their help in promoting the run were The Northern Light and Radio Atlantic CKBC.

DON'T BE FOOLED

A recent news article regarding charges of fraud against a company going by the name of the Children's Wish Fund should not be confused with the New Brunswick Children's Wish Foundation.

The Children's Wish Fund, headquartered in California, was recently accused of remitting only one per cent of the $3 million it raised towards its stated cause.

The two are not the same organization.

The New Brunswick Children's Wish Foundation, a federally chartered charity, has its books open to public inspection and has never been accused of misappropriation of funds. More than 93 per cent of all money collected goes towards granting the last wishes of terminally ill children.

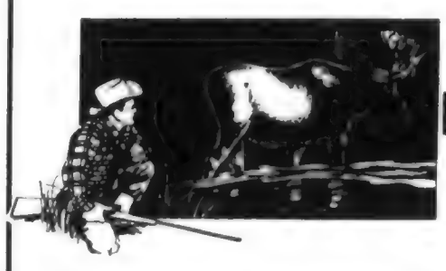
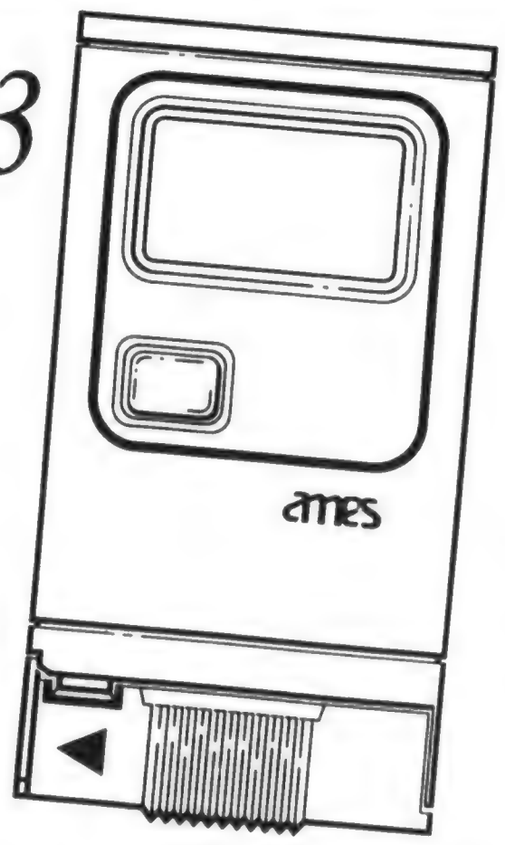
Capitols' Chiasson rolls 441

The Bathurst Capitols have successfully defended the City Challenge Trophy in their first try this year, thanks in part to Gordie Chiasson's heroics.



Chiasson rolled strings of 143, 148 and 150 Sunday, good for a Capitol Lanes record-tying 441 triple. Fellow team member David Legacy has the distinction of being the only other bowler to ever toss a 441 at the downtown bowling centre.



The Capitols edged the Bowlarama Challengers 1,857 to 1,764 in the first challenge of the new season. Other members of the winning team, along with their scores, include Ralph Vienneau, 127, 122 and 126 = 375; David Legacy, 98, 112 and 136 = 346; Pat McGinnis, 130, 115 and 123 = 368; and Lionel (Wabo) Pitre, 114, 119 and 94 = 327.

Replying for the Challengers were Mike Garrett, 102, 132 and 107 = 341; Roger Legacy, 123, 111 and 123 = 357; Cowan Glazier, 106, 94 and 125 = 325; Cleo Lavigne, 125, 120 and 122 = 367; and Gerald Pettigrew, 147, 115 and 112 = 374.

Pettigrew rolls 440

Bowling Update
By EDWARD CHAMBERLAIN

Gerald Petitgrew had a hot hand last Tuesday night in the Capitol Lanes Men's Money League, rolling a 440 triple.

A reminder that the Monthly Men's Money Tournament starts at 10 a.m. this coming Sunday at Capitol Lanes, with 40 bowlers accepted on a first come, first serve basis. Teams will be made up by way of averages. To register, drop in at Capitol Lanes and sign up, or call me at 548-4455.

Gerald Ricketts rolled his first 400 triple recently during Chaleur Mixed League action at Chaleur Family Lanes. He posted strings of 116, 151 and 133, for an even 400.

The top bowlers last Saturday morning in the youth bowling school at Chaleur Family Lanes were Patrick Godin, rolling a 58 in the five and younger division; Adam McGrath, with a 105 in the six to nine year-old class, and Denis Chamberlain, who tossed a 111 in the 10 to 13 year-old group.

Upcoming tournaments include the Monthly Mixed Money Tournament, scheduled for Oct. 6 and beginning at 10 a.m. To register call me at 548-4455.

On Oct. 19, the North Shore Blind Bowling Tournament will take place at Chaleur Family Lanes, with 14 teams expected from the North Shore area.

On the lookout for tough guys

Here's a chance for local tough guys to prove exactly how tough they really are.

The town of Newcastle will be the site of the first-ever All-Canadian Toughman Championships on Nov. 2.

Promoted by Sports Productions (N.B.), the event will be held at the Civic Arena, and will pit street fighters, martial arts experts, bouncers, football players, and ex-boxers against one another, with each vying for the title of Canada's toughest man.

All matches will be three rounds duration, and there will be two weight classes: Heavyweight, for those 180 pounds and over; and Lightweight, for those under 180 pounds.

Winners will pick up a hefty $5,000, with the runner-up receiving $2,500. All participants will be presented with a medal commemorating the event.

All combatants must be 19 years of age or older, and medical checks will be performed on each fighter the day of the contest. Only strong, healthy individuals will be allowed to participate.

This event will be reported Canada-wide, and promoters are working at having the whole event televised.

Information and entry forms can be obtained by writing to Sports Productions (N.B.), Box 297, R.R. #3, Rogersville, N.B., E0A-2T0, or by calling Armand Girard at 1-506-753-5128.

A list of rules will be sent out with the entry forms, and the deadline for applications is Oct. 15.

Dart meetings

The first general meetings of the year for both the Bathurst Men's and Bathurst Ladies' City Dart Leagues are scheduled for later this week.

The Bathurst Ladies City Dart League will hold its meeting this coming Tuesday, Oct. 1, at the Union Centre on King Avenue, also beginning at 7:30 p.m.

"I'm one of the guys, alright. But when it comes to rum, I'm my own man.

My rum is Bacardi.

Why? Because Bacardi is smooth the way no other rum is. It's full of flavour the way no other rum is. And it satisfies me the way no other rum does. And Bacardi rum does it for me whether I drink it straight, mixed or on the rocks. Bacardi. It's an original."

CLUB MEETINGS

CWL Saint Simon & Saint Jude

The September meeting of Saint Simon and Jude Catholic Women's League was presided by the president, Mrs. Bernadine Riordon.

In the absence of the spiritual convener, Mrs. Joey Whelton read a piece of scripture and reflexion from the book Daily Pathways.

In Annie Riordon's report for community life, she said she made several visits to people in the hospital and to shut-ins in homes, and also mailed get-well cards.

During the business session, it was noted an application was mailed for the Martina Foley Membership Bursary, but it was held up in the mail at the time of the meeting.

Joey Whelton accepted to be treasurer for the present. It is hoped that before the next meeting a spiritual convener will fill a vacancy left in that post.

The council will celebrate its 30th anniversary in October. Following a discussion as to what we could do to observe it, arrangements were made to have a special mass celebrated prior to the meeting.

The Diocesan president Joyce Thibodeau agreed to be guest at our next meeting.

Special prayers were said for Miss Helen Thibodeau as requested by the diocesan president in her letter of directives.

Arts and Culture

Sept. 16 was Local Artist Night at the Bathurst Sports Chalet. A small but enthusiastic group of artists, writers and musicians gathered to discuss the latest developments of our region's newest art society, The Chaleur Nepisiguit Association for Arts and Culture.

Musical entertainment was provided by Anna Sewell and Cyndy Olscamp, both accompanied by Gilles Olscamp on guitar. Lorenzo Grant presented a demonstration of his craft, sandblasting on glass.

The meeting was chaired by the president of the Chaleur Nepisiguit Association, Holly McLean, a local tole painter and art instructor. Mrs. McLean explained that the group came into being as a direct result of last year's government sectorial meetings and already has nearly forty members. It was also reported that $41 had been raised at previous meetings and about half of this amount spent on office supplies.

An appeal went out to members wishing to donate photo-copying, stamps, envelopes or such, that all donations are welcome, and a kind thank-you was extended to McDonald's who donated cups and stir sticks for the coffee break.

A major fundraiser in the form of an art auction will take place sometime in November. The actual date will be set so as not to conflict with the art and craft fairs which usually take place in Bathurst around this time of year. A limited number of tickets will be available from members.

Chaleur Nepisiguit Association for Art and Crafts is looking for a logo and a slogan and will be accepting submissions over the upcoming months.

It was pointed out that this is not a professional-only art society. Anyone interested is welcome to join. Priorities lie in the area of regional promotion and an eventual physical space for organized activities. So, all local Sunday artists drag out your easels, and your dancing shoes and tune up that old guitar.

One very interesting and important project proposed by the Chaleur Nepisiguit is the organization of a resource data bank of local artists, musicians, and crafts people.

This bank could then be drawn on by local service organizations, educational institutions and businesses. For the tourist industry alone, potential is tremendous. We do have the resources here, the full value of which is often not realized.

Artists often half jokingly refer to the "starving artist" as less of a profession than a state of mind. The fact is, there are many good solid career choices for an aspiring artist who is pointed in the right direction while still young enough to properly develop the necessary skills. The information is available. Often, however, it is not shared with the young people who need it most. Art is wonderful as a hobby but just imagine the richness our lives would be missing if it were not for the creative people who design our clothes and buildings and furniture and computer games, our cars, and even whole cities. Everyday objects and spaces need real artists to design them.

For reasons like this, art is to be encouraged.

Murder trial likely not until December

A December trial date could be set for murder suspect Alan Watt.

Watt, 44, faces two charges of second-degree murder in the June 16 stabbing deaths of Gary DeGrace and Diane Aubie, at the Sportsman tavern on Main Street.

A two-day preliminary hearing wrapped up Sept. 18, after testimony by about 15 witnesses, mostly members of the Bathurst City Police.

The purpose of a preliminary hearing is to determine whether enough evidence exists to proceed to trial. Details of testimony are protected from publication.

Crown Prosecutor George Chiasson said Monday early indications suggest an early December trial, although the exact date has not been set.

The date will be determined by the Court Clerk, based on available court dates, Mr. Chiasson said.

The trial will be in the Court of Queen's Bench, as it will take place before judge and jury.

Diabetes

VON In The 90's

By VERONICA RATCHFORD
Executive Director
of the Bathurst VON

Diabetes Mellitus is a chronic disorder resulting from a lack of insuling action. Insulin is produced in the pancreas and it is responsible for converting the sugar, in the food we eat, into energy.

Why do childrne develop diabetes? It is unknown at this point.

Diabetes is controlled by diet, insulin, and activity. These three must create a balance in order to maintain a normal level of sugar inthe blood stream.

Low blood sugar, insulin shock, hypoglycemia. All are different names for the same thing. The causes of low blood sugar usually are: not enough food due to a delayed or missed meal; more exercise than usual without an increase in food; too much insulin.

Some of the signs and symptoms of low blood sugar are: cold, clammy or sweaty skin; fatigue, headaches, irritability, hostility, poor behavior; blurred vision, dizziness, eventually fainting and unconsciousness; shakiness, lack of coordination.

Treatment for low blood sugar:
- 4 oz fruit juice
- 4 oz regular pop
- 2 tsp sugar
- candy or icing

If unsure whether the child is having a reaction, always give sugar and then contact the parents. If the child is unconscious, take the child to the nearest hospital.

When a diabetic child is ill, the blood sugar balance is likely to be upset. Blood sugar levels should be monitored frequently during this time.

If a student is diabetic and he or she becomes ill at school, the parents should be contacted immediately. If they cannot be reached, take the child to the hospital.

The VON Bathurst Branch has started a Child Adolescent Diabetic Clinic through a grant from the Izaac Walton Killam Foundation. It will be held every third Monday of the month, the next one being Oct. 21 at the Herman J. Good V.C. Branch No. Royal Canadian Legion from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Please call the VON office at 548-2448 to arrange an appointment. Next week I will inform you on high blood sugar.

According to experts, chocolate milk is an excellent source of calcium and other nutrients. Although it contains a small amount of caffeine and more sugar than plain milk, most health professionals agree that chocolate milk is more nutritious than many other beverages and highly preferable to not drinking milk.

Goldfinches everywhere

From my Window
A bird watcher's observations
By MARY GAUTHIER

American goldfinches are everywhere: in and on my feeders, in and on the birdbaths.

The males are losing their bright summer yellow and donning their olive-yellow colors. Their distinctive "me-eep" calls are heard all over the yard.

A black-capped chickadee was enjoying a feed of sunflowers seeds while we ate our Sunday dinner. He was sitting on the feeder I'd pigeon-proofed. (It's just a couple of feet from the window.)

I saw between 300 and 400 Canada geese Friday morning at Daly Point Reserve. Low tide and dusk are good times to see waterfowl feeding and flying.

Thirty people took part in the plant life walk at Daly Point this past Sunday. Thanks to Ron for his expertise. We passed at least 100 people who were out just for a walk, enjoying a perfect fall day — sunny and breezy.

Note: This Sunday at 2 p.m., Terry MacDonald will be leading a fall photography walk at the Daly Point Reserve. Bring your cameras, enjoy the fresh air and learn how to photograph nature.

First United to mark 50 year anniversary

The congregation of First United Church will celebrate 50 years of the amalgamation of St. Luke's United and Trinity United Churches this weekend.

It was in 1941, that the two United Churches, who had been worshipping separately for many years, decided to amalgamate and become known as First United Church, and to use St. Luke's Church, which is the present church building on St. Patrick Street.

On Saturday, the congregation will have a banquet at the Bathurst High School, to which former ministers have been invited, said a release.

On Sunday at 9:30 a.m. an intergenerational service will be held for families, followed by a celebration for youth at the Donald Eddy Memorial Hall. At 11 a.m. a service of celebration will be held with guest speaker Rev. Chalmers Hatcher, a former minister of the congregation.

An evening service will be held at 7 p.m. and the guest speaker will be Rev. Gordon MacBeth, who served the congregation from 1969 through 1972.

Special music will be by the senior, youth and men's choirs and the soloist at both services will be Eric Smith.

The public is cordially invited to attend any of these services.

Bourque-Melanson wed

Wedding vows were exchanged at Sacred Heart Cathedral on May 4, 1991 when Rev. Wilfred Benoit united in marriage Susan, daughter of Rheal and Phyllis Bourque and Eric, son of Franklin and Patricia Melanson.

Nuptial music was played by Helen Hachey on organ and Diane and Edward Calnan as vocalists.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor-length gown of white satin with Victorian neckline and Renaissance sleeves. The bodice was accented by alencon lace, re-embroidered with mother of pearl sequins and clusters of seed pearls. The hemline was scalloped and appliqued with alencon lace. The cathedral train was enhanced with alencon lace. Her fingertip veil of tulle was accented by a pouff with cascading seed pearls and silk stephanotis. She carried a bouquet of red and white sweetheart roses and baby's breath.

The groom wore a black tuxedo with red bowtie and cummerbund. His boutonniere was a white carnation with red rosebud.

Carlyn Mixon, sister of the bride, was maitron of honor and wore a red satin with scalloped lace overlay cocktail-length dress, and carried a bouquet of red carnations and white mums and baby's breath. The bridesmaids were Edith Stever, Paul Aubie-Roy, Martha Mazerolle. They wore dresses matching the maitron of honor and similar bouquets.

Flower girl was Amy Landry, cousin of the bride. She wore a red dress with large bow at the back matching the maitron of honor. She carried a basket of white mums and red carnations.

The best man was Bernie Kenny and ushers were Roland Roy, Robert Mazerolle and Jason Melanson, brother of the groom. The ringbearer was Ryan Shaw, nephew of the groom. They all wore black tuxedos with red bow ties and cummerbunds and white carnations tipped with red.

The reception and dance was held at the Gowan Brae Golf and Country Club. The toast to the bride was given by Frederic Arsenault. Master of ceremonies was Don Arseneau who introduced the head table.

Grace was given by Shirley Shaw, sister of the groom. The couple left for a honeymoon to Florida. Out-of-town guests attended from California, Alberta, Nova Scotia, Quebec and Ontario.

Investigation continues into fatality

An investigation is continuing into the death of a Robertville woman, killed during a high speed police chase.

Cynthia Fraser, 24, died following a high-speed chase with BNPP regional police in the early morning hours of Sept. 15.

She was pronounced dead on arrival at Chaleur Regional Hospital, after her car flipped over several times and landed on a residential lawn in Petit Rocher.

According to BNPP Police Chief Ed Huzulak, the incident began about 1:30 a.m., when the victim, driving northbound in a compact car, passed a BNPP squad car in Beresford on a solid line.

The squad car gave chase, and was joined by another BNPP car that had been travelling in the opposite direction.

The victim lost control of her vehicle in Petit Rocher.

Multiple injuries were cited by Chief Huzulak as the cause of death.

A police report is being prepared for the coroner, who will decide if an inquest should be held. A copy of the report will also be sent to the New Brunswick Police Commission.

"There's a possibility we'll have an outside police department do the investigation, but we're not sure who," Chief Huzulak said, adding such action is standard procedure.

As for what speeds were attained in the chase, Chief Huzulak said they should be able to tell almost to the kilometre once the accident has been reconstructed.

"We'll know more after the investigation, but so far I'm satisfied with the way things were handled," he said, adding it will be at least two to three weeks before the results are known.

Looking at long-term objectives

Money Talk
By GARY LeROUX
Chartered Financial Planner

How much do you want or can you afford to put aside for your long-term objectives of education, retirement, extended travel, remodelling and so forth?

Do your current and projected budgets permit you to set aside for your long term objectives?

What are the trade offs to make between your current lifestyle and future objectives?

Before you answer such questions and prepare a projection for the next year, here are some general guidelines for people of varying ages.

IN YOUR THIRTIES

Take care of the four first: an annual income, normally secured by a job; a place to live; a reserve that can be used in an emergency; and low-cost life insurance — a source of future income for your dependents should you die.

The first two — an annual income and a place to live — have far-reaching implications for long-term financial planning. Income obviously is a big factor in providing sufficient resources for accumulating assets and establishing a comfortable standard of living

Resist the instant gratification craze and get in the habit of saving something for retirement. Consider starting an education fund if you have children. The cash reserve fund should be kept in liquid low-risk investments such as T-Bills or Canada Savings Bonds.

IN YOUR FORTIES

Control the increase in lifestyle expenditures. Look for investments, other than your personal residence, that the family can use and enjoy - a vacation property, a boat etc.

Concentrate on education funds and try to shift income to your children to pay for their education. Start a retirement program. Focus on growth and tax savings in selecting your investments. Examine your life insurance and increase the coverage if necessary. Look to take advantage of employer sponsored savings programs, which can offer tax savings and deferred income.

IN YOUR FIFTIES

The children are probably educated and on their own. You might be able to decrease your basic lifestyle expenditures at this stage. Concentrate on retirement planning and increasing your investment assets and retirement funds to make your retirement years golden. Pay off your mortgage. Concentrate your savings and investment dollars in instruments of moderate to low risk.

IN YOUR SIXTIES

Pare your basic lifestyle costs. Get those retirement activities lined up and going. Concentrate on being active and continue your zest for life. Get out of debt and manage your investment assets to stay even with inflation.

Get your estate in order and keep your financial affairs simple. Enjoy your retirement.

Consulting firm officially opens its doors in city industrial park

A new office is officially opening in the East Bathurst industrial park today Wednesday.

The Jacques Whitford Group, Consulting Engineers and Scientists, is opening an office and laboratory building for UNIC Consultants (1986) Ltd. on Riordon Drive in the Bathurst Regional Industrial Park.

The extra space provided by this new facility will enable UNIC to expand its soils and meterials testing services, said a release.

In addition, Gordon Sheppard, P. Eng., has transferred from Jacques Whitford's head office in Dartmouth, N.S. to be the Bathurst manager and become involved with geotechnical and mining engineering services.

Jacques Whitford has been active in northern New Brunswick since 1980, when it opened an office in Bathurst. In 1986, the company expanded its services through the purchase of UNIC Consultants Ltd., a local testing company.

Steady growth and the need for more laboratory space prompted the company to build and move into its own office and laboratory facility in the Bathurst Regional Industrial Park earlier this year, said the release.

The official opening will be celebrated today with a private reception and ribbon-cutting, followed by an open house for the community on Thursday, from 12 noon to 6 P.M.

The Jacques Whitford Group of Companies is based in Atlantic Canada and offers consulting services in geotechnical, mining, materials, and environmental engineering; environmental sciences; and planning.

Founded in 1972, Jacques Whitford now offers its clients the combined expertise of more than 300 professional and support staff in 14 offices from St. John's, Nfld., to Toronto, Ont.

Bathurst Junior Achievement Inc. has received four computers valued at approximatly $12,000 from the Chaleur Regional Development Commission. Shown demonstrating a new computer is Darrell Rooney (seated), JA advisor and a manager with Doane Raymond in Bathurst. Standing are Don Bishop (left), CRDC general manager; and Jim Billing of Toronto, Ont., manager of the after schools program for JA Canada. Mr. Billing is presently in the area to train JA advisors. Bathurst JA enters the age of computers

Bathurst Junior Achievement Inc. has received approximately $12,000 worth of computer equipment from the Chaleur Regional Development Commission.

"It's just one of the many projects that (CRDC manager) Don Bishop has taken interest in over our JA history," said a release from JA program manager Donna Eden.

The donation consists of four computers. Mr.Bishop acquired the computer system in early June through the Atlantic Canada Opportunities Agency.

JA is a program supported by local businesses to teach high school students the complexities of business and of the free enterprise system.

The idea of having the new computer system is to improve the effectiveness of JA officers in making decisions.

"Having the automated version of the company program has many advantages," said in the release.

The system enables JA company presidents to ask "what if" when completing their products' pricing and break even point. It also records names and addresses of shareholders, audits company records, tracks hours worked by all company members, monitors the inventory of products, and records purchases of material, among other fuctions.

Students from the Bathurst High School and Ecole Secondaire Nepisiguit will make use of this technology offered by J.A. when the 1991-92 program begins in mid-October.

Students from BHS and ESN interested in taking part of JA are asked to phone the local JA office at 548-3700.

NBTel change

New switching equipment is being installed by NBTel which will affect calling in the 783 Petit Rocher exchange.

Beginning on Saturday, this conversion to digital equipment will mean that customers in the 783 exchange will be required to dial all seven digits when calling within their exchange.

Customers may also notice slight differences in dial tones and ringing patterns and faster connections when placing calls, said a release.

In addition, single-line customers in the 783 exchange will have access to custom calling features such as call waiting, call forwarding and three-way calling.

Camille Chenard, NBTel's Bathurst district manager, said the conversion to digital equipment is in keeping with NBTel's plans for expansion and modernization of telephone switching equipment throughout New Brunswick.

Housing starts up in Bathurst

Bathurst has seen a significant increase in urban housing starts during the first half of this year.

But the same cannot be said for a few other cities in New Brunswick, according to a release.

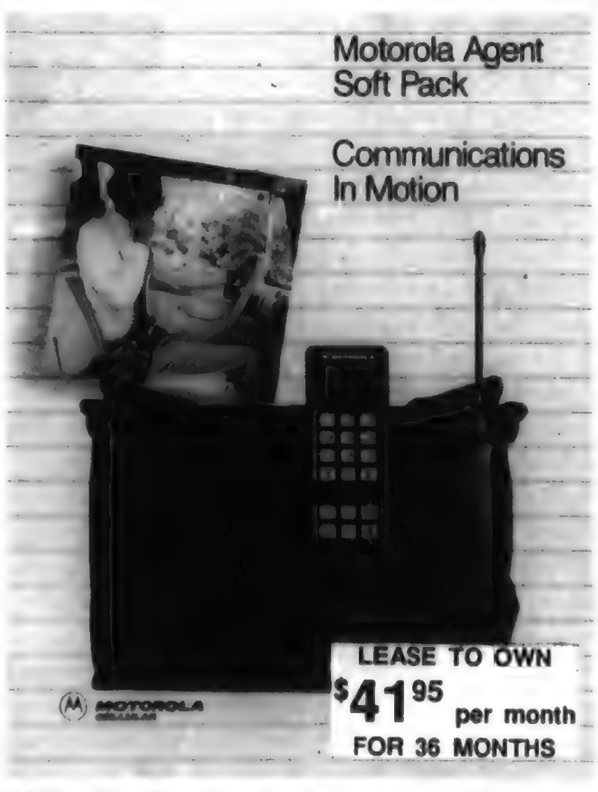
There were 105 housing starts in Bathurst from January to August this year, up from 88 during the same time last year, and a few reasons are given for the increase.

"Continued low mortgage rates and returning consumer confidence is at the heart of this improvement," according to Bruce Read, senior market analyst with Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation.

Most of the housing increase in Bathurst can be traced to August of this year, when 26 houses went up compared to only four in August, 1990.

Overall, there was a total of 998 urban housing starts in the six cities during the first half of this year, down from 1,086 during the same time last year.

Seeing declines were Saint John, 381 to 235; Moncton, 368 to 313; and Edmundston, 75 to 63.



Seeing increases, besides Bathurst, were Fredericton, 15 to 262; and Campbellton, 15 to 20.

Mr. Read feels the second half of the year will make up for the loss in the first half.

"Increased activity during this year's fall construction season will in part make up for the downturn experienced during the opening months of the year," Mr. Read said.

Bird blamed for power going out

A large portion of the city briefly went without electricity Sept. 18 — all because of a bird.

"What the bird did is he basically caused a short circuit," said Rheal Bourque, Bathurst district manager of the New Brunswick Electric Power Commission.

About 3,500 NB Power customers in downtown Bathurst, the Mines Road, East Bathurst, Janeville and Salmon Beach were affected by the shortage.

The power went off around 9:30 a.m., and stayed off for 16 to 18 minutes, Mr. Bourque said.

It was caused by a bird that had flown into NB Power's electric substation on Church Street. The substation is a fenced-in area that contains structures connected to insulators, which in turn are connected to transmission lines.

This system serves to convert electrical transmissions into the power that is distributed to customers.

"Perhaps (the bird's) wing tip touches the lines and the steel structure," Mr. Bourque suggested, adding, "He became the insulator."

The result was a short circuit that killed the bird instantly, but also activated the protection system that automatically shuts off the power to avoid further damage.

Power was quickly restored, and all was back to normal.

Although such occurrences are "very, very unlikely," they obviously can happen, Mr. Bourque noted. And very little can be done to prevent them.

"There's no way to keep birds out," he said, adding constructing a concrete building structure around the substation would not be practical.

Posts were stolen from Village of Petit Rocher

Crime Stoppers

Between June 6 and June 9 of this year, some unknown culprit(s) stole two steel posts, approximately 20 feet in length, belonging to the municipality of Petit Rocher.

These posts were used to hold the municipality's sign, approximately one kilometre south of the entrance to Petit Rocher. Value of the posts is $1,500.

On June 9, two males in a small dark blue pick-up were seen loading the posts into their vehicle.

Anyone with information regarding the identity of these two individuals in this matter is asked to please call Crime Stoppers at 1-800-222-8477.

You do not have to give your name and you may qualify for a cash award.

The public's assistance is also requested by Crime Stoppers regarding illegal moose hunting in the region. The Department of Natural Resources and Energy would like information leading to the arrest of the person or persons who are illegally hutning moose in the Allardville area by means of snares.

These neck or leg snares can be found in moose trails from as early as May to as late as December.

Roof lines and false fronts have impact

Art Talk
With Bathurst artist JEAN-FRANCES

Let's take a look at roofs, starting with the gable roof and "false front."

Materials required: shoe box, sharp knife (utility knife), pencil, heavy paper or light cardboard, glue.

Roofs serve the practical purpose of covering a building and its contents. They also have a great impact on the style of a building, and the impression that it makes on us, the viewer.

The roof line of a building defines and gives style to a building. Roofs can be curved, peaked or flat. The roof of a building can simply show where the building ends, or add to its decoration.

One hundred years ago, because of the Victorian Era's propensity to decorate and impress, "false fronts" were often used to decorate and make the building look higher than it was, and thus change its roof line.

This practice continued into this century on a lesser scale. An example of this can be found in the old Northern Light building at 309 King St., which now houses Le Spree. Built in the early 1930's as a temporary structure to replace the three-storey building that had existed here until destroyed by fire, this building is interesting because of its application of a false front onto the front end. (The functional aspect of this one storey building has been given some charms with its two level facade rising above the roof line.)

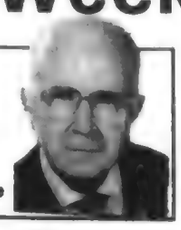
Compare the visual impact this building has on you with the newer Northern Light building just a few doors up. Both are one storey but the visual impact of one is different than the other. How do you feel when you look at them? Think about it and look for other buildings with false fronts. Are they modern or older building? Walk around them to find out how much of their front is a false front!

Which do you prefer — for the roof line to define the edge of the building, or do you like the extension of the facade beyond it? Why?

Now, take a shoe box and use the lid for a roof. Easy, huh? Draw a door and window at one end and cut them out carefully with your knife. Now create a false front of your own design and glue it to your front facade at the roof line. How does this add to the appeal of your building?

Experiment with making a gable roof by folding a sheet of paper lengthwise and sitting it on top. How does this look?

Have fun looking at roofs and experimenting with your own rooflines, and we'll see you next week!



Big weekend at Walt Disney World

Travel Today

Mickey Mouse, who is always full of surprises, has some major ones up his imaginary sleeve.

Just ahead is the 20th anniversary of the launching of Walt Disney World in Florida — one of the world's biggest attractions — to be followed by the inaugural of Euro Disneyland near Paris.

Walt Disney Co., especially since Michael D. Eisner became chief executive in the early 1980s, has been strongly commited to growth and innovation. An estimated 80 million people have made 350 million visits to WDW since 1971.

Between Sept. 28 and Oct. 1, it will be pulling out all the stops at Disney World (at Lake Buena Vista in central Florida) to demonstrate how a 20-year-old venture can renew itself.

If you are near Walt Disney World around the end of this month, you can expect to see unprecedented "illuminations" of the Florida skies each evening.

The kick-off is Saturday, Sept. 28, with a parade of star entertainers (headed by the Spinners), music by marching bands, and a massive bonfire, all at the Disney-MGM Studios — one of the three major theme parks within WDW.

BALLOON LAUNCH

Sunday at WDW begins with the 8 a.m. launch of a 13-storey-high hot-air balloon, in the shape of a Cinderella castle.

Epcot Centre will be the site of the evening's international entertainment, with star performers from the 11 countries that are show-cased in the theme park. An illuminations display, with flashing lasers, will light up the night sky at 10 p.m.

On Monday morning, U.S. President George Bush will deliver a speech at Epcot Centre, to be followed by an air-and-water extravaganza called "Surprise in the Skies." Planners describe it as "a sky full of colorful kites, Disney characters flying para-planes, gargantuan Disney-character balloons, and the world's biggest daytime fireworks display."

At the Magic Kingdom, which was the sole theme park when WDW opened its gates Oct. 1, 1971, what is said to be the biggest Disney pyrotechnical spectacular ever staged will begin at 7:30 p.m.

The climax, at 9 p.m., will be the first public showing of "Spectro-Magic," a new technology for creating colorful animated images, employing a million lights, fibre optics and prismatic dispersion.

BIG NAMES

Other entertainment at the Magic Kingdom on this eve of the 20th anniversary will include the Count Basie orchestra, the Manhattan Transfer (vocal quartet), Patti LaBelle and Lee Greenwood.

Other celebrities who have said they will put in an appearance over the month-end include such personalities as Bryant Gumbel, Regis Philbin, Pat Sajak, Vanna White, Jerry Van Dyke and Bob Keeshan (Captain Kangaroo).

The 20th-anniversary celebrations will wind up on Tuesday morning, Oct. 1, at the Magic Kingdom with a "surprise parade", including new representations of Disney characters more than 12 metres tall, and a fly-over by the Canadian Armed Forces' jets, the Snowbirds. But the new "spectaculars" will be staged daily from then onward.

Visitors arriving by air can choose packages offered by Delta Air Lines (serving Toronto, Ottawa and Montreal), which include airfare, admission to the theme parks, and accommodation at one of the many WDW hotels — all of them efficiently operated and carefully maintained.

Similar packages without airfare are available as well. The package using Disney's Caribbean Beach Resort, with its 2,112 rooms, is probably the most economical.

The area surrounding WDW offers a wide range of hotels and motels, some of them providing free shuttle transportation to and from the them parks. Staying outside WDW, families can buy tickets to individual theme parks, multi-day passes to the three major parks, or the even more inclusive Five-Day Plus Super Pass ($153.15 U.S. for adults, $122.50 for children three to nine).

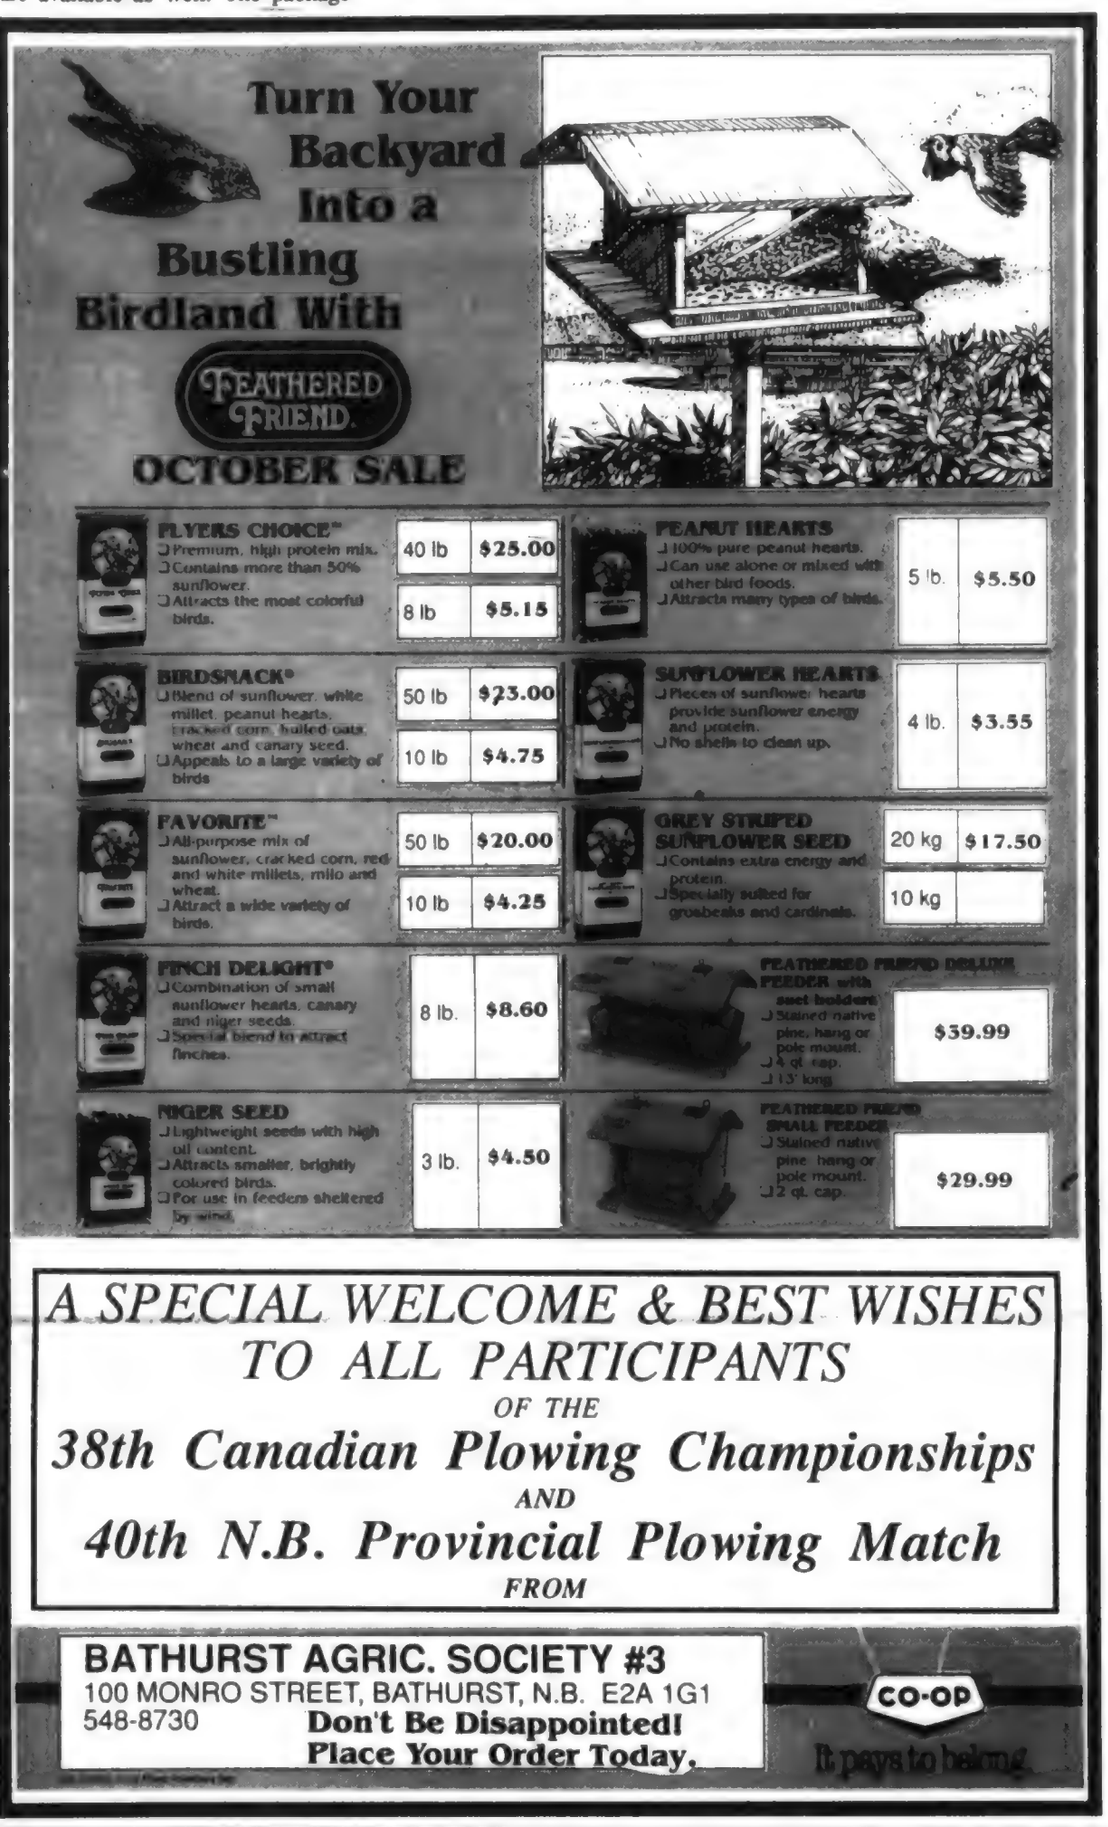
EURO DISNEY

Six months after these celebrations — on April 12, 1992, to be exact — the long-awaited Euro Disneyland will open at Marne-la-Vallee, 26 km southeast of Paris.

Under construction since 1988, it is Europe's second biggest building project (the Channel Tunnel is larger) and will initially cover 140 of the 4,804 acres held by the French-controlled firm in which Walt Disney Co. owns 49 per cent.

To enter Euro Disneyland, visitors will pass underneath the Magic Kingdom Hotel, one of six hotels within the park perimeter, having a total of 5,200 rooms.

CCB holds training seminar

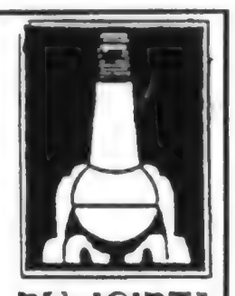


The Canadian Council of the Blind, New Brunswick Division, held an officer training seminar in Bathurst Sept. 13 to 15.

The seminar was funded by the Department of Tourism, Recreation, and Heritage, and approximately 35 representatives from seven clubs throughout the province were in attendance.

The purpose of this seminar was to mainly improve communication skills, both internally and with the media, said a release.

Emphasis was also placed on how to properly conduct a meeting, the importance of integrated recreational activities, and how to become more financially responsible for our own affairs.



The seminar was conducted in both official languages by Consultation St. Pierre, Bathurst resident John Bullen, president of CCB NB Division; Real Savoie, also an area resident, of Tourism, Recreation and Heritage; and Jeannine Duguay, secretary-treasurer of the CCB NB Division.

Authors of book on deconfederation tiresome, dangerous

Book Review

By JACK MCLEOD
Thomson News Service

In his autobiography, the late Eugene Forsey warned: "The gullibility of many English-speaking Canadians, especially academics, for Quebec nationalist fairy tales is the eighth wonder of the world." But are there also people silly enough to believe Canada would be better off without Quebec?

Apparently. There are two academics at the University of Calgary misguided or angry enough to have scrambled together a book arguing just that.

David Bercuson and Barry Cooper are the authors of Deconfederation: Canada Without Quebec (Key Porter Books, 180 pages paperback, $18.95). It's a book that would have caused towering rage in Forsey or in Sir John A. MacDonald, and it has already caused many editorial writers to spill a lot of passionate ink.

It's tempting to think the authors are simply trying to draw Jacques Parizeau's attention to the size of the bill Canada undoubtedly would present to Quebec if she split, but the book's dedication is "a la memoire de Rene Levesque." It's equally tempting to see this work as an elaborate spoof, a humorous send-up of separatist pretensions, but there is no tinge of humor to be found.

Bercuson and Cooper are both transplanted anglophone Quebecers, well tuned-in to Quebec politics and sympathetic to the Parti Quebecois; they cannot be dismissed as ignorant rednecks. This makes them all the more tiresome and dangerous.

FAST AND LOOSE

However, the case they present is a serious one.

There are times when it may be important to confront worst-case scenarios and to think the unthinkable. Although Quebec separatists have been with us since at least the 1870's, and although it stretches credulity to assert that Canada is in a "constitutional crisis" (We are in a language and culture dilemma, but what else is new?), the authors play rather fast and loose with national disintegration.

Their main thrust is that everything would be more easy and jolly if Quebec stopped being annoying and just departed. This is a thesis that will appeal to many simple-minded folk and probably to the Reform party.

Two main arguments are presented.

On the economic side, the authors predictably argue that bilingualism costs the taxpayer money. This is true, yet the current $30-billion deficit and the cumulative $400-billion public debt seen unlikely to vanish if the $1-billion cost of bilingual programs was deducted.

Further, since Quebec receives more in federal transfer payments than she contributes to Ottawa's coffers, we would save money if we simply kicked "la belle province" out of Confederation. Right, and we would save even more money for Ontario and Alberta if we booted out the Atlantic provinces while we're at it. Wouldn't that be swell?

On the political side, Bercuson and Cooper argue that "ethnic nationalism" cannot be made compatible with democracy.

While nationalists champion the collective rights of the group, liberal democracy asserts the primacy and priority of individual rights. If Quebec nationalists reject quantitative majority rule on cultural matters (as most permanent minoririties must and do), it is because they are "undemocratic," we are told, "and wish to rule because they are guardians of a particular way of life. This is why liberal democracy in Canada is in danger."

HOLD IT

Now wait. Hold it just a minute. Do these authors not know that many provinces have been give different and unequal rights from the time of Confederation?

Is constitutional recognition that Quebec is in fact a "distinct society" anything more than an acknowledgement of present and historical truth? Is some generous and imaginative non or asymmetrical federalism out of the question?

If Quebec were to claim provincial jurisdiction over, say culture, communications and broadcasting, should we resort to constitutional niceties, or dynamite over the (expensive) existence of TV Ontario? Do these apparent scholars from Calgary not realize that the Triple-E Senate proposal, so enthusiastically embraced in Alberta, contradicts the principle of majority rule?

Put it another way. Are Bercuson and Cooper actually so innocent that they can dismiss in a casual manner the pain and costs and diminution of divorce, to both parties?

Can they recommend national divorce and the end of the Canadian dream in an angry, over-simplified and vulgar political pamphlet and not expect to earn our contempt?

Have they never taken seriously, as Sir Wilfrid Laurier did, U.S. Senator John C. Calhoun's doctrine of the "double majority", with which Calhoun attempted to avoid the carnage of the American Civil War?

Are they unaware that as wise and conservative a man as Robert Stanfield had positive things to say about the concept of "deux nations"?

As Casey Stengel once lamented about the early bumbling New York Mets, "Doesn't anybody here know how to play this game?"

Of course Canada could exist without Quebec. Of course Quebec might survive as an independent nation. Personally, I am confident I could live with my right arm amputated. But I would not be the better for it.

My country includes Quebec. I hope yours does too, and always will.

Jack McLeod is a professor of political science at the University of Toronto.

Single-vehicle accident in East injures two from Pacquetville

A single-vehicle accident late last week in East Bathurst put two Pacquetville area women in hospital.

A 1989 Ford LTD, driven by Marie St. Germain of Burnsville, left the road around 11:45 a.m. Sept. 19, said Cpl. Peter Tremblay, officer in charge of court and traffic for the Bathurst City Police.

Ms. St. Germain, 46, had been driving West on Bridge Street. She found herself facing an oncoming car as she changed lanes to pass another vechicle.

Swurving back into her lane to avoid a collision, Ms. St. Germain drove her vehicle into the ditch, Cpl. Tremblay said.

Her passenger, 29-year old Diane Duguay of St. Amateur, was hospitalized at Chaleur Regional Hospital. Ms. St. Germain was transferred to hospital in Moncton.

The extent of their injuries are not known, but Cpl. Tremblay said the vehicle sustained about $2,500 in damages.

Milk Fund hopes to expand services

By GLEN VIENNEAU
Northern Light Staff

The Bathurst Area School Milk Fund hopes to expand its services.

"We will try to offer more milk for more needy children this year," president Louise Collette-Bois said during the organization's seventh annual meeting, held Sept. 18.

The organization is expected to distribute 25 units of milk to every local school Monday through Friday, and up to 30 units if the demand warrants. This is part of a program to help encourage healthy nutrition among children attending elementry schools in school districts 41 and 42.

Mrs. Collette-Bois said during the meeting that the organization's main sponsor, the New Brunswick Protestant Orphans Home of Saint John, may increase its funds for the program. This may help to achieve this year's Milk Fund goal of helping more needy children, such as those in kindergarten.

In the past year, the organization increased distribution from 20 units daily per school to 30 units, totalling 25,036 units of milk at a cost of $11,562.69. This increase was to compensate for the local economy's condition, said Mrs. Collette-Bois.

The Bathurst area endured a lengthy strike at Brunswick Mining and Smelting this past winter, which was widely felt in the community, especially when coupled with the effects of a national recession.

The Milk Fund has strictly supplied white milk since its inception. The initial years of the program were mainly financed through fundraising in the community. An annual car wash, along with the help of various organizations in the Bathurst area, has allowed the program to survive in recent years.

The milk is distributed to children who cannot financialy purchase their daily portion of milk. To identify the needy children, a successful program called Protocol was developed last year.

Although the program appears financially healthy for the 1991-92 school year, Mrs. Collette-Bois said the Milk Fund will attempt to get schools to lower the cost of milk used by the program.

Major contributors to the program for 1990-91 included the New Brunswick Protestant Orphans Home ($6,000); Chaleur United Way ($2,200), Bathurst Richelieu Club ($2,000); and Bathurst Rotary Club ($2,000).

The organization has presently a total of $4,982.32 in the bank for the comming year, according to a report by treasurer Betty Cripps.

The future of the organiztion depends upon the government's decision to set up a school milk program of its own. Other provinces in the country presently offer such programs.

Mrs. Collette-Bois said that the organization establish other objectives if such a government program becomes a reality in New Brunswick.

POET'S NOOK

'She' is everywhere

We hear of her on radio,
We hear of her on TV;
We hear of her in conversation
Unpleasantly, but often joyfully.

Our partners have us everyday on their mind,
They place us in every chore;
No matter what, she is at the fore
In trials and in errors.

He talks about his car or his boat,
It goes like this;
He may not be aware
But 'she' is always there.

"I worked at her all day,
She wouldn't start;
I had her checked, got her going,
Finally I was on my way.

"The next day
I had no problems with her,
I ran her 500 miles,
She coasted all the while.

"A few days later,
She let me down again;
A good mechanic found the problem,
I had no trouble with her after.

"My boat is running fine,
I paid a good price for her;
She's in very good condition,
She never let me down."

This is Canadian English;
It is a heritage,
It is their possession
As there is no translation.

TV DIALOGUE

BY TONI REINHOLD

MANOFF'S MOM – Did Dinah Manoff, who plays Carol on "Empty Nest," star in another series before it? Is she the daughter of Lee Remick? How old is she? – I.T., Canton, Ohio

Dinah Manoff is the daughter of actress and director Lee Grant. Born 33 years ago in New York City, Manoff began her professional career in a public-television production of "The Great Cherub Knitwear Strike." From 1978-79, she played Elaine Lefkowitz in the highly acclaimed comedy "Soap." She received a Tony Award in 1980 for her work on Broadway in Neil Simon's "I Ought To Be in Pictures," a role she reprised in the film version opposite Walter Matthau.

She has starred in a number of TV movies and miniseries, as well as in such feature films as "Ordinary People," "Grease" and "Staying Together," which her mother directed. Manoff has confessed that being directed by her mother was tough. "It was very hard for me, and very easy for her," Manoff admits. "I went right back to being 16. I can't stand her telling me what to do. It's just impossible for me! She gives me a piece of direction, and all I hear is, 'Clean up your room.' But the work we did together was very good, very successful, because she knows how to allow me to be free to express myself artistically."

Today, in addition to starring in "Empty Nest," Manoff has her own production company.

POINT OF 'ORDER' – I recently watched an old movie called "Law and Order," and the TV listing said Ronald Reagan was the star. I am sure it was Audie Murphy who starred in the film. Am I correct? – L.H., Stockton, Calif.

There were two versions of this Western, but neither starred Audie Murphy. The 1932 film starred Walter Huston, Harry Carey and Raymond Hatton. The 1953 remake starred Ronald Reagan, Dorothy Malone, Alex Nico and Preston Foster.

Grapes' latest doesn't disappoint but weak material stands out...

Grapes of Wrath--These Days

As a Grapes fan of earlier days, I expected somewhat more. By no means does These Days really disappoint, but the few stand-out tracks are sadly swathed in a blanket of so-so tunes that should have been so much better.

Could be Hooper, Kane and company are simply settling in for some easy sailing now that the Grapes of Wrath has become a name to be respected in the pop world.

True, the radio favorite "I Am Here" is a lesson in marketability (and a fine song indeed), but it seems to me the Grapes have done far better as an independent-minded outfit barely teetering on the periphery of the mainstream.

No matter. Check out "A Fishing Tale" for a refreshing glimpse at the other side of the coin. Aside from a clever "splash" sound effect near the beginning of the song, the aggressive guitar assault and clever lyricism prove there is trademark substance to be found here.

Another example is "No Reason," a smooth, airy ballad that simply features singer/guitarist Kevin Kane and pianist Vincent Jones at their best.

Listeners hoping for a more ample helping of Grapes talent may find the rest of the album somewhat banal. This is especially true for those who hooked into the groove when Peace of Mind scored a major chart victory.

These Days is not in the same category. It will take a few extra plays to discover further wealth in this treasure chest of scarce goodies.

(Capitol/EMI)

Candy Dulfer--Saxuality

If Prince gave up the guitar and took up saxophone, he would sound like Candy Dulfer. One supposes he would also give his first sax-induced release a similar title.

While it is unusual to hear a saxophone at the heart of such funky, bass-heavy songs as Dulfer offers, it seems to be a formula that works. The Purple One must surely be envious.

And well he should be.

Something by the name of Ulco Bed wrote or co-wrote most of the songs, and he (or she) also co-produced the album with Dulfer. And he (or she!) is certainly to be commended for crafting such an interesting blend of jazz and funk fusion.

For the most part, the songs are upbeat and playful, particularly in the case of "So What," written by jazz great and horn god Miles Davis.

The rest, as earlier stated, is a great mix of jazz and funk that should keep the toes tapping and head bobbing.

J. L. CONVENIENCE VIDEO REVIEW

By MICHAEL J. BOURGUIGNON
Northern Light Staff

True Colors

James Spader (White Palace) and John Cusack (The Grifters) aren't about to let such a trivial thing as friendship get in the way of their politics.

As roommates at law school, the pair gets off to a rocky start, but their relationship eventually blossoms into something akin to brotherhood.

That's until Cusack drops out of law school to run for Congress. He uses every dirty trick in the book to win the election, and it's up to the freshly-graduated Spader to take him down.

It's a superbly acted and unsettling story of loyalty gone awry, and of the pains of betrayal.

The story goes full circle, starting with election night, moving back into the buildup events, and then resuming the action as Cusack awaits the news of his initial victory and ultimate defeat.

This format is executed smoothly, and takes nothing away from the story itself. Instead, it enriches it, as does the chemistry between Cusack and Spader — both fine actors and a very impressive team.

Awakenings

Robert DeNiro (Goodfellas) performs brilliantly in this fact-based film about a patient who wakes up after spending years in a catatonic state.

Robin Williams (Dead Poets Society) is equally moving as the optimistic doctor who brings him back through experimental drug treatment.

Soon, the optimistic and courageous doctor has an entire ward of patients triumphantly rising from their wheelchairs, walking and talking for the very first time.

This is one of those films that should come with a complimentary box of kleenex. It is a sensitive and often very sad look at the fragility of life, not only in the physical sense but more specifically in terms of the mental capacities most take for granted.

Highly recommended.

Highway 101 are back with a Bang

Highway 101--Bing Bang Boom

After a successful career with Highway 101, Paulette Carlson decided she wanted to quit and try out on a solo career. Well, Highway 101 is back with a difference. This time their back with Bing Bang Boom, that's the title of their current album, and the difference is their new lead singer Nikki Nelson.

A greatest hits album wrapped up the band's first phase, and Bing Bang Boom shows that they've retained their confident artistry. The title is the first single to be pulled from the album and is also a successful video.

The group pretty well picks up where they left off. Nelson's delivery comes across like she's been performing for the major part of her life; her capabilities show on all 11 tracks, and especially on her cover of Tammy Wynette's 1973 hit "Till I Get It Right."

Other key cuts include the ballad "River of Tears," the result of a badly broken heart, and "Baby, I'm Missing You" which has a bouncy beat with the usual Highway 101 clean guitar solo. They are all good selections, but my favorite is the second single "The Blame." What I like about it is the line, "It's not whether you win or lose/It's how you lay the blame."

BIRTHDAYS

Hiram King Williams, one of the most charismatic figures in country music, was born in Georgia, Alabama on Sept. 17, 1923.

Ironically, the last song he recorded was "I'll Never Get Out Of This World Alive." Hank Williams Sr. died New Year's Day 1953.

Until next week, keep whistling.

Merle Haggard takes pleasure in complexity

BY LYNN HOOGENBOOM

The 25th Annual Country Music Association Awards" air Wednesday, Oct. 2 on CBS, and ordinarily we'd be putting in our bid for an interview with Reba McEntire, who is hosting the show, or multiple nominees Vince Gill, Alan Jackson or Garth Brooks.

Merle Haggard

But this year, a nominee for the ultimate accolade, induction into the Country Music Hall of Fame, seemed to offer the most interesting perspective. He's Merle Haggard, who has garnered 38 CMA nominations over the years, more than any other male performer.

"There are a few awards that really mean something, and the CMA is one," he says. "(Winning) will probably enhance one's career to no end. I think it helped me a lot."

Although Haggard is still going strong, he isn't nominated nearly as often as he once was. "After you're established, and they've already given you all the awards they can give you, they delete you from the voting, I think," he says.

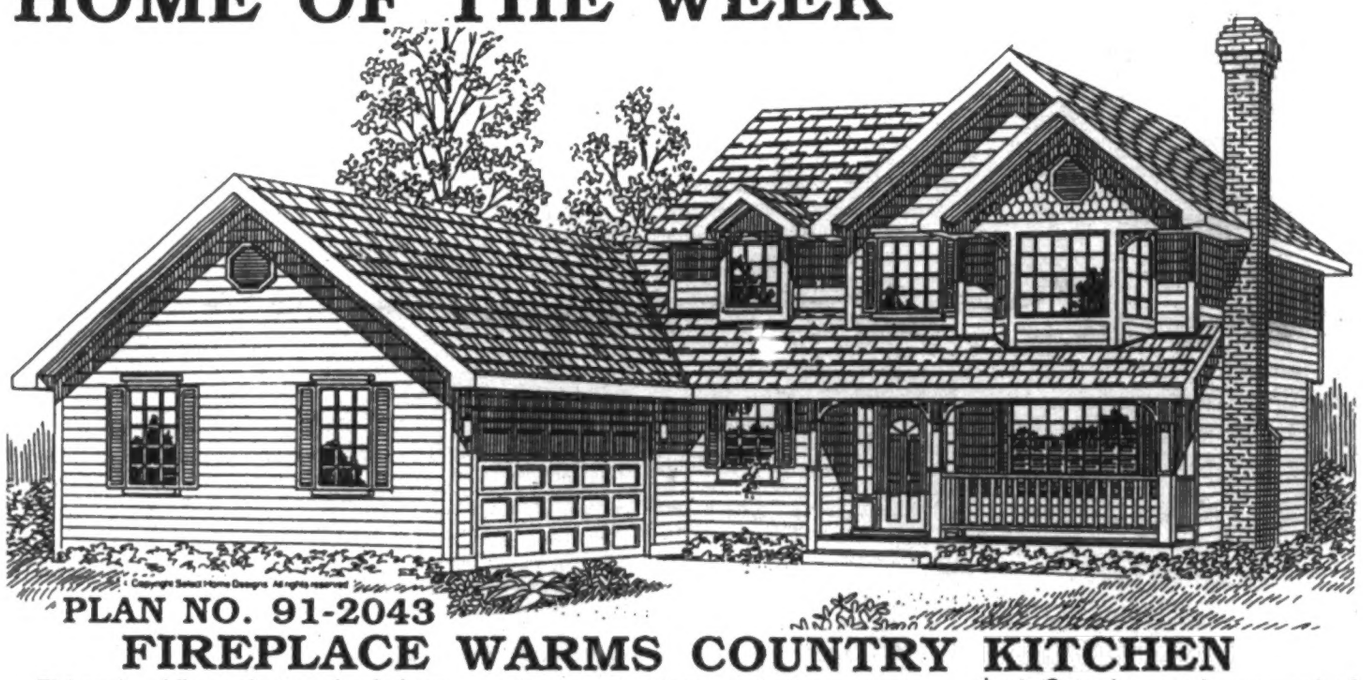
He doesn't necessarily think it's a bad thing. "Otherwise Elvis would win every year," he says. "The awards shows are for the young people, the most creative artists, people on the cutting edge."

Haggard, 54, has been in the public eye since 1965, but he is still in many ways an enigma. He's country music's most eloquent spokesperson for traditional values, but he's also a fierce rebel who identifies strongly with underdogs. Fans still argue about whether his 1969 song "Okie From Muskogee" was meant to be taken seriously or tongue-in-cheek, and Haggard takes pride in the fact that it can be interpreted both ways.

His musical style is pure country. Yet, his own favorite music is jazz guitar, and he has always liked classical music.

"I've never really deciphered the difference that categorizes music," he says. "I don't know how you can say that the Allman Brothers is a pop act and Bing Crosby is a pop act, when they have nothing in common."

He's a successful recording artist who despises record companies. "You know, record companies traditionally don't pay artists," he says. "So I just thought the heck with it. I'm going to put out my own record (he's currently working on a live album), and I'm going to sell it myself and let them sue me."



Generally, when we know as much about a performer as we do about Haggard, it's easy to guess where they stand politically. But Haggard ...

"Maybe I'm a good politician," he teases. "I'll tell you what: I'm an American; I'm not a satisfied American. I think America needs a lot of work."
